U.S.-Canada Relations 'Near Catastrophe'

WASHINGTON (CP) — The breakdown in trade talks between the U.S. and Canada may have set the stage for the worst period of relations between the two countries in a decade.

Although government officials in Ottawa and Washington have been ordered to play down publicly the seriousness of the situation, both Canadian and U.S. officials say privately the outlook for Canada-U.S. relations this year is bleak, to say the least.

"I think we're in a situation that borders on catastrophe," one key official, who is known for moderation in his private and public statements, said Friday.

With few exceptions, officials on both sides believe that meaningful negotiations will not resume until after a Canadian federal election is held, probably this year.

The Financial Times Friday reported rumors circulating in Ottawa and Washington saying the Nixon administration is considering a seven per cent excise tax on cars imported from Canada.

If true, it would mean the effective end of the 1965 Canada-United States auto trade agreement and a possible recession in the auto industry here.

Speculation about the tax surfaced when the Journal of Commerce, a New York publication, ran a front page story out of Washington Friday that this is what Treasury Secretary John B. Connally has up his sleeve to bring Canada into line.

Officials here are guarded in their comments, but one said "this would be one of the tactics Mr. Connally might use to force a complete revision of the auto pact."

The tax used to be levied on all cars sold in the U.S. but was removed as part of President Nixon's new economic policy announced last Aug. 15.

If it is re-imposed on Canadian cars only, it would, in Ottawa's view, constitute an effective abrogation of the auto pact, and be contrary to rules under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

In Ottawa today, Trade Minister Pepin said the reports are "very speculative."

"There are plenty of other tactics they could use to force revision of the pact," Pepin said.

Mining Future Cloudy

The outlook for British Columbia's mining industry in 1972 is not good, Mines Minister Frank Richter told the legislature Friday.

He also charged New Democratic Party tax policies for the industry would drive investment capital away from the province.

Richter told the legislature mining in B.C. is a very competitive business which is not in a preferred position in world markets.

"Threats of punitive tax measures and takeover of the mining industry by an NDP government is the surest way of driving investment capital from the province and is a direct threat to the 50,000 more workers supported by this industry," Richter said.

Investment confidence in the provincial mining industry appears to be weakening, said Richter. The number of claims staked in 1971 dropped to 64,500 from 84,665 in 1969.

DRILLING DOWN

Diamond drilling activity dropped 25 per cent last year and is expected to drop further next year. Skilled mining engineers and professionals are starting to appear on Canada Manpower's unemployment lists, and five major companies have withdrawn their operations from B.C. in recent months.

The total value of mining production increased in 1971 to more than $521 million only because of dramatic increases in Kaiser Coal production.

"But for the Kaiser coal operation, mineral production value in British Columbia in 1971 would have faced a serious decline."

Richter said 1972 should see coal production values to increase almost $20 million to an estimated total of $70 million.

ONTARIO TOPPED

Despite an uncertain investment climate, he said, B.C. received more revenue from mining in 1970 than did Ontario.

B.C.'s revenue share was nearly $49 million compared with Ontario's income of $26.6 million. Yet B.C.'s total value of mineral production was

TWISTED WRECK of a CNR freight train lies mangled on its side after 20-car derailment blocked the Montreal-Toronto line near Morrisburg, Ont., Friday. Two explosions, which sent flames 100 feet high, apparently originated in a tanker car carrying propane gas. No injuries were reported.

'WAC WANTS STRIKES'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Conservative leader Derril Warren said Friday Premier Bennett wants strikes and mass demonstrations to result from recent changes in provincial legislation.

In a speech to the Monarchist League of Canada, Warren said the changes were "conceived on the basis of providing an election issue and converting human passions from debate to inflamed animosity."

The changes he referred to are the limitation on salary increases for teachers and what he called bargaining in bad faith with doctors over medical fee increases and inadequate provincial grants to municipalities.

The legislation limiting teachers' incomes was "bad, discriminatory and a cleverly connived election issue" and a denial of basic democratic rights.

On medicare, Warren accused the government of negotiating in bad faith over a rise in doctors' fees after doctors agreed in 1971 to a moratorium on a fee increase.

Negotiations had broken off and Premier Bennett had created "a further divisive force within society" by not meeting and bargaining collectively, he said.

"He feels that by pitting the rich doctor against the poor taxpayer, he will secure the vote of the largest group."

Warren said the government had raised grants to municipalities by only 5.8 per cent since 1957, but total municipal expenditures had expanded threefold. This was "a clever divisive manoeuvre which pits the taxpayer against the municipality."

Mediation Report Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Union leaders representing electronic technicians on strike at government airports awaited receipt of a mediator's proposed settlement today to start an immediate vote of the 2,200 members.

The unusual decision to canvass the membership immediately on receipt of the mediator's proposal came after walkouts by some of the union's designated personnel — those forbidden by law to walk off their jobs in the interest of public safety.

The package put together by mediator Gordon Simmons remained a secret Friday as the industrial relations expert from Queen's University talked into the night with representatives of the government's treasury board, the body bargaining with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Simmons told IBEW representatives that he hoped to be able to put his proposals before them sometime today, but could not say whether this would be morning or afternoon.

PROMISES ACTION

William Andreeff, president of IBEW Local 2228, said the mediator's package would be presented as quickly as possible to the full membership, without any recommendation for or against adoption by the leadership.

"We'll not pull our men off the street until we've got an agreement," he added.

Any package would have to be acceptable to treasury board before there could be hope of the strike, which hinges mainly on salary demands, being settled, Andreeff said. But the mediator's proposals would be sent out for a vote by the IBEW membership "no matter what the other side says."

New Islands To Appear Off Coast

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — British Columbians can expect two new islands off their coast, but it won't be for a million years or so.

That's the word from a team of scientists who recently surveyed the sea bottom in the northeastern Pacific Ocean.

The scientists from the United States, Canada and Japan, who spent five months off the Pacific Coast, have announced that two well-known seamounts — Cobb and Bear — may eventually rise above the surface and become islands.

The survey also found sediment deposits off the coasts of Washington and Oregon that suggest the presence of oil.

The expedition was conducted by the U.S. commerce department's national oceanic and atmospheric administration in co-operation with two Canadian and three Japanese geo-physicists.

The two Canadians were Dr. S. P. Srivastava and Ron Macnab of Bedford Institute here.

Douglas Elvers of Leesburg, Va., the project's chief scientists, said the team found a trench filled with sediment, mainly sand and silt, more than a mile thick.

The trench lies at the base of the continential slope off the coasts of Washington and Oregon, more than 1½ miles below the surface of the sea.

Mr. Elvers said in Washington the two seamounts may eventually rise above the sea either through volcanic growth "or general uplift of the rises."

Limit Urged On St. Joe's

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A confidential study prepared by a provincial agency suggests St. Joseph's Hospital be limited to 500 beds.

At the same time the study ignores about four acres of land being purchased for expansion alongside the hospital for $900,000.

The report was prepared by a team from the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service at the request of a committee of advisors to the Capital regional hospital board.

Intended as a survey of obsolete beds at the hospital as a preliminary to planning renovations and expansion, the study suggests "capping" the hospital at about 500 beds basically on the present site.

General planning in recent years had proposed St. Joseph's grow from 430 beds to about 620 and Royal Jubilee from 533 to about 650.

500 LIMIT

The study sees limiting St. Joseph's to about 500 beds involving a good deal more than adding 70 beds. Major renovations would replace the hospital's ancient X wing with a new five-storey structure and a floor would be added to certain four-storey sections.

One "package" outlined for updating the hospital would cost about $6.5 million and another would cost almost $17.5 million.

But the study says nothing about the land alongside, which is finally being bought to allow expansion after almost three years of bickering between the city of Victoria, provincial government, regional hospital board and the public society taking over the hospital.

Purchase of the approximately four acres, which includes Humboldt Street and part of the St. Ann's Academy grounds, is in the final stages of documentation. The cost is almost $900,000.

NECESSARY

The study by itself raises the question: is this land purchase necessary after all?

The paradoxical aspect to the current situation is that on one hand a study by a provincial agency ignores the land while, on the other, the provincial government has indicated it will pay a 60 per cent share in the cost of the land acquisition.

Speculation is that the land will be used — to build extended care beds. The capital regional board has been having trouble negotiating the right price for a site off Helmcken Road near the Trans-Canada Highway where

LIBERAL CHIEF QUITS IN ONTARIO

ROBERT NIXON

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Nixon today announced his resignation as Ontario Liberal party leader, saying the last two provincial elections have shown that "my particular qualities do not precisely fill the bill."

Nixon made it official in a speech prepared for presentation to the Ontario party's annual convention at noon.

The 43-year-old farmer-teacher from St. George, Ont., said in the speech he will stay on until a new leader is chosen. No date has been set for a leadership convention.

Nixon, who won the leadership just prior to the 1967 provincial election, called on the party's executive board to establish a committee to make "definite plans for a leadership convention."

He said the arrangements should not interfere with the federal election, expected this year.

Contenders for the leadership are considered to be Vernon Singer, deputy party leader from Toronto, Donald Deacon, member of the legislature for York Centre, Philip Givens, former mayor of Toronto and legislature member for Toronto York-Forest Hill, and Patrick Reid, legislature member for Rainy River.

James Bullbrook, Sarnia lawyer and outspoken Liberal front-bencher in the legislature, was also in the running but has indicated he will not seek the leadership.

Smoking Grass 'Not Harmful'

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. federal health officials told Congress Friday that their studies so far showed no unhealthy effects from the moderate use of marijuana by normal adults.

The experts even found that preliminary surveys showed that chronic users in Greece and Jamaica felt no ill effects from marijuana — a finding that surprised Dr. Robert Peterson, the U.S. national institute of mental health expert who compiled the report.

But the 276-page NIMH report — issued under law in the name of U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Elliot Richardson — did not give marijuana a completely clean bill of health.

Like alcohol and other mind bending drugs, marijuana adversely affects driving skills, including the ability to put on the brakes in a hurry. In addition, it can cause psychotic breakdowns in people who are already unstable and retard the emotional development of young teen-agers.

QUESTIONS REMAIN

Moreover, the effect of the heavy use of marijuana, over long periods of time is "one of the biggest question marks," said Dr. William Bunney, the new director of NIMH's division of narcotic addiction and drug abuse.

NIMH director Dr. Bertram Brown, said "the current state of scientific and medical evidence" does not justify making the use of marijuana legal.

"But," he added, "I have personally felt for a long time that the penalties for the use and possession of marijuana are much too severe and much out of keeping with knowledge about its harmfulness. I have been strongly in favor of decriminalization, but not for the total removal of penalties."

By "decriminalization," Brown said that he meant "penalties that do not jail people."

USE INCREASING

The HEW secretary's report said that marijuana use is widespread in the U.S. and, contrary to estimates made in last year's report, is on the increase. As many as 90 per cent of some groups of high school students have used marijuana. Peterson said that its use in some isolated cases

BOTTLERS BACK OFF REFUNDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifteen brands of empty soft drink cans will no longer be refunded at bottle depots in the province, William Barter, general manager of Pacific Reclamation Ltd., announced Friday.

Barter said the move is being taken because bottlers are withdrawing from the depot system.

A spokesman for one major bottler said his company was withdrawing from the system because proposed amendments to the Litter Act will force retailers to take back cans.

The brands affected by Friday's announcement are Coca-Cola, Fresca, Fanta, Tab, Sprite, Pepsi, Diet Pepsi, Mountain Dew, Schweppes, Orange Crush, Hires, Royal Crown, America Dry, 7-Up and Diet 7-Up.

Pensioners May Soon Flock to Ghost Town

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Vancouver brothers have purchased the abandoned mining town of Bralorne, 110 miles north of here, and plan to turn it into a residential community for people who can get along without full-time jobs.

Frank Whiting, a geological engineer and president of Marmot Enterprises Ltd., announced Friday he and his brothers bought the townsite from Bralorne Can-Fer Resources Ltd. for a price "somewhere in the $100,000-to-$200,000 range."

He said work will begin within 10 days on rehabilitating many of the 200 buildings in the 1,400-acre townsite, which was a going concern until last fall, when the gold mine closed. Population at one time approached 3,000.

"It would be low-cost housing for pensioners or people in similar financial situations," said Whiting, who created Marmot Enterprises for the purpose with his brothers, both of whom are in the construction business.

"They would be provided with part-time jobs in running the community, from repairing things to collecting garbage to maintaining the water to being the librarian."

Whiting said some of the larger buildings, such as the school and apartment blocks, could be used by educational or charitable groups as temporary headquarters for outdoor holidays.

"Bralorne is a complete town," he said. "It has all the general amenities of life, although a little bit old style and a little bit run-down."

An earlier plan by a group of young persons to buy the townsite and create a model community of craftsmen and environmentalists was abandoned last December when the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. refused financial backing.

Whiting estimated Bralorne would have an eventual permanent population of about 500.

"It's going to cost $500,000 to $1 million to improve the water and sewer systems and do the other work," he said. "We are now in the process of acquiring investors."

He said his company is asking the provincial government for permission to subdivide the townsite so the lots can be sold to individuals.

"Some of the housing is worth $20,000, and some of it $2,000," he said.

He said he expected residents would be paid prevailing wages for their work in the community. Eventually, Bralorne could develop into a self-governing community with its own elected council.

Heath Under Fire

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's grimmest industrial crisis in 25 years inspired a howl of opposition criticism of Prime Minister Edward Heath and his government today.

Power cuts resulting from a five-week coal miners' strike blacked out 15 to 20 per cent of the country. Homes, stores, theatres and other public places were without heat.

Firms throughout the country laid off thousands of workers in anticipation of tighter government curbs next week. The full effect of the curbs could be a shutdown of half the nation's industry, throwing millions out of work.

Heath interrupted a weekend at his official country residence to return to London for crisis conferences with Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, Trade and Industry Secretary John Davies and Employment Secretary Robert Carr.

only one-third as much as Ontario's.

Richter indicated the industry already pays enough taxes without having to be subjected to royalties proposed by the NDP.

In other remarks, he said the federal government has granted 221 petroleum and natural exploration gas permits off the B.C. caost, covering more than 14.96 million acres.

This, despite federal Environment Minister Jack Davis's announcement Ottawa will withdraw an exploration permit issued to Petrotar Development Ltd. in waters south of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

DOUBLE CLAIM

Richter said all B.C. permits were suspended July 28, 1970. At the time, the government said it suspended the permits because holders were not paying fees to B.C.

They were paying fees only to the federal government. Both jurisdictions claim rights to offshore minerals.

Richter suggested Ottawa allows oil exploration and drilling to continue to a great degree in eastern Canada but talks tough on pollution control on the west coast.

"One law for eastern Canada and another law for the west. Despite the facts I have just quoted, the federal government would have the people of British Columbia believe that they are opposed to offshore exploration and drilling."

He said federal drilling policy is creating "two distinct classes of Canadian provinces."

Rape Charge Remanded

A Saanich man was charged with rape in Victoria provincial court today and was remanded for 30 days to Riverview mental hospital for psychiatric examination.

David K. Henderson, 25, of 2594 Penrhyn, was accused of having unlawful sexual intercourse with a woman Tuesday.

Medical testimony in court today indicated Henderson suffers from schizophrenic tendencies.

He was remanded until March 10.

Musician Plays Sorrowful Tune

Lack of opportunity and high costs are making it difficult for Canadian musicians to produce recordings of their own work, a local musician said today.

Peter Marks, 33, of 2346 Sooke Road, said the music industry is too concerned with making money, instead of encouraging more production by Canadian artists. He said he and his group, the Marksmen, have not been able to produce locally a recording of their work because it would have cost them too much.

He said he was finally able to produce one record by doing most of the work himself. The cost came to between $800 and $900, he said, for 500 copies of the record. He has not made money on the record's sales.

Marks said if he were to follow the established practice of producing a record through the regular commercial channels, the cost would be likely run to about $700.

The first step, he said, is to either write or buy an original composition, since recording a song that has already been recorded is much more expensive than an original.

Musicians must be hired, and must be paid at the going rate for members of the Musicians Union, even if the group is made up of friends or relatives. For four or five musicians, the cost would be a minimum of about $540.

OTHER COSTS

Studio costs, including sound mixing and printing a mastertape, can run well over $200, Marks said, and a recording company hasn't even been approached yet.

The usual case, he said, is that the companies say the product is "not quite good enough" but that they will cut 1,000 copies at a cost of 50 cents each, totalling $500.

Provided sales are good, the 1,000 copies may go at $1 each, yielding a net loss of about $200.

Marks and his men play about four or five nights a week at club engagements in Victoria. He says "we do pretty well," but that the group has to work hard just to stay busy.

Another part of the problem, he said, is that some radio stations will play a recording by a Canadian group and will not announce the name of the group over the air.

The radio and television stations, he said, will not produce local shows for Canadian artists because they say they cannot afford it.

NOT SHORT

"I seriously think that Canada should take a look, a strong look, at what is really happening to Canadian talent. Canada is not short on songwriters and good professional entertainers," Marks said.

"I also think that Canadian talent would be on its way up if the record companies, recording studios, musicians union, etc. look more towards the talent end of rather than the money end."

He said more Canadian recording companies are starting up as a result of the Canadian content regulations for radio and television. These companies, he said, are taking advantage of the situation for higher profits.

a 225-bed extended care hospital is proposed.

That deal has been held up by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's objections to the land cost. But Loffmark had a major hand in negotiations which led to the land purchase alongside St. Joseph's.

Speculation is that part or all of the extended care beds earmarked for the Helmcken site will be shifted to the land alongside St. Joseph's.

Extended care beds are for chronically-ill patients, mostly elderly, who require long-term nursing care.

QUEEN PICNICS AT RIVER BANK

AYUDHYA (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth went on a two-hour picnic pleasure cruise along the Chao Phya River through this ancient Thailand capital today.

Although the sun shone for the first time since her state visit began Thursday, the Queen was obviously less relaxed than during a visit to Bangkok University Friday.

High-powered police boats escorting the Queen's steamboat zoomed along the waterway as crowds on the banks cheered and beat drums. Officials blew whistles and shouted orders as they tried to bring order to the motley pursuing flotilla.

The steamer stopped near the bank for lunch as singing boatmen, women in green silk dresses with orange sashes or yellow with green sashes and men in blue or red, serenaded the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne.

Afterwards, the British royal party drove back to Bangkok, 45 miles away.

has spread to junior high and elementary school students.

Even with the increased use, scientists have found "little evidence that light to moderate use of cannabis (marijuana) has deleterious physical effects," the report stated.

Among the harmful effects from the heavy use of marijuana are a high frequency of bronchitis and asthma. But studies failed to find changes in the lung tissue of marijuana smokers that have been found in tobacco users.

In addition, studies have failed to turn up a higher incidence of abnormal chromosomes among marijuana users than the general population. But the government report warned women in the childbearing years against using any drug that has the potential of affecting chromosomes.

The report also found that marijuana, especially when smoked by inexperienced users, can cause minor depressions and panic reactions. It does not, however, trigger serious psychotic episodes in normal adults, although it can throw a borderline case over the edge.

Furthermore, studies in animals showed that it takes a gigantic dose of marijuana — up to 25 times greater than humans take — to kill.

The report stated that marijuana decreases pressure on the eye, "which may have therapeutic implications" in the treatment of glaucoma.

CANADIAN BOOK INDUSTRY GETS $1.7M OTTAWA BOOST

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's struggling book industry will receive a $1.7 million boost from the federal government this year, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier announced Friday.

He outlined a six-point aid program to the annual meeting of federal cultural agencies, which include the CBC, Canada Council and Canadian Radio-Television Commission, and said the total money injection represents at least one-third of the Canadian book publishing total yearly turnover, excluding textbooks.

Mr. Pelletier said the program is "only a beginning" but necessary "because of the urgent nature of the difficulties being faced by the Canadian publishers."

WOULD DOUBLE OUTPUT

It would double production Canadian books, not counting school textbooks, in five years.

The program includes;

—$500,000 increase to $1 million a year in direct grants from the Canada Council to publishers to permit publication of more quality Canadian works;

—$500,000 for the purchase of Canadian books for free distribution in Canada and abroad;

—$500,000 to aid the export of Canadian books, with $400,000 earmarked for establishing distribution centres in the United States, Britain and Europe and $100,000 for Canadian participation at book fairs and exhibitions;

—$215,000 in Canada Council grants, up from $115,000 in 1971-72, for translation of Canadian works "to encourage exchanges between the two main linguistic communities of Canada";

—Publication by private companies of "unofficial works on the government's behalf" for sale on the regular book market;

—Creation of a standing committee on publishing to work out an over-all policy of co-ordination.

Reaction from book publishers was warm.

"The government has taken an important step in recognizing that book publishing plays a major role in our cultural survival," said Peter Martin, head of Peter Martin Associates of Toronto.

W. H. Clarke of Clarke-Irwin Ltd., Toronto, said he is very pleased with the aid.

"I don't see this as the start of a perpetual subsidy. These measures, with those of the province of Ontario, make it possible to stimulate and create a Canadian body of literature."

Jacques Hebert of Montreal, president of Les Editions du Jour, said the program outlined by Mr. Pelletier is a start in elaborating a policy about publishing.

"These measures are just the beginning of a deeper concern for publishing, a recognition that it is not just a business but an instrument of culture."

Mr. Pelletier said in an interview after his speech that his department had received requests from 400-500 libraries so small they cannot buy books. "Now we will be able to do something to help them."

In his address, he said the measures were necessary "because Canadian publishing houses are finding it difficult to survive."

Are you beginning to think this way about funerals?

☐ I think many people buying a funeral end up paying far more than originally planned, possibly because they are emotionally bewildered at the time.

☐ Money spent on elaborate funerals would be better spent among the living.

☐ I want my funeral, including cremation or burial, to cost under $300.

☐ I think embalming, for purposes of displaying the body, is an unnecessary indignity.

☐ I am repelled by putting a body on display with the face made up to look "natural".

☐ I favour a closed coffin, a private cremation or burial, with perhaps a memorial service after, for friends and relatives.

☐ I feel strongly enough about these matters that I would like to support an organization dedicated to promoting simpler, less costly, more dignified funeral practices.

☐ I would like to receive a simple plan which lets me record my wishes in privacy, so that they may be filed with a non-profit organization I know will carry out my wishes after death. This also saves my next-of-kin from making these difficult decisions under emotional stress.

If you feel this way you are not alone. Over 60,000 people now belong to the Memorial Society of B.C. If you move, your membership can be easily transferred to other societies throughout North America at little or no cost.

DRIP-DRY 'FBI' IRKS HOOVER

WASHINGTON (WP) — J. Edgar Hoover is getting a bit possessive about the FBI's initials. Or so, at least, thinks Fabrication Bril International

For the past four years, Bril, a French firm that manufactures both women's and men's clothing (its designer, Pierre Cardin) has been trying to win approval from U.S. patent authorities to use the trademark "Fabrication Bril International/FBI" on the inside of clothing sold in the U.S.

At every step of the way, it has been fought by the other FBI—the law-enforcement variety — which claims the exclusive right to the initials FBI in the country.

The FBI says that the clothing firm's initials are "likely to deceive and confuse the public . . . into believing that the goods were so marked with the approval of the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

The director doesn't like that idea. According to T. Hayward Brown, chief of the patent section of the U.S. justice department, his office's legal challenge to the Bril trademark was approved personally by J. Edgar Hoover.

Welfare: Any Job Or Else

TORONTO (CP) — Officials today studied a massive report on Ontario welfare which sounded a note of alarm in saying that "a teeming generation of youth" is pouring into the labor market at a time when employment is at its lowest ebb.

The report noted that 46 per cent of general assistance recipients are under the age of 25 and that single persons are going on welfare rolls at a higher rate than heads of families.

But there is little evidence of persons being on welfare because they don't want to work, said lawyer Barry Swadron of Toronto, who headed a government-appointed committee which held public hearings in Kitchener, Hamilton, Ottawa, Toronto and Sudbury.

Key points in the 208-page report released Friday:

—A person has no moral right, nor has he a legal right, to support from public funds.

—A single person on welfare should accept any job he can get, even if the pay is low and he is overeducated for the job.

—An employable person who refuses to accept any reasonable employment should lose welfare rights.

—Every welfare recipient who is able to work should be required to register at a Canada Manpower centre.

NEED ALLOWANCES

—Persons on welfare who volunteer for training programs should receive additional allowances.

—One provincial department should assume over-all responsibility for Ontario's manpower policy.

—The provincial government should bring its subsidized retraining programs into line with employment demands.

—Employable persons should be eligible for only an "unemployment allowance" and unemployable persons should receive a "living allowance." Those potentially employable but requiring training would be paid a "development allowance."

—Moving people about Ontario, placing them in jobs where jobs were available, was ruled out. Relocation difficulties would be "insuperable."

However, a recipient who voluntarily travelled outside his municipality should be eligible for travel costs and continued general help so long as he is a person in need, making reasonable efforts to obtain employment.

'Hoax' Author Besieged With Own Life Offers

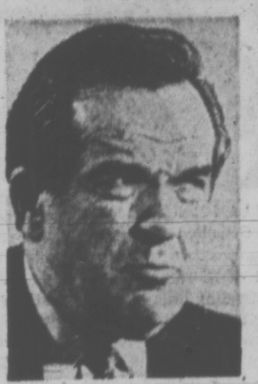
NEW YORK — Clifford Irving, the man who wrote the disputed "autobiography" of billionaire Howard Hughes, has been besieged with offers to write his own autobiography, says a friend of the author.

(Life magazine Friday called Irving's book on Hughes a "hoax" and said it would not publish a serialization of it as it had planned to do.)

James Sherwood, a novelist who minds Irving's sons Barnaby, 2, and Ned, 4, in an interview, said "there are publishers who are trying to reach him for more money.

It's only natural," Sherwood said. "Irving's story is worth more than Howard Hughes."



CAPP

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. — Cartoonist Al Capp pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of attempted adultery and was fined $500 plus court costs.

Capp, creator of the comic strip "Li'l Abner," originally was charged with sodomy, indecent exposure and attempted adultery after an incident with a married University of Wiscon-Eau Claire coed last April 1. The two other charges were dropped when Capp pleaded guilty to the attempted adultery charge at the arraignment Friday.

The coed said she came to Capp's motel room at his request to talk over the political atmosphere on campus before he was to speak but that once she was there he made advances, authorities said.

CHICAGO — A convict has told Illinois officials investigating credit card frauds his scheme was so successful that four companies once offered to pay him to stop cheating.

"They asked me to stop defrauding them and each company would pay me $150 a week," said Edmund Bryson in videotape testimony before the Illinois legislative commission Thursday.

"I knew their operation so well that they knew they couldn't stop me and guess they figured the $150 a week would be less than I would steal from them."

HOLLYWOOD — "A baby is something I've always wanted," said dancer Juliet Prowse in disclosing that she is pregnant but has no intentions of marrying the child's father.

Miss Prowse, a former fiancee of Frank Sinatra, said Friday she is four months pregnant and the father is John McCook, an actor-singer in her night club act.

"I met someone I love and have decided to go through with having the baby," she said. "I don't have any plans to marry John."

OKLAHOMA CITY — State Sen. Phil Smalley told his colleagues Friday the most immediate problem facing the legislature was the horde of ants in the Capitol building.

"They're crawling all over the desks, all over the secretaries — and all over me," he said.

UVic Library Draws 7 Bids

Farmer Construction Ltd. submitted the lowest bid Friday among seven companies bidding for construction of an extension to the University of Victoria's McPherson Library.

Farmer's bid was $2,527,900, a figure vice-president for administration Jack Kyle said was 6.8 per cent under the limit set for that part of the project.

The entire job is expected to cost about $3.4 million and is due to be completed by late summer in 1973.

Kyle said the university board of governors will consider the bids shortly and announce an award.

The seven bids submitted ranged within 9.3 per cent of each other, Kyle said, signifying close competition for the project. Other bids were: Cana Construction, Vancouver, $2,533,000; Dawson and Hall, Vancouver, $2,568,568; Vanin Western Construction, Vancouver, $2,681,200; W. Campbell Ltd., Victoria, $2,722,174; Bird Construction, Vancouver, $2,736,680; G. H. Wheaton, Victoria, $2,765,000.

The library project is the fourth in a series of capital construction projects at UVic. Already completed have been extensions to the MacLaurin, Clearihue and Cornett Buildings.

Kyle said all three projects were completed below cost limits.

He said construction on the library project will start shortly.

Looking for a Solution

The Community Chest of Greater Victoria has done well to conduct searching studies of its present situation and its prospects for the future. A lengthening string of failures to make the annual objective—a rapidly escalating sum over the years—has faced the organization and its member agencies with some vital questions.

There can be little doubt that if the Chest were to be disbanded some other similar organization would soon have to take its place. The advantages of having one major fund drive a year in the community, plus the opportunity to impose outside investigation and a certain amount of control over the operations and budget of each recipient agency, are very clear. To these benefits may be added the fact that the central fund-raising activity permits the member agencies to devote their time to the cause for which they were formed, rather than to deploy their efforts in raising money for the work.

The original principle of Community Chest aid was based on deficit financing — that is, the Chest would make up what was lacking after government grants, individual efforts, earnings and other sources of income fell short of the year's requirements — and this is still generally followed. Most agencies exist to perform services to the public, and hence are subject to the same burden of rising salary and wage budgets which afflicts all employers today. If agencies do not pay the going rate, they can not hire staffs of the necessary calibre for the work.

While the principle of Community Chest operation should not be in doubt, there is, however, a question about individual agencies and whether there should be arbitrary limits on appropriations to them. There is a sizable public opinion that government should assume more of the costs of the activities represented in the agencies' work.

This, in fact, has been the trend over the years. It is a recognized procedure that voluntary organizations should explore the need in various health, welfare or recreational fields, and having verified the social validity of the service, later make way for permanent government participation. This relieves government of the risks of experimentation, while giving worthy undertakings support after the need for them has been proved.

A classic example of this process is shown in the Family and Children's Service, which began as a completely voluntary undertaking and after many years has been taken over almost totally by government financing. Mr. Eric Charman, last year's campaign chairman, has raised a pertinent point in questioning the continued membership of the Family and Children's Service. All the active services of this valuable organization in Greater Victoria are now financed by government grants, just as such work is directly carried on throughout the province by the provincial government. Of the Family and Children's $2.5 million budget, only about $80,000 is supplied by the Chest to cover non-statutory services, and these have dwindled to such insignificant activities as marriage counselling which is not included in the functions of government welfare programs.

The Chest's contribution to the Family and Children's Service today is no more than a gesture which prevents the agency from becoming wholly government-financed. The $80,000 means little to F. and C.S. financing and still less to its work — but it means much more to the Chest for it is the largest single appropriation to an agency.

This is a question which the Community Chest Board should face soon; it has been long delayed. The argument that the F. and C.S. is a potent magnet for contributions to the Chest is not really valid, for the public should know by now that the Chest's money does not go into helping adoptions, foster children, family counselling, and so on, which are financed entirely by the government.

Remedies for the Chest's dilemma should be considered in conjunction with the plan for regionalization of health, welfare and recreational services in Greater Victoria and the nearby areas. This stimulating plan, already approved by the Region, and favored by many of the experts of the Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement, has lain on Minister Gaglardi's desk for many months, awaiting some sign of action.

Fine View of the Power Pole

It is an anomaly of our times that Mr. Bennett should include in his budget a special beautification item calling for underground urban wiring while some Saanich residents are learning that towering B.C. Hydro poles are going to hold centre stage in the view from their windows.

Underground wiring is expensive, though modern materials and techniques are shrinking the gap between the cost of such installations and the cost of carrying wires overhead. From the standpoint of attractiveness there is no comparison between the two. Wires and cables whose functions are always utilitarian and never decorative, are much better when installed out of sight. Cities recognize this fact. Some have done something about it, as the old B.C. Electric did in Victoria's centre. In some up-Island areas the telephone company has done a good job of burying its rural lines.

Suburbs are continually being absorbed into urban units. The need to preserve the visible environment is increasingly recognized. When large towers carrying overhead lines are newly erected, they frequently represent a development which will have to be reversed at a later date — and at a substantial cost.

The Price of Education

GARY CLARKSON

Lighting the foggy road of educational financing are two principles, or, if you prefer, two questions. Does the educational system or financing scheme provide equality of opportunity; and does it also provide for an equitable sharing of tax burdens? The Cameron Commission of 1945 addressed itself to the former question but the sticky problem of equality in taxation has been approached gingerly, even timidly.

Basic grants to implement a basic education program were advocated in Dr. Maxwell Cameron's landmark report and, with certain updating reforms, his recommendations have been followed. There is a uniform education tax rate of 24.5 mills for public schools across the province.

A variable equalizing grant to the school districts makes up the difference between mill rate revenue and the cost of the basic education program. This program or rather its cost is directly related to what is known as the instructional unit value. This unit is reached by dividing the total approved operating expenditures in the preceding budget year by the number of instructional units in the preceding school year. An instructional unit is 30 elementary pupils and 20 secondary students.

Unit Value

For 1971 the instructional unit value was $14,030. Approved operating expenditures include administration, instruction, operation, repair and maintenance, transportation and auxiliary services such as health care and dormitory and boarding expenses. In early December the schools boards are informed by the government of the instructional unit value for the coming year, the number of approved units in the district and the cost of the basic program.

However, costs to taxpayers across the province are not uniform and the fact is that only one district, Sooke, keeps its expenses down to the basic program cost. According to a report in the Vancouver Sun, "They can do it by paying their teachers low wages and suffering one of the highest teacher-pupil ratios in the province." Other districts exceed the basic program cost by from four to 70 per cent.

There may be a referendum of the local ratepayers if the school district budget is above a declared percentage of the basic program cost. If a large district's budget is more than 108 per cent of the basic program this year a referendum may ensue. Authorities are loath to go to the voters because the odds are against receiving electoral authority to exceed the established figure. Mr. Walter Donald of the Greater Victoria School Board has made it clear that the district is in a "near-crisis situation as far as financing education is concerned."

Problem of Salaries

Although it is apparent that inequities exist from district to district in the kind of education available, the inflation-conscious taxpayer may take some comfort that the rate of increase in operating expenditures is slowing up. In 1968 the increase in operating expenditure per pupil over the preceding year was 9.7 per cent; in 1971 it was 6.3 per cent.

Central to the problem of operational expenditures is teachers' salaries. They make up 79 per cent of operating expenses. There is hardly any way to cut costs without directly affecting the teachers' pay. The position of the teacher is worthy of the highest respect, but his professional aspirations and his independence will no doubt continue to be at loggerheads with the fact that the teacher is dependent on public funds. Wage controls for all may be the ultimate solution in Canada but, in the meantime, the teacher can hardly be surprised that considerable public opposition to his wage demands has arisen.

Tax Burden Principle

These matters of principle and cold fact — the teachers' salaries and professional needs, provincial grants and mill rates, basic program costs, even equality of educational opportunity — are related to the second basic principle, equitable tax burdens. A uniform mill rate to establish a basic educational program does not, in itself, ensure that the taxpayers are paying equally to provide a good system. The municipal mill rate which partly supports educational costs is a regressive tax — the least able to pay are the hardest hit. This holds in spite of home owners' grants, partial assessments and other fancy modifications. Yet to transfer educational cost entirely to the province would dangerously centralize our educational system and perhaps reduce local teachers and Boards to ciphers.

Further, if education is a foundation program for the community which deserves central support, many other programs fall under the same category. Where is the line to be drawn between efficiency and local needs? Between the need for equitable financing and local democracy?

In the debate over school financing what is at stake is no less than the kind of community we want for ourselves and our children.

Readers and News Makers

TORONTO — The Legislative Press Gallery, in emergency session assembled, has protested to Mr. Speaker and anyone else who will listen over the barring of the press from certain meetings of the Legislature's Select Committee on Economic and Cultural Nationalism.

"We challenge the right of the committee chairman under the standing orders of the Legislature to exclude press members," the Gallery proclaimed. "The public has a right to know the views of its elected legislators and the witnesses on this important issue."

A mighty blow for freedom? Hardly: what the committee talked about in secret was easily obtained from individual members later on, and it was not exactly headline stuff. Still, the Gallery's protest praises some modern questions about some pretty hoary parliamentary traditions.

Under ancient custom and usage, the public and press may observe parliament only on sufferance. Indeed, up to 1875 in Britain, an M.P. merely had to "spy strangers" in the galleries and the speaker was obliged to order them out; this rule was then changed to require a vote on the matter, although the speaker or his deputy could on his own authority exclude strangers at any time.

Rule on 'Strangers'

In the Ontario legislature, this was the situation up to April 22, 1970, when new standing orders were adopted. Now, "all strangers may be excluded from the House on a motion properly moved and adopted by the House," and there is also a rule which appears to give the speaker and his deputy discretionary authority to expel strangers who misbehave.

Apart from war-time instances in Britain, the rule has not been used in many years to produce an in-camera session of parliament and it is safe to say it will not be. That does not mean, however, that it is only of academic interest. It is still used to justify closed sessions of parliamentary committees on occasion and it undoubtedly helps to explain why provincial legislatures in particular continue to give municipal councils and school boards the power to hold closed sessions, which such bodies do with pernicious frequency.

But as far as its own rules are concerned, the Ontario Legislature appears to have out-smarted itself. There is nothing in the current standing orders which gives a standing or select committee of the Legislature power to hold closed meetings. Under the old rules, such authority was granted by a blanket clause which said that contingencies not provided for were governed by the rules and usages of the British House of Commons, and the British rules certainly authorized, and still do, closed meetings of parliamentary committees. But this reference to British practice was eliminated when the Ontario rules were re-written in 1970.

SPEAKER ALLAN REUTER
. . . not consulted

In any event, the Press Gallery is undoubtedly right in asserting that the chairman of the Select Committee on Economic and Cultural Nationalism did not have authority to hold closed meetings. Since the committee had no such power in its terms of reference and since there is no authority in the rules, only Speaker Allan Reuter could have authorized closed sessions and Mr. Reuter was not even consulted.

In Unspecified Cases

Mr. Reuter may yet reply to the Gallery's protest that closed meetings are justified on the basis of legislative precedent and parliamentary tradition, which is the way the rules now read for unspecified contingencies. And certainly there is no dearth of precedent: every time a parliamentary committee reaches the stage where it writes its report to parliament, it goes into private session.

Hardly a search for truth according to the scientific method, perhaps, but then one must not expect politicians to be scientists. The political mind is reactive, not analytic; it prefers to announce what has been decided, rather than reveal how the decision was made — for the very human reason that such revelation is too often a jumble of intuitive compromises and embarrassing copouts.

The trouble is that it is sadly out of step with the times. More and more, as the public sector of society expands, the concern of citizens is with the process of decision-making — with the how as much as with the what. The new need is openness and somehow the politicians, painful though it be, will have to get with it.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Ride and Win?

With reference to your article on the need for increasing bus traffic, why not try a "Ride-and-Win" contest?

Every passenger boarding the bus is given a numbered ticket and the duplicate is retained by the bus driver. At the end of the month there is a draw for a specific sum of money, which goes to the holder of the winning ticket. The more bus tickets you hold, the more chance you have of winning. If the number of passengers using the bus services is increased (as we hope it will be), then the amount of prize-winning money is also increased, thus offering a further incentive to travel by bus and collect more tickets, with a better chance to win.

Just an idea, but it might be worth a try. Patronize the buses — Ride and Win. — Barbara Collings, 1264 Faithful St.

Simple Solution

I am sure that all reasonable people will share the sympathy which you expressed in your editorial February 9 for those teachers who face unemployment as a result of the limit on expenditures imposed on school boards.

But if we assume that all teachers currently under contract were hired as absolutely necessary to ensure a satisfactory standard of education, there is a very simple solution to the problem. To wit:

Retain all of the present teaching staff at a level of salary commensurate with the funds available so that none will be considered expendable. The current scale of remuneration is more than adequate.

It is doubtful that owner-electors will respond to strike threats or predictions of a lowering of the educational standards if the teachers' salary demands are not met. Property owners have been exploited long enough. — F. E. Wright, 993 Karen Crescent.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

There has been quite a change in the channel of Goldstream River, no doubt caused by a flash flood a short time ago. It you go down to the picnic site you can see where the high water has cut new channels and even formed a small island.

In many places the banks have been eroded, leaving little bays. Many logs washed down by the heavily running stream now lie high on the banks. Some are jammed against the bridge.

New gravel bars have been formed and the bed of the river has been cut and deepened in many places. Some trees have been uprooted along the old trail, sections of which have vanished.

No doubt a number of the eggs deposited by the salmon last fall have been destroyed, some washed away, others covered with sand and gravel.

I think there are sufficient eggs left in the upper reaches to insure a fair supply of fingerlings for the coming year.

In the portion of the river along the highway, where the rocky banks could not have washed away and the water would have been deeper, no scouring of the gravel beds should have occurred.

You can see that this change of course has happened many times in the past. It seems as if "old-man river" intends to try to establish itself in the bed it carved for itself in the dim past.

In this section of the "flats" can be read the happenings of centuries ago. Here the red cedars established themselves, and perhaps for very many years there was no heavy run off, so the cedars grew to giant size. Some are still standing, others were logged off perhaps in the late 1800s or the early 1900s. The old stumps that are left, and will still be there for a long time to come, tell the story.

Then the red alders took hold with a sprinkling of maples. They have grown and flourished, but now are beginning to reach maturity and a great number are breaking down. As result, the seedlings of the cedars are taking hold and one can see where they are reaching for the sun. Soon they will dominate the area once again, for this is the type of soil and environment in which cedars thrive.

It is the old story of breaking down and rebuilding which has gone on since the beginning of the "kingdom of plants," with a slight change in the type of plant life as evolution played its part.

THE ULTIMATE HIGHRISE

'Pretty soon the shiny new buildings begin to destroy their own economic base'

Somewhere in these concrete caves, the fiscal gremlins lie . . .

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

No phrase is thrown at the public more than "The Urban Crisis." Everybody with an angle uses it — the politicians, the city planners, the social workers, the foundations, the think tanks, even the aerospace industry uses it to cut in for some government money to solve it.

Yet with so much attention and activity, just what the urban crisis may be seldom gets pinned down. Instead, we're shown what the urban crisis has done: the slums, the dirt, the wreckage of people and places. But how this got to be is almost never explained.

Instead, the quack urbanologists, and that includes the human resources con men as well as the city planners and the narcotics experts, the whole slew of 'em would have us concentrate on their newest plan, and how, if we adopt it and appropriate fresh billions, we'll save ourselves even more billions in the long run.

The long run is here. We've been buying their whimpy plans, programs and pilot projects for decades. The due date has come and gone on all of them, and there's nothing to show for it but new proposals to decentralize or centralize, to co-ordinate or to better utilize our resources. None of it has saved the cities or seems to have anything to do with whatever it is that has destroyed them.

The most galling thing is that the public has done what the politicians, businessmen and experts said had to be done. We went to the urban doctor and found out he was a fake.

Well, now a group of persons have come along and have documented that he was not only wrong, but in fact was hastening and feeding the very processes he was supposed to be reversing.

The group includes about 30 souls in San Francisco — economists, architects, planners and desperate citizens. They teamed up to see if they could find out what the real sequelae have been to their having followed the best advice — that is, to build up the city's economic base by building up the downtown with huge, flashy office buildings. Everywhere we're told that's how the city will save itself, will generate tax revenues, create jobs.

They checked it out and the result is a surprising book, "The Ultimate Highrise," edited by Bruce Brugmann and Greggar Slettleand (The San Francisco Bay Guardian, 1070 Bryant St., San Francisco 94103. $2.95).

It was difficult, tedious work, requiring weeks of going through government budgets, tax rolls and the rest of the numerical flow that spouts out of the computers of modern administration. What they found was that San Francisco's skyscrapers — and it has more than any other city but New York and Chicago — are destroying the economy.

Far from adding to the tax base, they cost the city $5 million more a year to service than they bring in. Nor does San Francisco profit indirectly. The suburbanites who work in the new highrises shop where they live rather than in the city, so there's no sales tax revenue. Moreover, the enormous concentration of people doesn't afford an opportunity for economies of scale.

As the book points out, the per capita cost of operating a city of under half a million is $144 while the cost of doing the same in a city of over a million is $444.

A booming downtown does raise property values, however. Not that this is a blessing, because it means the taxes go up and fewer home-owning families can afford to stay. Factories, too — they can't afford to hang around either, and with them go the jobs, especially the low-skilled jobs which keep people off the welfare rolls.

That happened in San Francisco, as "The Ultimate Highrise" demonstrates. In the last decade, the city got more than 60,000 new jobs, but only 1 per cent of them — 600 measly jobs — went to San Franciscans. The blue-collar workers go on welfare or they exchange "jobs with decent income and some hope for the future for low-paying, dead-end service jobs — messenger boys, bellhops, retail clerks, etc."

Pretty soon the shiny new buildings begin to destroy their own economic base. The books' authors say that the congestion and the destruction of what was uniquely San Francisco is already eroding the tourist industry, the city's biggest source of revenue. In New York, it's gone farther. The big corporations are beginning to move out. The environmental mess they created is too much for them, plus having driven all the middle-class people away, they've got to follow them if they want those kinds of workers.

For San Franciscans the book offers one form of solace. The fire department ladders only go up about eight storeys and these "new buildings are essentially sealed boxes filled with tons of highly combustible plastics."

There have already been some close calls in New York, but they've been bad enough to show how the fires race through the air-conditioning ducts, blazing to temperatures up to 1,500 degrees — enough to twist the steel beams and melt the outside curtain walls. Since the elevators fail in these fires, and it takes about two hours to evacuate a 50-storey building, all we city people have to do is be patient and we'll be rid of our visitors.

There may be a few who'd prefer a less drastic solution. "The Ultimate Highrise" can't give that, but it can provide people with a blueprint, a way of looking at their towns and what's going on in them; a way of finding out, not what the urban crisis does but what it is.

Among Other Luxuries, an Election . . .

PRESS GALLERY
bruce yemen

If a provincial election is held this year, it will be a luxury.

Like all genuine luxuries, we don't need it, not this year at least. Election costs run into the luxury bracket, too.

The Social Credit government could afford the political luxury of an election, however because it stands virtually no chance of being defeated.

But this has another luxurious feature. The voters would have the luxury of considering the possibility of voting for a stronger opposition.

Many uncommitteed voters didn't feel they had that luxury in the 1969 election. Premier Bennett did a good job of making a Social Credit vote seem a necessity.

He did it basically by capitalizing on the idea that there was a real chance the government could lose to the New Democrats.

The election result — 70 per cent of the elected MLAs were Socreds — came as a surprise to many voters who thought they were casting the vital vote that saved B.C. from a left-wing government.

But events in the legislature since that time have raised concern about a new side to this luxuriously large government.

At times, it appears to treat the very parliamentary process itself as a luxury to be sold out in a moment of need.

Thursday night was one of those moments.

In a strange, pathetic performance the government challenged and killed a ruling of Speaker William Murray who had overruled a Socred effort to throw out an NDP motion calling for extra help for the elderly poor.

The Socreds, obviously, didn't want to go on record as having voted against a specific list of proposals to help the aged, proposals such as $200 a month pensions and free medical care.

So they took that motion and they stomped on it, kicking their own Speaker in the process.

They treated parliamentary tradition as a luxury that they couldn't afford at that particular moment.

The Speaker didn't resign, although speakers have resigned for less. He may have looked around at the potential successors and decided that his continued presence was a necessity.

How does a government get so luxury-oriented?

Being rich, big and powerful certainly helps. Being in office for 20 years and still unbeatable also helps.

It was really ironic that the latest display of government luxury should occur during a debate on the needs of the elderly poor.

The government tried its best to give Ottawa more than its share of the blame and to accuse the opposition of being cynical about exploiting poor old folk for political gain.

But it was highly significant that British Columbia's best-known pension recipient, W. A. C. Bennett, didn't speak in the debate.

He didn't stand up and say why some of that $90 million in surplus cash that he dumped into special funds wasn't used to ease the plight of the elderly sick.

But then, Bennett may have realized it wasn't the time to get up and boast about his array of special and perpetual funds into which he loves to dump cash.

By the standards of other hard-pressed governments in Canada, these funds are the biggest luxuries the B.C. government has got.

Perpetual funds contain $85 million in cash earning interest to be spent on a variety of worthy needs such as Indian development, drug education, sports and cultural development. These same needs, however, could be met from modest annual budgetary expenditures.

Another collection of special funds in excess of $100 million are also earning interest while waiting to be spent, presumably, on the new B.C. building in Vancouver, on the third crossing of Burrard Inlet and on major disasters, among other things.

But, as a financier, Premier Bennett grows more luxury-oriented every year.

So this year he created a $10 million Power Line Beautification Fund, which for some reason he preferred over a $10 million fund to pay for medical supplies for the elderly.

The real clincher, though, was the $25 million Green Belt Protection Fund. The long-range purpose of the fund is to buy valuable open land in congested areas.

The short-range purpose, however, relates directly to the title of the fund. It is to protect the rich green belt of luxury cash that Bennett has already established around himself.

It is just a further example of how the provincial government daily disproves the adage that you can't have the luxury of your cake and eat it too.

You can, you really can. A $500 million Perpetual Cake Fund would buy every citizen of this province the nicest piece of Social Credit anniversary cake you could ever want, forever, which is how long the government will last . . . won't it?

CANADA'S ONE-HORSE TOWNS

Is a place like . . . Sudbury actually considered URBAN?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There's been much bad news of industrial closings and layoffs in smaller places. CIP is closing its sulphite mill at Temiscaming (on the Quebec-Ontario border) and 875 workers lose jobs. Domtar is to end its sulphite operation at Cornwall and some 200 jobs will disappear. International Nickel has a big layoff and a permanent work force reduction underway at Sudbury. Similar economic disaster has struck in the Bathurst area of New Brunswick.

GHOST TOWNS

From 1950 to 1970 our healthiest, most efficient big industry has been pulp and paper.

Base metal mining has had almost as good a record of profits, development and expansion.

Both industries are in trouble. Overall each industry has promise but the short-run effect may literally destroy towns.

Like most who read this, I live in a "metropolitan area" where a closing of a plant or a major layoff is serious but without devastating "ghost town implications." Unless your roots go back to the smaller places, you may shrug at bleak news from the likes of Temiscaming or Sudbury as merely a fringe matter.

I grew up in the bush and a single industry town. These roots were refreshed when the University of Toronto Press recently published a fascinating book by Rex Lucas titled "Minetown, Milltown, Railtown — Life in Canadian Communities of Single Industry."

It is the fruit of hundreds of interviews with miners, brakemen, papermakers, etc., organized and presented so that it gave me "the feel" and a better understanding of life in such communities.

Early in the book — Mr. Lucas tackles one of our popular assumptions — that now Canadians are a city people.

MYTH MAKING

"A myth-in-the-making that appears with increasing regularity . . . in newspapers . . . is that Canada is an urban nation.

"A further indication that the definition has been accepted is that urban sociology and institutes of urban study are in vogue in the land.

"To the traveler, however, this definiton seems contrary to sensory evidence. As one person put it after driving from Ottawa to Toronto, 'I had never realized before how many people in Canada live nowhere.'

". . . We need to look more carefully at the urban character of Canada. What is meant by urban? How many Canadians live in cities, towns and villages? What is a community of single industry? How many are there?

". . . According to the 1961 census 69 per cent of the population live in urban areas."

"Most people picture 69 per cent of the population hurrying up and down escalators, or driving cars back and forth to work on crowded city streets. They see the great majority of Canadians criss-crossing urban areas in subways and city buses, eating in smart restaurants, shopping in downtown department stores or suburban plazas, and enjoying first-run movies and ballet.

"They also, see the crowding, the lack of planning, the pollution, the smog, and the impersonality of it all. They see all this, that is, until they know that the bureau's definition of urban includes villages of 1,000 population.

HISTORIES SHORT

". . . Communities with a population of 1,000 or, for that matter, 30,000, do not have urban qualities . . . freedom of choice is one of the crucial social characteristics that distinguishes the urban area from the small community. The ranges of choice are severely limited in a community of 1,000."

Lucas estimates that over six million Canadians live in communities of 30,000 or less — another two million can be designated accurately as farm scatter. That is, almost 40 per cent of Canadians are not part of the advantages and disadvantages of big city life, whether these be more various job chances or smog.

Lucas defines a community of single industry of enterprise as one in which 75 per cent of the work force serves the single industry. He estimates Canada has some 636 such communities with a total population of just over 900,000. Most of these are 20th century products of industry and technology — that is their histories are short — their existence rests on a high technology, a complex division of labor and a sophisticated marketing system.

As Lucas says — those who live in such towns know "their future depends upon impersonal forces outside their community such as head office decisions, government policies, and international trading agreements . . ." So understand and sympathize if your governments step up to help Temiscaming and Sudbury.

Hughes Author: A Literary Pussycat

After four undistinguished novels, Clifford Irving holds the centre stage in one of the most intriguing stories in publishing history. What kind of man is Irving?

By PETER ARNETT

NEW YORK (AP) — As a young, aspiring writer, Clifford Irving always dreamed of the BIG novel, the one which would bring him money and fame.

Four novels came out of his typewriter, but neither recognition nor critical acclaim nor money accompanied them. For the husky six-footer, who had often told friends he wanted to be another Ernest Hemingway, a lifetime as a second or third-rank writer, seemed in store.

Disappointed and angry, he told his friend and editor Tom Gervasi two years ago: "What an uphill climb! They won't take any notice of me."

All that has changed.

Finally, Irving, the upper middle-class New Yorker, turned semi-bohemian island dweller, had done something BIG. He is either the perpetrator of one of the greatest literary frauds in publishing history or mastermind of a literary coup—the man who got to Howard Hughes. The second alternative, however, grows less likely by the day.

Two grand juries are investigating his manuscript of the life of Hughes, the billionaire recluse. Swiss police want him and his wife to answer to criminal charges.

REMAINS CALM

Through it all, Irving remains suave and superbly controlled at stage centre.

From interviews with old friends, college mates and more recent acquaintances, from his relatives, from his book editors, one impression stands out: That of a man driven to make his mark as a writer.

Martin Simon, Irving's roommate at Cornell, recalls: "He wasn't a ladies man as such in those days. He didn't play the field."

But now, at 41, Irving is on his fourth marriage and a beautiful blonde singer with whom he was having an affair says he wanted her to be number five.

Even his first marriage had a real-unreal quality.

While still at college, Irving married an attractive actress, Nina Wilcox, then in her sophomore year. Phylis Owne Elbe, a Cornell classmate of theirs recalls them as "the golden couple."

Several years later, Irving told a young friend who was about to be married that neither he nor Nina really wanted to get married and that the marriage had been unhappy from the start.

AMBITION UNCHANGED

The one constant thing in his life has been his ambition as a writer.

At least three writers from the class of '52, like Irving, set their first novels in the Cornell campus. Irving's first was On a Darkling Plain which also drew on his upbringing in New York City.

He graduated with a BA from Cornell, spent four months as a copy boy at the New York Time nd then, like so many writers, began a nor e that took him to div ales.

The only authentically Hemingwaysque adventure he was involved in was sailing a yacht from Mexico to Europe with four others as inexperienced as himself. They were 3½ months late.

But he did find the goat-filled island of Ibiza, the smallest of the Balearic group that lie off Barcelona, Spain.

It was in Ibiza that Irving was to meet his next three wives. He married Claire Lydon in 1958. After her death in an auto accident in California the following year he met Fay Brooke, a London model, whom he married in 1961.

Divorced from Fay in 1965, he married his current wife, Edith, in 1968. She was a long-time resident of the island, herself divorced from a German businessman. They have two children, Ned 4, and Barnaby, 3. Irving has a 10-year-old son Joshua from his marriage with Fay.

8 REJECTED NOVEL

It was in Ibiza that Irving wrote and published his four novels over 11 years. The first, On a Darkling Plain, was turned down by eight publishers before it was accepted by Putnam.

The novel was about a young man and his inner conflicts as he comes of age at Cornell University and in New York City. A New York Times reviewer said there was little in the novel to save it from being "a fiercely joyless excursion in a literary landscape with little meaning and no hope."

Irving tried again with The Losers, published by Coward in 1957.

His next novel, The Valley, published by McGraw-Hill in 1961, was an adult western, and a financial success, and for some time thereafter he wrote television scripts in Hollywood. But he still remained unknown.

He tried a fourth time with The 38th Floor, McGraw-Hill, 1966, a story set in the United Nations. Again a critical disappointment. His friend Tom Gervasi recalls: "This reaction depressed him. He was very disappointed at the reception his work received."

But Irving's greatest disappointment came with his first non-fiction work, Fake, the story of his Ibiza neighbor, Elmyr de Hory, a Hungarian art forger.

Fake sold only 15,000 copies.

Rezoning Hearing May Be Turbulent

A turbulent public hearing is expected at Sidney council Monday concerning rezoning of prime waterfront land from single residential status to multiple dwelling zone.

A condominium development providing 30 dwellings is proposed for the 2.57 acres bounded by Third Avenue and Shoreacres in Sidney.

Although municipal assessor John Chapmen has recommended the plan, there is considerable opposition among residents in the area.

Mrs. Edan Bissett, 2517 Amhurst, is circulating a petition and explanatory pamphlets among neighbors who, she says, are equally convinced the proposal is "completely undesirable."

Judge Claims Support For Parole Veto Idea

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge Les Bewley says he has received widespread support for his proposal that judges be given veto power in deciding on paroles.

Judge Bewley made the proposal at a national conference on the law in Ottawa recently. The National Parole Board now decides on paroles.

New Westminster MP Doug Hogarth, parliamentary secretary to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, said the judge's proposal "smacked of the imposition of retributive measures against convicts according to the dictates of the given jurist — or what is worse — his afterthoughts."

He said that if Judge Bewley's proposal was implemented, "an impractical and bureaucratic bungling system" would result.

Judge Bewley said he was "saddened and disappointed" by Hogarth's "negative and defensive reaction."

Three Denied Bail

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Americans, charged with illegal possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficing, were remanded to Tuesday and their applications for bail denied.

The three — each of them 27 years of age — are charged in connection with the seizure Feb. 3 of 402 pounds of cannabis resin. They are Robert Roland Burns of Venus, Calif., William Robert Fairchild of Hawaii, and Joseph Augustine Donnelly, who gave a Vancouver address but is an American.

Curb Abuses

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council has decided to have the city's board of administration report on the licensing of door-to-door salesmen and canvassers in order to curb abuses.

Council's general purpose standing committee held a two-hour meeting and heard widespread complaints from individuals and groups who said they had been bilked out of thousands of dollars by unscrupulous door-to-door salesmen and canvassers.

'Share' Blame

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Ranchers must share the blame for the continuous desecration of good farm land through urban development because of their parochial attitude, says the co-ordinating chairman of the Canada Land Inventory.

W. A. Benson told more than 100 ranchers that their attitude is part of the pubic apathy about land use.

'Neighbor' Villages

SURREY (CP)—The theory that "neighborhood" villages should be developed to lighten the population crush in urban areas has been put into a definite plan here.

Louke Kelyn, chief planner for the municipality, said a project to develop more than 11 square miles of lightly-populated land into a series of small communities and recreation land would create housing for more than 11,000 persons.

CHARTER FLIGHTS:

IT'S TIME SOMEBODY TOLD YOU THE FACTS OF LIFE.

The current charter boom is a mixed blessing. Obviously, it has brought foreign travel within the reach of groups of people who would not go otherwise. Whether airlines like the trend or not is beside the point.

On the other hand, it has created some problems. Suddenly, everybody seems to be in the charter business — from reputable companies to fly-by-night promoters who are after a quick piece of the action. So we offer some advice. When you've decided to go on a charter to Europe, Mexico, Hawaii or the Orient, ask these questions first:

WHO IS THE ORGANIZER?

Most of the charter organizers are reputable people. But there are also promoters who do not have the authority or the necessary background to guarantee your flight. Ask some questions.

WHO IS THE CARRIER?

Beware of the carrier who runs a marginal operation out of some obscure airfield in Europe or wherever. It's possible that you'll hang around for days waiting for your flight. Be sure that you fly with a reliable Canadian Carrier who takes off as promised and guarantees your space.

WHO ADMINISTERS THE MONEY?

Take a hypothetical charter that costs $250.00. And take a passenger load of 200. Now figure it out. That's $50,000.00. Which charter operator do you know well enough to trust with that much money? Check them out. On past performance. And play it safe.

WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU GET STRANDED?

How would you like to be stuck in London, or in Amsterdam, or Brussels? With no way to get home? No money? It isn't funny. It has happened and it can happen again. Now, the next time somebody offers you a cheap charter, what are you going to do? Trust him? Or is your group going by Pacific Western charter, because you know you can count on us. If not with PWA then Wardair charter, or C.P. Air charter, or Air Canada charter. You know them and their good reputations.

Bankers Arrested

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three men who worked for the Federal Reserve Bank have been arrested on charges of stealing $900,000 destined for destruction, the FBI announced.

The money, in $100 denominations, was allegedly stolen about June 29, 1971, by the men who worked as clerks in the currency verification and destruction unit, the FBI said.

About three months later, the FBI said, $92,000 of the money was disposed of in a sewer in North Philadelphia. About the same amount was found later in a sewer outlet by two employees of the Philadelphia water works.

The three arrested: Robert W. Masteller, 25; Gerald J. Greenfield, 19; and Edward M. West, 21.

Hearing Aid Rules Toughened

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — The federal health department is preparing new regulations to control the sale of hearing aids in Canada and it is hoped to eliminate some of the problems facing purchasers of the devices.

By this summer it will be illegal under the federal food and drugs act to sell a hearing aid which does not meet the performance characteristics claimed by the manufacturer.

And all hearing aid manufacturers will be required to provide both the individual purchaser and the federal environmental protection branch with a statement of the performance characteristics of the particular model or type of hearing aid.

Andrew Hollett, senior advisor on compliance in the health department, described the proposed regulations as a first step in eliminating the large number of problems and complaints involving hearing aids in recent years in Canada.

He said today that at present hearing aids some costing hundreds of dollars each are often "just marketed" with no claims made whatsoever concerning their performance.

The proposed regulations should make it easier for federal prosecutions of retailers of hearing aids on the grounds of misrepresentation, as well as prosecutions of manufacturers.

And in theory at least the regulations should make it easier for individuals to find a type of hearing aid better suited to their hearing loss requirements.

Hollett said the "itinerant" hearing aid salesman causes the most problem. He said the department may decide that additional regulations are needed to control how retailers represent the characteristics of the products they sell.

Rollett said that many of the problems people have with hearing aids involve the "personal element" (such as fit, price and service) that is more difficllt to cover with legislation.

He said, for example, that many people expect a hearing aid to restore their hearing to what it was before the hearing loss. "There's no machine developed yet that can duplicate the human ear," he said.

Hearing aids are considered to be medical devices and are covered under the federal Food and Drugs Act. Information on performance to be required on hearing aids will include basic and comprehensive frequency response frequency range, acoustic gain, effect of tone control position on frequency response harmonic distortion and power supply voltage variation.

The federal health department will accept the views of manufacturers, audiologists and other interested persons until April 4 before proceeding with the regulations.

Soviet-U.S. Health Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union formally agreed Friday to co-operate in research into cancer, heart disease and environmental health.

Initially the plan will involve a mutual exchange of information, but could be expanded later to include joint research teams and bilateral funding. U.S. Health Secretary Elliot L. Richardson told a news conference.

U.S. CUTS 'SPEED'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1972 production quota for the widely abused stimulant methamphetamine, or "speed," will be cut by more than 80 per cent, according to the justice department.

Director John Ingersoll of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs signed an order Thursday setting amphetamine quotas at 1,564 kilograms — 83 per cent below last year — and methamphetamine at 969 kilograms, a reduction of 80 per cent.

Attorney-General John Mitchell said that Ingersoll acted on the basis of recommendations by Surgeon General Jesse Steinfeld and partly because of a major smuggling crackdown against one manufacturer responsible for the drug bifetamina, an amphetamine product, being diverted from Mexico into the United States.

You get the best of both worlds

The small contractor who deals with Finning gets the best of both worlds.

Finning is divisionalized into a number of small units which specialize in a particular product or industry. The Light Industrial Division, for example, specializes in sales and service for the "little man". In this way the small contractor gets the personal attention he deserves from sales people who are interested in him and his business operation.

At the same time, he has available the large parts inventories, trained servicemen, special service programs and other support from the 33 Finning locations in B.C. and the Northwest Territories.

The best of the other world that the small contractor gets at Finning is Caterpillar equipment.

Take Caterpillar's 920 Wheel Loader, for example. This small loader (80 hp, 1½ cu. yds.) is popular with small contractors because it can handle many jobs—loading, stockpiling, landscaping, excavating, backfilling and rough grading. Its productivity, roadability, ease of operation and Caterpillar dependability make it a loader that does more work for less money.

So if you're looking for a small machine—loader, tractor, grader, scraper—get the best of both worlds. Get Finning personalized service and the Caterpillar product that goes with it. See Finning's Light Industrial Division today!

Revenue Case 'Most Unusual'

TORONTO (CP) — You can buy and sell shares of Revenue Properties Ltd., but you can't find the prices listed in your newspaper.

This odd situation comes from a recent ruling of the Ontario Securities Commission which is designed to put pressure on the real estate development firm to file financial information required under Ontario law.

The commission has instructed the Investment Dealers Association of Canada to drop Revenue from the daily list of prices it supplies for publication for stocks traded on the Toronto unlisted or over-the-counter market.

But brokers can still execute orders in the stock.

Commission chairman Edward Royce said the Revenue situation is "a most unusual case" in which the commission feels many small shareholders would suffer undue hardship if trading were suspended.

Revenue is one of North America's largest real estate developers. In the late 1960s its shares soared from $6.25 to the equivalent of $120 after taking account of stock splits.

Troubles appeared in 1969, stock exchanges suspended trading and regulatory bodies in the United States began investigations. Since then Revenue shares have traded over the counter. They now are in the $1 area.

The company filed a partial report last summer covering affairs to March 31, 1970. It included 23 pages of notes and reservations of the auditors.

AB KENT - EDITOR

Can. Utils.

A new issue of unsecured debentures planned for March 1 by Canadian Utilities Ltd. is priced at par $100. The 20-year, $30 million offering will bear interest at 8⅜ per cent and will be uncallable for 15 years.

Investors

The Investors Group, of Winnipeg reports 1971 consolidated net earnings of $9.74 million before extraordinary items. The comparable figure for 1970 was $7.8 million.

Included are 1971 earnings of $4 million for Great-West Life, in which Investors has a controlling interest, up from the previous year's level of $2.9 million.

Northgate

Earnings prospects seen by Northgate Explorations Ltd. for this year and next are based on development of its Irish holdings and foreseeable metal prices.

The Tynagh mine, an open pit operation, could produce earnings at a rate of 90 cents a share, allowing for losses at Gortdrum. Additional prospecting licences are being secured in the Tara area.

Underground operations at Tynagh, due to commence next year, are expected to net Northgate 40 cents a share, sustainable for five years.

W. Crude

A national investment house is in the process of estimating 1972 earnings prospects of western oil producers in anticipation of a hike in crude oil prices.

The analysts say that if U.S. producers through the Independent Petroleum Association of America get an increase as they plan to request, the price of domestic crude in Canada is bound to flow. They also point to increased royalty charges likely to be imposed in Alberta.

The last rise in U.S. crude prices, amounting to 7 per cent, was followed by a 10 per cent increase (about 25 cents a barrel) for western crude in Canada.

Simple, Inexpensive, Profitable

• Your Taxes •

By I. H. R. ASPER

It has been correctly observed that taxpayers complains loudly whenever they run into an onerous provision of the law, but often fail to take advantage of those rules which are intended for their benefit.

This is particularly true of the tax deductions allowed for contributions to private individual pension plans, or registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs) as they are known in tax parlance.

The law allows each individual to contribute up to 20 per cent of his income each year to his private pension, with a maximum of $2,500 being allowed as a tax deduction.

These rules apply to one's 1971 taxable income and the taxpayer has until the end of February in each year to decide how much he wants to contribute. This year's deadline is fast approaching.

Next year it will be even more attractive inasmuch as the tax reform plan raises the maximum deductible contribution from $2,500 to $4,000.

There is little question that the establishement of an RRSP is one of the most attractive tax minimization devices in the book because it is simple, inexpensive to establish, available to everyone and effective tax-wise because the person earning anywhere from $8,000 per year up gets a tax break at his top rate which can range anywhere from 30 to 70 per cent.

The money one puts into his RRSP is invested in securities or life insurance, depending on the type of plan he chooses. While so invested, no tax is payable on the earnings which accumulate. That in itself is an extremely valuable tax saving. Not only is his money earning income, the taxpayer has the use of the money he would have otherwise paid in tax.

Too few people take advantage of their RRSP rights, many, because notwithstanding their middle and upper-income positions, they just don't have the ready cash available, what with mortgage payments, and acquisitions of cottages, snowmobiles and other capital expenditures.

What these taxpayers are missing is the fact that one can readily borrow, from a bank the funds necessary for pension contributions, if he has a good credit rating. Under these circumstances, the tax benefit increases dramatically because not only are the contributions to the RRSP deductible, but also the interest on the money borrowed for the contributions is a deductible expense.

The interest deduction arises because the tax department takes the view that, in their words, "where a taxpayer borrows the money with which to pay premiums under a registered retirement savings plan, it is considered that the interest on the loan is paid on money borrowed for the purpose of earning income from property and that it is deductible."

In less formal language, the pension proceeds will eventually be taxable, so the interest cost of obtaining the pension should be deductible.

This combination of tax deductions makes the RRSP tax saving more widely available and still more attractive.

It is such a valuable and little understood tax concession, a leading life insurance underwriter and consultant, Herb Williams of Winnipeg, has been promoted to write a booklet explaining in lay language the mechanics and ins and outs of the RRSP tax plan.

Published by the Life Underwriters' Association his booklet A Valuable Tax Concession is good reading for anyone who wishes to study the possibilities without having to go through a sales pitch from a securities or life insurance salesman.

Williams gives some interesting examples which demonstrate the tax effect of borrowing money to establish a private pension plan.

One tantalizing case: Assume that a man had extremely good credit and could borrow without repayment for a lengthy period at, say, 7 per cent interest, and could earn even 6 per cent interest on the funds invested in his RRSP. If the taxpayer is in a 50 per cent bracket his interest cost is effectively only 3½ per cent.

If he borrowed $2,000 per year for 20 years (from age 45 to age 65) his debt would amount to about $58,000. However, by borrowing $2,000 a year, he can put $4,000 a year into his RRSP. The other $2,000 is the money he would otherwise pay in tax. The result becomes rather interesting.

The $4,000 a year compounds at 6 per cent interest in 20 years to $156,000. Depending on the then current annuity rates, this amount would prove, at age 65, a gross income of about $1,300 a month for life, with a minimum of 10 years of payments guaranteed, even if he doesn't live the 10 years.

Assume that the annuitant pays an average tax of about 40 per cent on his income of about $15,600 a year and he nets $9,360 a year. At age 65 his annuity could be applied to repaying his debt on the money he borrowed to establish the pension plan, and would completely extinguish the debt in only seven years. Thereafter he could enjoy an after-tax income of about $780 a month as long as he lives.

The possibility stirs the imagination. In this case, he gets $780 a month after taxes from age 72 for as long as he lives, without ever having put up a nickel of his own money.

Whether or not one takes this route to pension planning, or chooses a more conservative approach, there is little doubt that each middle and high income earner should review his situaation before the end of February to determine whether or not this tax plan has any application to his affairs.

Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal Party.

Buses Make Yards —But Not Many

JERUSALEM (WP) — Israeli buses are to be allowed into Jordan, but only for a yard or two, as far as the border customs office.

The agreement announced here Thursday, however, is anothere small milestone on the road to quiet good neighborliness between Jordan and Israel.

The agreement ends the four-year-old ritual which obliged passengers to walk across the Jordan River bridges with their luggage, changing porters in the middle. Jordan's buses will also be allowed as far as the Israeli customs shed.

The reform is in response to the steady increase in the number of travellers across the frontier. Israel recently extended its highly popular summer visitors scheme — allowing Arabs from any country to visit relatives in Israel — to make it available the year round.

Passes for residents of the occupied west bank to visit Jordan are also easier to obtain and valid for longer periods and multiple journeys.

Another example of detente at the Allenby Bridge near Jericho was seen last month, when Jordanian prime minister General Mohammed Roak, who was to have come to Israel for treatment, died before he could make the trip. His body was then brought to Jerusalem for burial.

'CANADA WILL SURVIVE'

LONDON (CP) — The Economist, taking a long look at Canada, concludes that Confederation will survive though most Canadians don't seem anxious to take big cuts in living standards to preserve their nationhood.

It suggests also that Prime Minister Trudeau's political fortunes may be slipping slightly and figures the next general election may result in a minority government.

The 50-page survey, published in the current edition, advises British readers that Canadians suffer from recurring bouts of introspection.

"Canadian style and self-confidence sometimes seem so inadequate that even thoughtful Canadians are to be heard counting the remaining years of survival and independence," says contributing editor Ronald Bird.

Ottawa Women Raid Pub

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of women won a battle of the beer Friday after invading a men-only beverage room of a hotel in suburban Vanier.

About 30 placard-waving women, claiming to represent many more in a 12-storey office building nearby, invaded the pub with a demand for equality in pricing.

They said men could drink beer and eat lunch in the beverage room of the hotel while woman had to pay more for the same thing because they were restricted to the lounge.

Vanier police hustled the women out but the hotel said later it would establish a new beverage room in which the women can have the same thing for the same price as men.

To sweeten the offer the management gave free beer to the protesters.

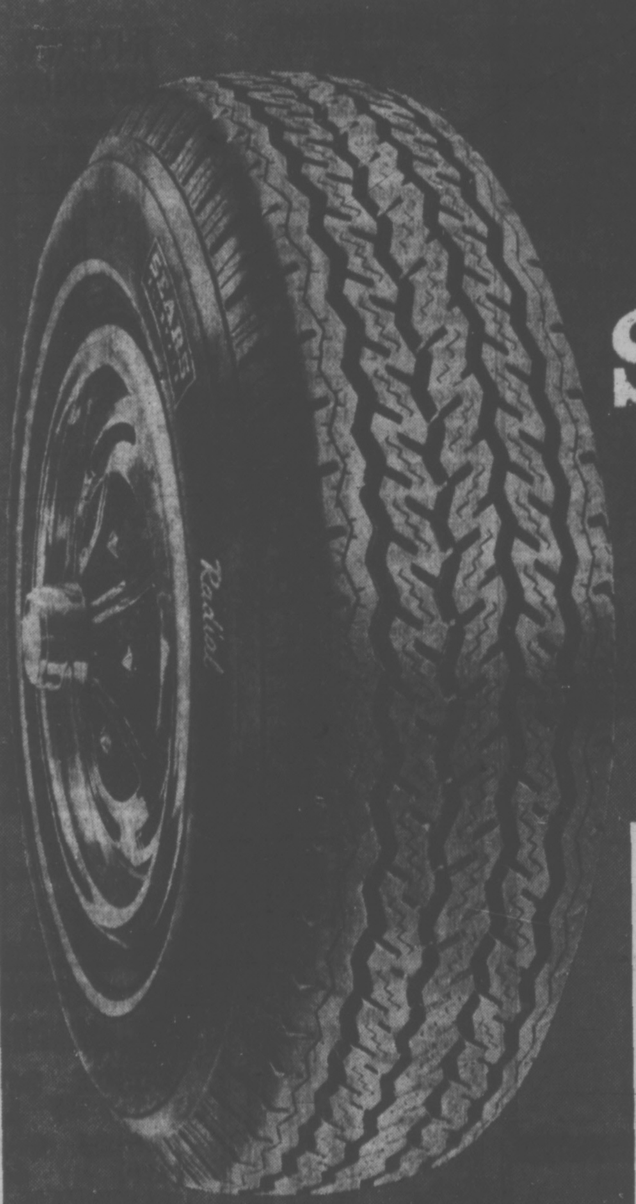
Steel-Belted Radial



A Tire So Safe, So Strong It Could Outlast Your Car

Steel Belted Radial Tires

Priced from 47.98 ea. 175-13 Whitewall Tubeless

Sizes to Fit Most Canadian Cars

For a complete outline of all the advantages of Allstate steel belted radial tires for your car—consult our salesman in person or by phone.

This tire gives you better performance, design and safety than any other tire made today. We're making a strong claim. And it's backed up with a tire built with the strength of steel. The Allstate Radial is a new idea in tire design . . . so safe and so nearly indestructible that they will probably be the last tires you install on your car.

- Steel cord belts keep the tread rigid and flat on the road.
- Rayon radial plys allow maximum flexibility, eliminating squirm. You'll get more than double the mileage of ordinary tires.
- Allstate radial tires run up to 25% cooler than convenitonal tires.
- Steel cord belts resist cuts and punctures.
- Steel braced tread keeps grooves open so there's more tread on the road for better traction.
- Steel braced tread keeps flat on curves to give effortless controlled cornering.
- Absence of squirm means less rolling resistance which adds up to a whopping 10% saving on gas mileage.

PETER MURRAY-EDITOR

2 Tumultuous Years In Churchill's Life

By R. H. ROY

Winston S. Churchill is one of the most fascinating political figures to stride across the world stage in this century.

The task of writing his biography was undertaken first by his son, Randolph, who wrote about his early life, taking two volumes to cover his father's colorful career up to 1914. When Randolph died, Professor Martin Gilbert of the University of Oxford assumed the responsibility of continuing the work.

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL, Vol. III, 1914-16, by Martin Gilbert. Collins. $17.95.

In this, Volume III, the author required 826 pages of text to cover only two years of Churchill's life, so that to say this is a detailed examination of his subject comes close to being a massive understatement.

What saves the book from becoming tedious is the man himself and the great events with which he was connected.

At the outbreak of the Great War, Churchill was the First Lord of the Admiralty. The fleet was ready, but the nation and indeed the empire was unprepared for the long years of trench warfare which proved the superiority of the defensive over the the offensive almost at the outset.

One of Churchill's first acts was to attempt to save Antwerp by using the Naval Division — a formation which, in true character, he formed himself. The city fell, and Churchill was blamed for it and for risking the division. Nevertheless his effort did hold the Germans at bay for a week, upset their timetable, and helped to stabilize the Allied left flank.

Far more important was Churchill's involvement in the Gallipoli campaign. During the winter of 1914-1915, fighting on the Western Front had settled into a pattern, where hundreds of thousands of soldiers were "chewing barbed wire," to use Churchill's words. The British War Council was looking for a means of exerting the major source of military power available to it — naval power.

Various places were considered where British forces could be landed to strike at the enemy. Originally Churchill had thought the Gallipoli peninsula could be seized and the Dardanelles forced. Later his active mind also considered seizing islands in the Baltic Sea and making a descent on northern Germany.

CHURCHILL ... eased out

Early in 1915, Churchill was advised that the Dardanelles might be pried open by the weight of naval fire alone. The thought of the British fleet getting within gun range of the Turkish capital was exciting, and the prize seemed worth the risk. At Churchill's urging the decision was made and the fateful campaign undertaken.

The author's account of the Gallipoli campaign and the day-to-day decisions made at the highest military and political levels concerning it is excellent. Gilbert has had access to a tremendous range of government and personal documents. In addition he has interviewed many people who played a part in the events he describes which brings further light on Churchill's energy, ambition and plans.

The resignation of the erratic and unstable First Sea Lord, Admiral Fisher, brought about changes in the cabinet. Churchill was eased out of power to mollify Conservative opponents whom the Prime Minister, Asquith, sought to placate in order to present a united front to the nation.

The Dardanelles hung like a millstone around Churchill's neck. Control of the campaign passed from the navy to the army, but although he lost control of the enterprise, the blame for its failure continued to be attached to his name.

Left with neither voice nor influence in the inner councils of the war, Churchill resigned from the cabinet and left to join his regiment in France. After a brief six-week experience in trench warfare with the Grenadier Guards, he was given command of a Scottish infantry battalion at the front.

During the five months at the front, Churchill's unit was in the front line for 100 days. His enthusiasm, originality and care for his men had a great impact on all ranks. If he never had occasion to lead them in a major attack, his contempt for danger and his quick grasp of the problems of trench warfare left no doubt in anyone's mind that he would have become a dead hero or an outstanding military leader.

In the spring of 1916, when his battalion was amalgamated with another, Churchill returned to political life in England. At this stage of his career, his fortunes were at their lowest ebb. It is at this point the author leaves him, rather battered but by no means bowed, restless to regain power, and busily engaged in framing a platform from which his voice can be heard again.

This would have been a better book if it had been shorter. The innumerable quotations from Churchill to his wife, although revealing, might have been condensed.

The same is true of much of the correspondence quoted in the book. Although some of the details will be intensely interesting to historians in the military and diplomatic fields, the general reader could have caught the portrait of the man without examining every brush stroke.

Despite this drawback, Churchill the man comes through on every page, and marching with him are Asquith, Kitchener, Fisher, Lloyd George and a host of others. The reader is in good company.

Our Poets But Other Tongues

By FRED CAWSEY

Volvox is a double threat book.

It is not only a good anthology of Canadian poetry, but also a reminder of the many cultural influences that contribute to the Canadian heritage.

VOLVOX: Poetry from the Unofficial Languages of Canada in English Translation. Edited by J. Michael Yates. Sono Nis Press. $7.95.

To many in this nation of immigrants, the native language is neither English nor French. The fact that people come to Canada from all over the world — and bring their differences with them — is the basic premise of Volvox.

Editor J. Michael Yates has selected poetry from 28 Canadian poets who still write in their native languages, and while the poems appear in English translation, reflections of the many cultures remain apparent.

There is the cool eloquence of the Japanese, the romantic vision of the Hungarian, the precise imagery of the German. Also included are poems from the Lithuanian, Turkish, Rumanian, Polish, Spanish, Icelandic, Arabic, Yiddish, Russian, Estonian, Italian, Czech and Ukrainian. Some poems were translated by the authors, others by translators.

The quality of the poetry in Volvox is generally very good, especially as in the poems by George Faludy, Andrez Busza, Nicholas Catanoy and Robert Zend.

But one of the best things about Volvox is that it brings together the viewpoints of many cultures in poetry. The only problem is that this great idea was not carried far enough; there are some obvious omissions.

For example, there are no poems from the Chinese, although Canada has a large Chinese population. Also missing are poems from native Indians, as well as from East Indian, African and Hebrew poets. But these are omissions which may have been caused by space limitations.

In all, Yates has put together a selection of poetry which is both good and readable.

It also highlights the essence of Canadian culture. The first poem in the book, a poem by T. Hiramatus called The Fish, seems to tie it together:

"A long way from home
They have been brought
And yet, these goldfish . . .
Already seem to enjoy
Swimming in Canadian waters."

THE SAGA OF 'ULYSSES'

By RICHARD F. SHEPARD

When it first appeared, James Joyce's revolutionary novel, "Ulysses," was not a ripple-causing literary pebble; it was a tidal wave washing away accepted standards for writing.

Over the years, John Dos Passos, William Faulkner, Samuel Beckett and Saul Bellow, among many eminent writers, found narrative techniques in "Ulysses" and adapted them to their own works.

This week on the 50th birthday of the book and the 90th birthday of its author, the novel continues to be a work of formidable stature and steady, worldwide success.

In the United States, Random House, which has published "Ulysses" since 1934, when a court ruled that it was not obscene, has sold 880,000 copies. Of these, 544,000 have been in the Modern Library Giant edition, 69,000 in the regular edition, and, since 1967 275,000 in the Vintage paperback. This book is now selling 33,500 copies a year.

In London, the Society of Authors, agents for Joyce's works, know of publications in a Babel of tongues, from Serbo-Croatian to Japanese, including a Soviet Russian-language edition that brings in no royalties.

The Bodley Head, publisher of "Ulysses" since 1936, when the censorship was lifted in Britain, has sold 350,000 hard-cover copies, including the original edition and a new edition in 1960. Paperback rights were sold to Penguin in 1967 for $180,000, the highest price Penguin had ever paid for such an arrangement.

Starting with Penguin's limited edition in 1968 and continuing with a major printing the following year, soft-cover sales have totaled 300,000.

All of this is a far cry from the manuscript few dared to touch in the first third of the century, when publishers said it was too obscene, too obscure or too sensational.

Through Ezra Pound, the poet, the Little Review in New York began serializing some of the chapters Joyce had finished in 1917, but the magazine was soon suppressed. At the same time in London, Harriet Shaw Weaver's Egoist ran parts of "Ulysses," but stopped when the printer refused to continue setting it.

Sylvia Beach, a young American expatriate who operated the Shakespeare and Co. Bookshop in Paris, decided to turn publisher just for "Ulysses," with the help of Adrienne Monnier, a friend of hers who operated a bookshop near her own.

For those who could get copies — they could not be sent to Ireland, Britain or the United States legally — "Ulysses" was a tremendous jolt. Some of the first reviewers, according to Richard Ellman, a Joyce biographer, were "baffled and repelled, but most were baffled and enthusiastic."

In the early 1930's, Bennett Cerf, head of Random House, arranged for publication of "Ulysses" in the U.S.

CHILDREN'S SHELF

The Pendulum Swings From Sugar to Gloom

By JUDITH TERRY

What was a healthy reaction against the escapism of children's books has now turned into a positive mania: the sandharin families who never exchanged a cross word, the children who took off unsupervised at the drop of a hat for the next adventure, have been superseded by parents divorced or on the brink of it, and children beset by poverty, psychotics and every conceivable problem.

It is, of course, a reflection of the modern feeling that gloomy realities are the true ones and that truth should always be spoken openly before children.

The problem is simply one of saturation: every new children's book is so full of gloomy truth that one feels it is not only one-sided but just too discouraging.

Ruth M. Arthur's book, The Little Dark Thorn, is in this tradition. It is a book for older girls, a first-person narrative that traces the growing-up of a half-English, half-Malayan girl, Merrie, who is brought to live in England.

She and her father have a very unsatisfactory relationship, which in turn causes trouble between him and his new wife, a marriage which breaks up temporarily after the accidental drowning of their child, Merrie's half-sister.

THE LITTLE DARK THORN, by Ruth M. Arthur. McClelland and Stewart. $5.95.

Quite a list of horrors, though not horrific so much as melodramatic and sometimes a little tedious.

Merrie's forebodings about the black heart of the lake are as unconvincing as the gold doubloons the Hardy boys are always discovering, and the eventual drowning of her little sister there is consequently less affecting.

In fact the style, of a somewhat banal simplicity, cannot match the climaxes in the story, and Merrie's first stirrings of romance descend into the typical cliche: "I don't quite know how it happened, but I turned to him and hid my face against his chest. His arms came round me, protective and comfortingly strong, and I clung to him, rubbing my cheek against the roughness of his shirt. It seemed the most natural thing to do, and I felt I wanted to stay like that for ever."

It is a readable story and honest, following faithfully in the tradition of gloomy realism without adding any lustre to it.

THE BOY, THE RAT, AND THE BUTTERFLY, by Beatrice de Regniers. Illustrated by Haig and Regina Shekerjian. McClelland and Stewart. $4.95.

Beatrice de Regniers has produced a number of books for children, and like her earlier ones, The Boy, the Rat, and the Butterfly has an unhurried sympathy and gentleness that demands a quiet and listening mood in the child. As before, the tone is distinctive and a little different.

The boy, the rat and the butterfly discover a magic straw and a wishing solution, and each in turn makes a wish. There is no more to the narrative than that, but the interesting feature is that Mrs. de Regniers is writing an almost wholly instructive book.

It is done quite differently from the old tales that told you how Tom went skating on the ice when he had particularly been forbidden, fell through it and was drowned. Those stories underestimated the child's intelligence, and Mrs. de Regniers does not do that.

There are no lectures on behavior here, but there are all sorts of overtones: the poetic rat, who likes to think of himself as a rat of refinement, and quotes from Keats and Shelley, sees his wish take shape as a rat made entirely of flowers, which rapidly fades into an enormous cheese; and all three characters are called Peter.

It is a comment on living perhaps a little pretentious because it is more comment than story, but written with a skillful humor and delicacy that gives it a great deal of charm.

AND MISS CARTER WORE PINK, by Helen Bradley. Clarke, Irwin. $6.25.

And Miss Carter Wore Pink, Scenes from an Edwardian Childhood is one of those picture books that need no text at all: one immediately reaches for it because it looks, and is, so beautiful.

At sixty, the author, Mrs. Helen Bradley, took up painting, initially to show her granddaughter what life was like when she was a little girl in the early 1900s. Since then she has held several successful exhibitions.

This book, obviously goes back to the germ of her inspiration and seeks to bring alive for other children the pleasure her granddaughter must have experienced, though it is not a book for children alone.

The paintings are delightful and excellently reproduced. The crowded scenes are rich in detail and depicted in clear, delicate colors that are nostalgic but not detrimental. The introduction is pleasant to read, but it is largely duplicated by the comments beneath each picture.

There must have been a way of providing a more informative and unified text, but since the pictures themselves are so absorbing perhaps it doesn't really matter.

ORLANDO THE MARMALADE CAT KEEPS A DOG, by Kathleen Hale. Clarke, Irwin. $3.60.

Orlando the marmalade cat has been popular in England for many years, and he deserves to be better known in Canada, for most children enjoy his adventures with his dear wife Grace and three mischievous kittens.

Orlando Keeps a Dog, now in a new edition, was first published in 1948, and stands the test of time well.

The pictures may seem, like Babar, a little old-fashioned, but there is an inventive humor and gaiety about the detail: fishhead nosegays and claw-proof hose in Mr. Cattermole's Cats' shop window; animated brussels sprouts in the field as the train goes by; the hippo who answers the advertisement for a clean, honest, loving pet by putting her head through the dining-room window and saying "Ere I be! Lovin' and honest and fond of me barf!"

The story, once past a rather cloying opening section, is fun too. The dog is a poodle named Bill with an engaging character and a great eagerness for walks. Grace finds herself being taken for a "whizz" instead of taking Bill for a walk.

"I feel so happy," she says, as she sails through the air on the end of the lead, "My heart is like a harp with the wind blowing tunes upon it."

Altogether light-hearted, unpretentious and pleasing.

TUSYA AND THE POT OF GOLD, by Yaroslava. McClelland and Stewart. $5.50.

Tusya and the Pot of Gold is a Russian folk-tale from the Ukraine, re-told and illustrated by Yaroslava. It is one of the humorous droll stories that children enjoy so much, with gossipy wife who is persuaded to believe in doughnuts growing on a pear tree and a rabbit caught from the river.

The pictures, appropriately done in the old Ukrainian style of reverse glass painting, are in brilliant color and simple line. Even the geese and pigs are plump and smiling, and the curves and goodnature are echoed in the careful design of the pages.

It is a production typical of the high standards so often achieved in picture books nowadays.

Thousand Men Sold Us Out

By PAT BARCLAY

If you happen to be an ardent Canadian nationalist, chances are you've already read this book. But if you're still mildly wondering what all the fuss is about, Sold American! can provide, at least some of the answers.

It is not intended as a serious rival to, say, Kari Levitt's Silent Surrender, the book which first produced figures to show that "Over the years 1957 to 1965, 85 per cent of the funds used to expand U.S. controlled industry in Canada was provided from Canadian domestic savings."

SOLD AMERICAN! by Philippe J. Brossard. Peter Martin Associates. $2.95.

But Sold American! does perhaps fill a useful role by discussing our economic ills in fast-paced, easy language, heavily laced with the personal histories of hard-pressed Canadian businessmen who found they had no option but to "sell out."

The villain of the piece? Ourselves! According to Brossard, most of the blame for the rapid foreign takeover of the Canadian economy in recent years (exports of foreign-controlled companies reached 41 per cent of total Canadian exports in 1967) lies squarely at the feet of some one thousand men "who have a stranglehold on the centres of economic power and decision-making in the nation."

This "economic elite" has, in effect, "induced Canadians to invest their savings south of the border while, simultaneously, helping foreigners to acquire Canadian properties."

The rest of the blame Brossard assigns to Canadian laws and government policies which, however well intentioned, have had the effect of favoring foreign buyers over domestic ones.

Brossard never adequately explains why citizens of a country should be so eager to undermine it, but perhaps the answer lies in his description of the "psychological damage that has been done to Canadians." As members of a branch plant economy we have developed, over the years, a branch plant mentality.

"We have come to believe the great lie — that we need American capital to keep Canada's economy growing. And we have come to believe a host of lesser lies, too — that Canadians are not as successfully competitive as Americans; that Canadian businessmen don't know how to hustle; that only the Americans can do effective industrial research and develop new products and techniques; that only Americans know how to manage large and complex business enterprises."

This kind of thinking would be understandable in the kind of Canadian who gets his information about this country's affairs from publications like Time and Readers' Digest. But surely the members of our "economic elite" are sophisticated enough to know better? Aren't they?

Sold American! is certainly not the best of the new crop of books on the weaknesses of the Canadian economy, but it is a readable and always interesting one. The author has appended a list of 12 related titles. He must have hoped his readers would find their nationalist hackles sufficiently raised to want to learn more.

Henry's Court

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Anyone who watched the Six Wives of Henry VIII on the box will treasure Neville Williams' new book about Henry's court.

It is not another biography nor is it a political history. Instead, we are invited to linger over "ships and sails and sealing-wax," the minutiae of everyday life in the household of the King.

HENRY VIII AND HIS COURT, by Neville Williams. Collier-Macmillan. $12.

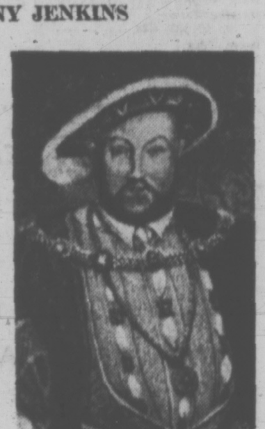
In the process, the characters of all six wives stand out sharply in the differences between their household account-books, their personal tastes, and in the way court life changed as the heads rolled.

Even before Anne Boleyn became Queen she had persuaded Henry to enlarge Wolsey's palace of York House as their new residence (it is now Whitehall), and neighboring houses were compulsorily destroyed to fulfill the grandiose plans of the social-climbing lady-in-waiting. By the time the palace was finished, it was "twice the size of Pope Clement's Vatican."

Queen Jane Seymour, on the other hand, took things more coolly. She chose for her motto "Bound to obey and serve." Her first aim was to reconcile the Princess Mary (Katherine of Aragon's daughter) to her royal father.

As for the King himself, Henry introduced a new style in the English court. At the beginning of his reign he had no palace in London except for some dingy apartments in the Tower and the medieval Baynard's Castle in Thames Street, which was little more than a city house.

By the end of the reign Wolsey's treasures had fallen into his grasp and the Thames valley was dotted with Henry's sumptuous palaces. Life at court was stamped with the monarch's personal imprint. He used his court to advertise his power to his fellow monarchs in Europe. Henry's glamor attracted artists from all over the Continent. On his payroll were painters, men of letters, some 60 musicians and the choristers of the Chapel Royal. The Renaissance had reached the English court.



HENRY VIII ... a new style

Neville Williams is Britain's Deputy Keeper of Public Records; he has conveyed the glittering pageantry of Henry's palaces in the splendid illustrations around which he has woven his lively text.

There are ground-plans of long-ruined halls, details of woodcarvings and statuary, a whole series of Holbein portraits and, of course, pictures of all the leading personalities of the reign. It is a beautiful book in every way.

We ask just the minimum information needed to issue your policy—without health questions and long investigations, and with absolutely no physical exam or red tape of any kind! It's all done in complete confidence in the privacy of your own home, and we pledge no salesman will ever call!

We at Laurier Life believe in making it easier for you to get the basic, cash-value life insurance you need and deserve. We also believe you should pay just one level premium for as long as you need and want the protection. That's why we offer this fine protection for only $5.95 a month—regardless of your age, health or occupation. It's an ideal amount because it's so easy to afford!

Simply complete your Enrollment Form and send with 25¢ for your first month and we guarantee to issue you the cash-value life insurance listed for your age.

Growth Life offers you all three of these popular features!

Your family gets immediate accident benefits—every last cent—should fatal accident strike you at home, on the job or anywhere in the world—24 hours a day! This is the feature that covers you for the greatest threat to your family's well-being—an accident when they're completely dependent on you for all their wants and needs!

Your family security is protected against death due to all natural causes by "builder benefits" that grow to full protection in three short years! Your coverage increases each year, growing from the first year through the second and third—then full protection for everything every year for the rest of your life!

EMERGENCY CASH BOX

When you need to borrow, cash savings can come to your rescue in emergencies like these:

- ✓ UNEXPECTED ILLNESS
- ✓ SUDDEN UNEMPLOYMENT
- ✓ AN ACCIDENT THAT STRIKES WITHOUT WARNING
- ✓ EMERGENCY REPAIRS
- ✓ BURGLARIES
- ✓ TAXES

Prominent Canadians agree...

"Laurier Life clients benefit when they deal directly with this Canadian company. First, low rates are possible since no medical examination is required and no one will call. Second, premium rates are uniform for all classes of risk. Finally, it is an economic way to increase one's insurance protection free from pressure."

—The Honorable Dr. Orville H. Phillips, P.C., D.D.S., Member of the Canadian Senate.

"In offering low-cost life and health insurance by mail, you are rendering a valuable service to thousands of people who have no other opportunity to avail themselves of such protection. It is reassuring to know that policyowners insured by Laurier Life have received more than $7,500,000.00 in claim benefits since 1965."

—Hon. Lt. Col. J. H. Roy.

You get cash values to use any way you wish or to borrow for emergencies! Once your cash values begin to grow, you have a personal, systematic savings reserve that increases year after year and earns money for you, too! It's like a savings account that builds a "nest egg" you can borrow on or even "cash in" any time you wish!

And it's an emergency fund that's always there when you need cash for any crisis. The money is available to you promptly—without question—at less than today's inflated interest rates!

Growth Life is a sensible blend of these most-sought-after features and it's priced so low you can't afford to be without it—particularly if you're among thousands of Canadians over 50 who could never get this kind of protection before.

Why you need the protection of Growth Life.

You've seen how inflation has eaten away a large chunk of your dollar's buying power! Your pension, your savings, your investments, even your life insurance, simply won't do what you intended them to when you first made your plans.

Consider how fast prices have risen in the past five years and you'll see just how little your money will buy today—then consider how much more expensive it will be five, ten, fifteen years from now! That's why you may be dangerously under-insured at this very moment! That's why you need the extra protection that Growth Life gives you!

Now, extra protection you need at payments you can afford!

To help you afford this extra protection, you pay only $5.95 a month—regardless of your age, health or occupation. This gives you the security you want ...plus savings that grow as years go by, building a cash reserve for emergencies.

What's more, if you feel you need even more insurance, Growth Life offers two, three, even four times more cash-value life insurance than is listed! (See chart at right for all the details!)

Why your payments are lower than you'd expect.

Doing business directly with you reduces our overhead costs, lowers our payroll, underwriting and policy issue costs. Without salesmen, interviews, investigations, or examinations, our friendly, direct way of doing business reduces "sales costs"—one of the largest items of expense for all insurance companies—so we can give you the valuable protection you need at a payment you can afford! Also, through our "builder benefit" feature we're able to eliminate excessive early claims costs which would otherwise push up your rates.

We can never cancel your policy!

As long as you pay your premiums we can never cancel your policy. In fact, after your policy has been in force 2 years, it is completely incontestable, guaranteeing you life-long protection. You, of course, can cancel at any time!

Your plan is backed by a Canadian company you can trust...

Laurier Life Insurance Company is a financially sound, federally and provincially licensed company, managed by highly respected, knowledgeable executives. This dedicated group of professionals serves over 60,000 Canadians in all walks of life across the length and breadth of Canada.

Music in Any Idiom

audrey johnson

Paul Horn is one of a small but growing colony of professional musicians who now call Victoria, home — and gladly.

Accounted one of the great jazz musicians of North America, he has opted out of the fevers and pressure of life in the U.S. and found a retreat within sound, sight and scent of the sea in Gordon Head.

If you visit him there, as I did this week, you will probably be greeted warmly by his slim, dark attractive wife, Tryntje (it's Dutch) and will first meet his two large bassett hounds lolling on a black leather couch.

The slow chromatic sound of a piano being tuned vibrates through the house while the melancholy bassetts look on at all intruders with Olympian tolerance.

Then Horn, slight, dark and boyish, joins you and you settle down in his office-den over huge steaming mugs of wonderful coffee.

The den has the comfortable individual aura of a familiar well-worn coat. It's inhabited by a large old roll-top desk, a comfortable rocking chair, musical instruments, books and a pin-up miscellany of Horn's record covers, concert handbills and brochures.

We start talking about the current series of Victoria Symphony concerts at which he and his quintet are guest artists — one at Duncan, three at the Royal Theatre, one at Campbell River.

The first part of the program is devoted to Rimsky-Korsakov's lushly orchestrated Scheherazade; the second involving Horn and the quintet, to the jazz compositions of Lalo Schiffrin and David Amram.

Some conservative concert goers have expressed surprise, even consternation, at the confrontation, but "there is nothing at all incongruous in combining jazz and classical music on one program," says Horn.

"Good music is good music whatever the idiom and the source of creativity is the same no matter what style the music evolves in."

Prejudice against a work before it has even been heard puzzles him. "How can you possibly know what you like if you haven't experienced it."

Paul, Tyrntje and pal

One of the principal elements of jazz is improvisation which, as Horn points out, was a highly regarded art on the concert platforms particularly of the Baroque and post-Baroque eras.

Only a fine musician can be a good improviser and only a master instrumentalist can thoroughly exploit the art. We agree that this explains why jazz musicians are among the world's most versatile.

A majority of good jazz players are also, on occasion, competent classical performers.

In the Shiffrin and Amram numbers on the current symphony program, while the orchestra plays from full score, the quintet part is mostly improvised and the solo flute — Paul Horn — is altogether improvisation.

"Consequently in each performance there are differences," he points out.

How does this affect the symphony players?

"The orchestra is amazingly good," he replies. "They are responsive and disciplined and they sight-read extremely well. In fact the Victoria Symphony is better than many orchestras in cities at least twice the size of this one.

Horn has a very special affinity for youth. One reviewer, writing of him said: "I can't think of a better experience for any aspiring young musician than for him to hear and meet Paul Horn in person."

So he is especially pleased, and the young people of Victoria are most fortunate, in the decision by the Symphony Society to extend the range of this series to include the special youth concert Tuesday.

This "Youth Concert" is to take place at the Royal Theatre at 8 p.m. In addition to the scheduled program there will be a few additional numbers by Horn and the Quintet, especially for the young audience.

"I hope to get a dialogue going across the footlights," he says, "with myself and Mr. Gati and the audience all getting involved."

Horn's renown as a great jazz flautist encompasses the prestigious Newport and Monterey Jazz Festivals and the Italian Bologna Festival, as well as work with numerous orchestras, bands and ensembles in major music and entertainment centres since 1948.

His instrumental expertise includes the clarinet family and saxophone. "I did a lot of studio work in Hollywood, recording for films. And when a stuido calls you they expect you to be flexible. You have to be prepared to double — which means play more than one instrument."

A less well known aspect of Horn's life is his interest in and practise of transcendental mediation.

"I began by myself, but after I had met the Maharishi on one of his visits to the United States, I made up my mind to attend his Academy of Meditation in the Himalayas."

This he did in 1967. He says he had no intention of becoming a teacher, but as things turned out it seemed he had that ability.

Aside from teaching and performing music at many universities throughout the States, he has lectured and taught system transcendantal mediation at UCLA, the University of California at Berkeley, and other universities on both sides of the border.

At the moment he is participating in the University of Victoria's Continuing Education spring program, presenting a course of lectures in the science of creative intelligence.

ART

Nothing Is Created

"Over ice in a tumbler, 2 ozs. fresh Rosenquist, equal quantity crushed Oldenburg. Shake well. Twist of Olitski and Ed Ruscha to taste. Top with chilled Lichenstein."

This recipe, lettered in heavy Cooper black type, fills the lower half of a photo-silkscreen print by Eric Brown. A colored photograph of a cocktail being poured from shaker into glass completes this satire on artists' habit of collecting influences and synchronizing them to create works of fresh personality.

That there is nothing new in the arts, only elaborations on what came before, is not just the realization of Eric Brown; many artists have chanted in unison, "Nothing is created. All is stolen." There is an entire world and thousands of artists to steal from. Unique art, like the artists themselves, cannot be born out of a vacuum. Hopefully borrowings take on a personal aspect when played with.

In the Signal Hill gallery, hung on the wall immediately below, "In Cocktail," is another photosilk-screen called Classical Facade.

Standing opposite old buildings in London, England, Eric Brown had an assistant hold up a silver, flexible sheet of plastic. Brown photographed the architecture reflected in the wavy plastic; the distortions rival those in a carnival Fun House.

However, the liquid buildings, when printed, resembled to Brown the complicated interior workings of an air-cooled engine with its curved louvres. To solidify the machine association called up by the flowing buildings, the artist added nuts, bolts and screws.

The impression that this was a motor would sit foremost, cut off from very different origins, were it not for tiny warped cars, bending along a warped street, hidden in the print.

I cannot say where this idea was stolen from. It started when Brown set out to visually destroy London monuments, contorting their proud stance in the silver convolutions of his reflector. He photographed Nelson's Column, twisted like a falling snake.

Eric Brown is an English artist teaching at UVic. He lives with his family at the Signal Hill Creative Centre.

The gallery at the Centre is opened only on weekends. While Pat Martin-Bates, the gallery director, had hoped to win an Opportunities for Youth Grant to allow the hiring of a full-time clerk, the application was fouled. Participants in the show must pay a $5 hanging fee which falls short of costs.

Gail Bindloss exhibits her leather work in the gallery. She made a series of purses and belts. One purse is shaped like a raspberry and is made of soft red suede. A Valentine-shaped purse with a lateral zipper on the side opens to expose a set of white leather teeth. The zipper of another Valentine purse reveals an eye. This well crafted leather work, with a Pop art wit, sells for give-away prices.

Gail should not be exhibiting in a gallery when her work could be sold quickly in an accessory shop; placed among the competition the design of this leather work will upstage most female accessories now available.

This show, which will hang for another three weekends, is the second organized at the new Signal Hill Gallery. The participants are mostly students and there is a measure of immature work that should not be on the walls. That the gallery provides opportunity to young artists should not preclude guiding their set of values. Many of the artists are those who took part in the first show.

The Film series, Museum Without Walls, continues at the Victoria Public Gallery with two showings each Wednesday, at one in the afternoon and again at 8 p.m. Initially the series was available only by subscribing to the full five weeks of showing. But there are individual seats available at the door. Films for the coming Wednesday are The Art Conservator, Kinetic Art in Paris, and The Impressionists.

Sooke Schools Drama Festival

Fourteen teams have entered the third annual Sooke Schools Drama Festival which opens Monday.

The event will be hosted at various schools in the area and will run through the week to Friday when an honor performance of plays chosen by the adjudicator, Colin Gorrie, will be presented at Belmont Senior Secondary.

All evening sessions being at 8. The only afternoon session will take place at Millstream elementary, Tuesday at 1 p.m.

For the opening Monday at Glen Lake Elementary, the host school, John Stubbs and Langford Elementaries will present plays.

The schedule for the rest of the week is as follows:

Tuesday afternoon, Millstream primary and intermediate groups at Millstream; Tuesday night, Saseenos Elementary and Edward Milne Junior and Senior Secondaries at Edward Milne; Wednesday, Happy Valley Elementary and Dunsmuir Junior (two entries) at Dunsmuir; Thursday, Savory Elementary, Elizabeth Fisher Junior and Belmont Senior at Belmont.

Griffin Hunts Record Artists

By RON ROBINSON
CJVI Program Director

Merv Griffin may be losing his CBS television series but there's no chance any benefits will have to be held for him. Over the years the talk-show host has built up a sizable entertainment business complex which continues to expand. In addition to his many radio station and television show properties Griffin has recently entered the artist management field, and is about to introduce his own record label. Merv will record for Griffin records himself, but the main emphasis will be on finding and developing new artists. And although the TV show is off the network it continues on a "syndication" or "station-by-station" basis, which is how the star originally gained great success. The TV show is planned as the vehicle by which the new talent will be introduced, the same artists who will be recording for Merv.

The Canadian radio industry is now into "phase two" of the CRTC's Canadian content music regulations. Whereas in 1971 only one Canadian-participation qualification had to be met, effective last month all new material must qualify by fulfilling two of those requirements. The key word here is "new"; all songs and records which have already qualified as Canadian will always continue to be so regarded. It is only new recordings which will have to satisfy the more stringent regulation. The four qualifying conditions concern the "principal performer" on a record, the composer, the lyricist, and the country in which it was recorded. If any two are Canadian the selection qualifies. And 30 per cent of all music aired must be so designated.

Heed the Bugs, It's Their World Too

MOVIES
peter mcnelly

The best change-of-pace movie in town is the Hellstrom Chronicle.

This David Wolper production sounds like a science fiction tale, but it's really a documentary on insects.

Nils Hellstrom is the mythical scientist who gives his name to the title and narrates the episodes. With glinting eyes and a script which is pure Rod Serling Twilight Zone bumphery, he takes us on a visual journey to prove the point that insects are better suited to survival than man.

What's worse, says the good and slightly unbalanced professor, the six-legged creatures are getting their best help from man himself.

Despite its corny-comic method of generating fear and concern, The Hellstrom Chronicle is totally without nonsense in its photography of insect behavior.

It was checked for accuracy by several entymologists and prepared with technical assistance from the California Institute of Technology and the University of California at Los Angeles, among other institutions.

The movie leaves you with the feeling that insects can adapt to anything. They survived radioactive bombardment and pesticide clouds. Insects, says Hellstrom, have been at it for 300 million years, man for a mere 50 million.

The photography is richly colored and done in great close-up detail: A titanic battle between termites and ants, a fight to death between bees and invading wasps, the one-day swan song of mayflies, time-lapse shots of caterpillars becoming butterflies, moths mating at night.

Insects can do anything they have to do to survive because they co-operate. Their societies are organized with the ruthless efficiency Adolph Hitler respected.

But as the professor explains, the insect never kills needlessly and always dies for a purpose. Unlike man. Our drive to exploit the earth for personal comfort, says the film, has ironically weakened our chances of survival and enhanced those for insects.

A telling moment is a discussion with a farmer who explains how he had to switch from DDT to combinations of DDT and stronger sprays to save his crops.

"I got 'em, finally," he says, "but now I've got to burn my crops. They're poisoned."

Meanwhile the pesticides run into the rivers and work their way back into our bones through food chains as ecological time bombs.

The insect returns next year, immune to last year's killer.

The Hellstrom Chronicle is feature length, but seems to zip by because of balanced timing. No scene is longer than our attention will stand, and the film makes its case with 100 examples.

The message is clearly that we must learn to cooperate or destroy ourselves in the anarchistic pursuit of happiness. Even if you don't buy the message, you can't leave the threatre without admiring these fragile creatures whose strength is their versatility, numbers and organization.

It's their world, too.

DEBORAH KERR
. . . a lady to the end

Deborah Had to Fight To Tilt Her Tiara

By CATHERINE STOTT

LONDON — It was just like a scene from an old Deborah Kerr movie.

There, in a heavily blue-brocaded drawing-room, was Deborah Kerr, impeccably dressed in a tweed suit of couture cut, pale hair sleekly pulled back, pouring out cups of tea and putting the milk in after, and asking in tinkling tones, like a spoon touching a china cup, if you would care for a "shattering" pastry.

She is modesty personified, and her favorite adjective when talking about herself is naive. Of stardom and ambition she said, with lowered lashes as some women speak with vague distaste of sex, that she was not much bothered by that side of it.

But of course Deborah Kerr is unquestionably a lady, and ladies do not have to claw their way to the top but can afford to get there the nice way, in style. When they smile and incline their heads, producers fall on their knees. This leaves them with untroubled countenances when they are nearing their fifties.

For a film star, too, Miss Kerr has shown moderation in all things; just two husbands and two children and, although she was six times nominated, never an Oscar.

Why is it that Deborah Kerr, who was spotted on her first stage appearance as a page to Pericles in Regent's Park in London 33 years ago, has survived as a star; when many of her contemporaries are either dead from drink or drugs, or by their own hand, or have sunk without trace like pirate ships?

Probably she was untouchable in some way. They never made a monkey out of her as they did other women stars, with padding and changing styles.

So she never dated when the style changed; she always remained Deborah Kerr, charming and changeless, year in year out, reminding no one of an era they'd rather forget. Even though her fame was such that her picture was on the cover of 15 Japanese magazines at once, no gossip columnist ever grew fat on tidbits picked up from her private life.

All in all, she admitted, she was terribly lucky — frustrated, but lucky. She had gone to Hollywood in 1946, after making a dozen films here, and had felt like she was going back to boarding-school "with a total fright of everybody."

Needlessly, as it turned out, since in fantasyland everyone put her on a pedestal right from the start and treated her like some rare bloom instead of the just-so-much-meat-for-display technique accorded other women stars.

But it overprotected her, she said, and she uttered the rare complaint that the moguls were too respectful toward her because they were under fire for taking our girls and making them, as she put it, "too common."

"They handed me my tiara before I opened my mouth," she sighed, "so determined were they not to deflower this English rose, and it took me a long time to shake it off.

"You don't have to put a girl like me in a high collar to make me look well-bred, if you see what I mean. What I actually needed was a couple of low-cut dresses to stop this image perpetuating itself, but I didn't get them.

"It was frustrating to see them constantly searching for princesses and English ladies for me to play. Yet this Great Machine brought me the worldwide recognition and popularity you just don't get any more."

When she eventually broke out of the English lady mold (actually I don't believe she broke the mold itself since it has lingered on in her private life to this day), it was with two astonishing roles.

The first was in "Tea and Sympathy," which was the last time she appeared on stage, in 1953. Twenty years ago, when the curtain fell on a 36-year-old woman going to bed with an 18-year-old boy to resolve his doubts as to his heterosexuality, it was strong meat.

Miss Kerr was actually greeted with cries of "sinful whore." She was also pestered backstage by mothers doubtful of their sons' masculinity, who sighed, "if only my Bertie could meet a woman like you." All very liberating, she found it, and she spoke of it with great if tinkling relish.

The other role in which she really won her acting spurs — which meant the right, for her, to play loose women — was in "From Here to Eternity" where she played that beach scene with Burt Lancaster.

"That was the toughest role I ever played," she said, "since I had to make myself into the absolute reverse of everything I am. The woman was not just American, but American American . . . no excuses there for my accent, about having been born in Boston or something. She was a nut. A rather pathetic nymphomaniac who was always seeking after something from a man, sexually, which she never found satisfying. To convince people that I was that kind of woman was the biggest challenge of my career."

The most exhausting part hadn't been the ghastly hours but the publicity. For when the great machine was at its peak, stars not actually filming were, she said, expected to spend at least four days a week doing publicity to fill the insatiable maw of the fan-magazine industry.

She was photographed in every conceivable banal situation. Lying captions purported to be beauty hints from the star, things like "Deborah keeps her cold cream in the ice-box." She was exempt, though, from the publicity department's manufactured romances on the grounds that she had a baby soon after arriving in Hollywood.

Images were so sacrosanct that while she was playing her ivory tower roles she was immune from the talons of the Hedder Hopper mobsters. The immunity vanished overnight after "From Here to Eternity."

"It was the first time they could associate me with anything remotely sexual," she said. "It started the ball rolling and little things began to appear in the columns saying that I had been seen in a club the night before with Frank Sinatra. Regrettably I never went out with Sinatra in my life."

Her irreproachability triumphed, of course, and no one ever did a scalpel job on her. Life being what it is, she thought she would be remembered for that beach scene and for "The King and I," though she would prefer to be remembered for "The Innocents" and "The Sundowners," for which she seems rather sad about not getting an Oscar.

Steam Bus Arrives—Auto in 60 Days

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Bill Lear has rolled out his first vapor-powered turbine engine vehicle for public inspection and predicts it will help clear urban smog

The 69-year-old industrialist inventor who developed the Lear Jet says he has spent $12 million and five years in developing the engine which powered a bus at the display for 200 persons Friday.

In short demonstration runs, observers noted that the bus'es steam power plant—which fits in the standard engine compartment—provides quieter, smoother acceleration than the standard diesel motor. Otherwise, the ride was like that of a normal bus.

Lear's company is one of three under contract with California agencies working on a low pollution bus under a U.S. department of transportation allocation.

"If I can drive up in front of the Capitol in Washington, D.C., with a bus which is as pollution-free as this one, the auto industry can no longer complain it can't be done," Lear said.

Lear said General Motors Corp sold him the bus for $1 because "they didn't want the liability in case our vapor engine blew up. But they have provided us with equipment and technical knowledge."

Lear said his vapor-turbine auto would be ready for public display in about 60 days.

JAPAN MISSION TO HANOI COUNTERS NIXON VISIT

TOKYO (WP) — With the Nixon visit to Peking less than two weeks away, two key foreign ministry emissaries from Tokyo have turned up in Hanoi on the first official Japanese mission to North Vietnam since the end of the Second World War.

Government spokesmen declined to discuss the purpose of the visit by the top officials of the foreign ministry's southeast Asian division. Informed sources suggested that the Hanoi initiative consciously has been timed to counter the Nixon move diplomatically and was discussed with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during his visit here two weeks ago.

Japanese press speculation stressed that Prime Minister Eisaku Sato may be seeking to use the Hanoi mission to offset the domestic impact of the Nixon visit in Japanese politics by projecting the image of a newly-independent diplomacy.

The Asahi newspaper chain said that the foreign ministry wants Japan to be included in any broadened Vietnam ceasefire negotiations resulting from the Paris talks between the U.S. and North Vietnam.

Japanese business leaders are hoping for a major share of lucrative, U.S.-financed reconstruction contracts expected in both North and South Vietnam following any cessation of hostilities and have long been concerned over Japan's exclusive links with Saigon.

Japan does not recognize Hanoi but has maintained modest trade ties with the Communist regime. In 1970, Japanese exports totalled $5 million while imports were valued at $6.3 million.

Forced Terms Strike Cause?

Compulsory arbitration causes more strikes than it solves, Ernie Hall (NDP — Surrey) told the legislature Friday.

Taking figures over 13 years from four countries — United Kingdom, Sweden, Australia and Canada, he said days lost per worker through strikes were highest, at .13, in Australia, which has labor courts and compulsory arbitration.

The principle of compulsory arbitration is not based on a need for understanding by the disputing parties, but involves the intrusion of a third party to make a binding settlement, he said.

The disputing parties thus had no responsibility to each other or to their members.

"And that leads to a loss of both union and management rights and is not in the interests of more peaceful industrial relations," he said.

"But the greatest argument against compulsory arbitration is that there is not a single shred of evidence that it decreases the incidence of strikes."

Hall also said B.C. is falling behind Quebec, Ontario and the federal government in protecting workers from plant shutdowns.

The "main fault" is the lack of legislated advance notice of such shut downs, noting that Ontario called for between eight and 16 weeks.

He criticized Labor Minister James Chabot for not saying "one word" in the house Thursday about unemployment, which had increased 25 per cent to 8.7 per cent of the B.C. work force between December and January.

Home Building Up In North Saanich

Housing construction boomed in North Saanich in 1971 with the municipality showing a total of $2,274,290 in building permits, up from $1,405,834 in 1970.

Sidney's 1971 total of building permits also showed a marked increase. The senior citizen's activity centre valued at $80,000 contributed to the 1971 figure of $3,582,061, compared with $2,318,591 in 1970.

Central Saanich, a municipality in which no subdivision development was allowed because adequately serviced land was not available, shows only $2,148,152 worth of building permits in 1971 compared with $2,492,908 in 1970.

Sidney leads in 1972 with $154,420 worth of construction with $181,690 one year ago. started in January compared

Central Saanich lists permits issued for $99,629 in January compared with $199,800 in 1971 and North Saanich has housing starts valued at $76,331 for the first month in 1972 compared with $181,690 in January 1971.

Illegitimate Births

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver medical health officer Dr. Gerald Bonham said illegitimate births made up 13.8 per cent of all births in the city in 1971. More than 40 per cent of all births to mothers under 19 years old are illegitimate, he said.

Chinese Say 'Same to You'

OTTAWA (CP) — Tien Ju Fu, head of a 13-member Chinese mining group on a fou-rweek tour of Canada, has invited a Canadian mining mission to visit China later this year.

At a luncheon Friday, Mr. Fu told Energy Minister Donald S. Macdonald that a Canadian visit would be warmly welcomed in his country.

No date has been set for the return mission, which will include representatives of government and industry.

CAESAR the lion is retired star

CAESAR'S SOLID

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Caesar wasn't much of a lion when the Ontario Humane Society brought him to a game farm near here in 1969.

He didn't roar much, was scared of the other lions, his feet hurt when he walked on bare ground, and he wouldn't chase girl lions.

Caesar, you see, was the star of a travelling wild west show and the only other animals he knew were in little cages.

In fact, he hadn't seen another lion for more than nine years.

The travelling show folded and Caesar needed a new home.

The home turned out to be the farm—500 acres to roam around in compared with the few square feet Caesar had adapted to.

It was quite a shock to the "king of beasts" but slowly Caesar recalled the prowess of his species and regained his pride.

Now, he roars louder than the other males and has a girl-friend.

He is also featured in a Grade 3 reader and his fame is spreading with the help of a federal tourism poster which is being distributed throughout North America to advertise the farm.

Denison Studies $10M Coal Pilot Plant in B.C.

Terms of a joint venture agreement with a Pennsylvania coal producer may compensate for a 60 per cent cutback by Denison Mines Ltd. in its mineral exploration budget this year.

Company officials in the West were non-committal on the news at Friday's annual meeting in Toronto that Denison was considering a $10 million pilot project for its Quintette Mountain coking coal prospect in northeastern B..C

CUT BACK

But the statement came following a drastic reduction in proposed spending by the mineral exploration divisions of Denison, a cutback that affects the Vancouver office by more than 60 per cent.

Shareholders were told Denison has before it a joint venture plan with Alco Standard Corp., of Valley Forge, Pa., to develop the Quintette reserves.

Probable reserves in the field amount to 250 million tons in place, Denison said. This compares with 311 million tons probable and 147 million tons proven in the southeastern B.C. holdings of Kaiser Resources Ltd., the largest coal mines in the country.

To proceed with a full-scale coal treatment plant of the magnitude indicated by probable and possible reserves would mean an outlay of $150 million to handle two to three million tons of coking coal a year.

The pilot plant would be capable of processing 250,000-300,000 tons a year, Denison said.

ACQUIRED IN 1970

leases acquired by Denison in

Deposits are located in the 124 square miles of coal 1970, about 120 miles northeast of Prince George.

The Quintette field lies some 75 miles southwest of Dawson Creek, between the Sukunka coal field and the Belcourt Creek deposit, which also is held by Denison.

By starting small, Denison said it hoped to avoid possible problems encountered by other operators (Kaiser was implied but not mentioned by name) who have had heavy expenses in attempting to correct deficiencies of full-scale preparation plants.

Barnes and Tucker Co., also of Valley Forge and wholly-owned operating subisidary of Alco Standard, agreed in 1970 to spend $1.75 million by the end of this year in exploring the Quintette property, in which it could earn a 49 per cent interest.

The program was launched a year ago under direction of Denison.

Since 1970 Kaiser and McIntyre Porcupine coal properties — the latter in northwestern Alberta — have come into production on behalf of the Japanese steel industry.

Kierans Slates Speech at UVic

He will speak in room 168 of the Elliott Building.

Arbitration Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Air traffic controllers, whose 11-day strike in January tied up almost all commercial air traffic, have voted 76 per cent in support of the agreement with the government that sent their contract dispute to arbitration.

The result of the vote was announced Friday by the executive of the 1,800-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association.

The vote was called following a protest by Ottawa-area union member Harry Thibault. He claimed the executive acted unconstitutionally when it agreed to arbitration and called on the controllers to go back to work Jan. 27.

Peru Expels Priest

LIMA, Peru (Reuter) — Spanish Jesuit Priest Jose Luis Gomez Morales was ordered to leave Peru and flew to Madrid last week. His order said he had been accused of "interfering in internal politics" but Roman Catholic sources said Father Gomez criticized what he called "the insensitive rich" during a sermon in the holiday resort of Mejia.

Fledgling Loop Switches, Names Superstars

QUEBEC CITY IN AS SAN FRANCISCO QUITS

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The fledgling World Hockey Association, which had indicated it wouldn't try to draft big-name National Hockey League players, reversed its field today and named NHL superstars Bobby Hull and Ken Dryden on a predraft "negotiation list."

Hull, the Chicago Black Hawks' left winger who has led the NHL in goals seven times, was the first pick of Winnipeg Jets. Dryden, the 24-year-old goalie and law student who was called up from the minors last year to lead Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup, was the top choice of Los Angeles Sharks.

The players were part of a list of 48 agreed on by the 12 teams in November and approved by WHA trustees Friday. Each team chose four players, including one goaltender, and nearly all were from the NHL, foreshadowing an expected bidding war.

The league is scheduled to begin play this fall.

WHA officials said all the NHL players selected in the negotiation list and the draft itself, which began today, had contracts that expired after this season. They said contact had been made with many of the players already.

However, Stan Mikita, the Black Hawks all-star centre picked by Chicago Cougars of the WHA, said in Chicago he had another year to go in his present contract "and I always try to live up to my contract." He said he hadn't heard from the new league.

Other NHL all-stars picked were centre Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, last year's top rookie, by Los Angeles; centre Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins and defenceman Bill White of the Black Hawks by Miami Screaming Eagles.

Also, right winger Bill Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars by Minnesota Fightin' Saints; defenceman Brad Park of New York Rangers by the nameless Ontario team, and goalie Gilles Villemure of New York and right winger John McKenzie of Boston by Quebec City, which was awarded a franchise Friday.

The Minnesota entry also chose Mike Curran, the sensational goalie on the U.S. Olympic hockey team.

Among the big names not on the negotiation list were Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito of Boston, Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield of New York, Tony Esposito of Chicago and Frank Mahovlich of Montreal. Mahovlich's brother Pete was picked by Minnesota.

Hull, probably the most glamorous name in pro hockey, wasn't available for comment. But in December he said reports that Winnipeg had offered him a million dollars to sign were a "pipe dream."

Dennis Murphy, an official of the Los Angeles Sharks and also the WHA's executive vice president, said he talked with Dryden in December and "he indicated to us that he'd listen."

Earlier this month, WHA officials said they didn't expect to make a pitch for NHL stars because they felt hockey wasn't as dependent on big names as football and baseball, where the formation of new leagues has been accompanied by lucrative offers to superstars of the older leagues.

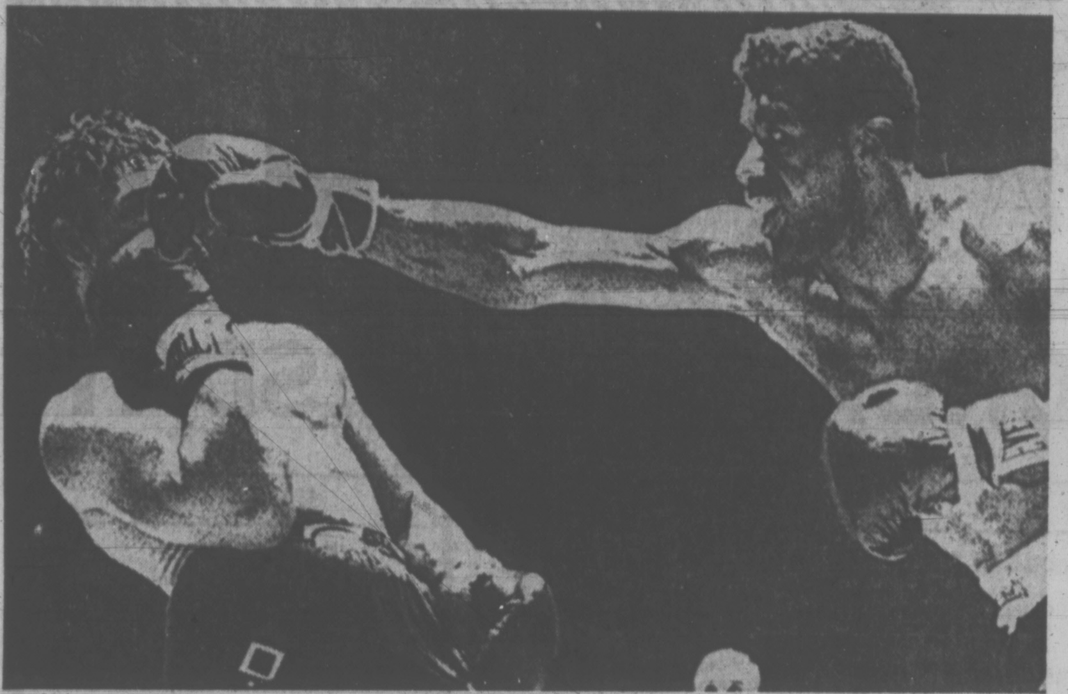
But Murphy explained:

"We've told everybody from day one that we're going to be a major league. We're not interested in minor league ball.

"That doesn't mean we're going to go out and sign everybody. But we're going to work at it. We expect to be on equal terms with the NHL in four or five years."

Bill Hunter, president of Edmonton Oil Kings in the new league, said Quebec City got its franchise when a San Francisco group withdrew.

He said the Quebec group of six businessmen headed by John Bruneau had sought the franchise for several months and the club would play its games in the Quebec City Coliseum.



LONG ARM OF VICTORY is demonstrated by former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson as he lashes with long right in bout with Oscar Bonavena Friday night in New York. Patterson came on after slow start to earn unanimous decision. (AP Wirephoto)

FLOYD'S NOT READY

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Patterson, elated with victory but disappointed at his performance, says he's not retiring but doesn't feel ready to fight world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

"I would like to fight Frazier when I'm ready but I don't think I'm ready yet,' Patterson said Friday night after a two-fisted rally in the final two rounds earned him a unanimous 10-round decision over brawling Oscar Bonavena at Madison Square Garden.

"I'm happy that I won, but not with the way I looked," said Patterson, 37, 191¾ pounds, the only man to twice win the heavyweight championship. "I'd like to get a little better before I fight Joe Frazier."

FRAZIER AT FIGHT

Frazier, who was among the 17,958 who attended the bout, said Patterson would earn a title shot if he defeated Bonavena.

Referee Johnny LoBianco, scored it 5-4-1 Patterson, judge Tony Castellano tabbed it 6-4 Patterson and judge Bill Recht tallied it 7-2-1 for the former champion.

Dagg Takes Opener; Perry Rink Toppled

Only one of the Victoria rinks posted a victory in first-round competition of the Pacific Coast Curling Association mixed playdowns Friday at the Victoria Curling Club.

Keith Dagg's quartet scored four on the third end and stole two more on the fourth en route to a 12-6 decision over Gary Sigurdson of Cloverdale, one of the two Fraser Valley zone representatives, in the double-loss elimination competition.

Dagg, a PCCA finalist last year, also was the only Vancouver Island representative to post a victory.

MATHESON LOSES

Trev Fisher of New Westminster, the other Fraser Valley rep, displayed some strength by topping Don Matheson of Victoria, 7-4. Three points on the fifth end swung the match to Fisher's favor.

Chuck Perry of Courtenay, the defending PCCA champion, fell victim to the Vancouver foursome skipped by Ken Neuman, 9-4. Neuman racked up four points on the second end and stole two more on the seventh to gain the winning margin.

Harold Karst of Nanaimo, the only other Island rep, was nipped 5-4 by Leo Hebert of Vancouver in what many of the spectators termed was the best match of the night.

Karst tied the score with two on the eighth but Hebert blanked the ninth end to retain last rock. The Mainlander then hit and stayed with his last rock in the final end.

Final draw of the three today will be played at 8:30 p.m. The winner will advance to the B.C. finals Feb. 28-29 in Trail. The PCCA champion will play a best-of-three final against the B.C. Curling Association champion to decide a provincial representative for the Canadian championship in Thunder Bay, March 19-24.

Victoria Inches Into Third Spot

Victoria High, with a little help from Mt. Douglas, inched ahead of Oak Bay into third place Friday in the Victoria Senior High School Girls' Basketball League.

Donna Blackstock's 15 points triggered visiting Vic High to a 27-8 win over Mount View and coupled with Mt. Douglas's 43-26 thrashing of Oak Bay to break Vic High's tie with Oak Bay in the league standings.

In the day's other game at Reynolds, Janis Turner scored 12 points to pace Reynolds to its third win of the season — 45-19 over Esquimalt.

Five Selected for Golf Hall

TORONTO (CP) — Five golfers have been elected to Canada's Golf Hall of Fame, the Royal Canadian Golf Association announced at its annual meeting Friday.

The late Florence Harvey of Hamilton, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., and Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., were the amateur golfers named while Stan Leonard and David Black were the professionals elected.

Miss Harvey, born in England, won the Canadian women's open championship in 1903 and 1904 and was a semifinalist in the United States Open in 1910. She founded the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union in 1913.

Weslock, 54, is a four-time winner of the Canadian amateur championship and has been low amateur in the Canadian Open 11 times, most recently in 1970.

Cowan, 33, won his second U.S. amateur title last year and was the low individual scorer in the world amateur team championship in 1962, one of 16 times he has represented Canada in international team events. He was the low amateur in the Masters in 1965 and won the Canadian Amateur in 1961.

Leonard, 57, won a total of 44 tournaments including the 1958 Tournament of Champions and two other major events on the U.S. tour. He was an eight-time winner of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association title and a nine-time member of the Canada Cup team.

Black, 89, came to Canada from his native Scotland in 1906 and was a professional in the Montreal area until he moved to Vancouver in 1920. He won the CPGA tournament four times and was runner-up in the 1911 Canadian Open. He retired in 1945.

Soviets Hit Gold Bonanza After Disaster in Grenoble

SAPPORO, Japan (CP) — Russia's six gold medals so far in the 11th Winter Olympic Games proved a point. The Russians sow early and reap late in the four intervening years between Olympics.

Grenoble in 1968 was a disaster for the Russians compared with Innsbruck four years earlier. In Sapporo, the Russian team recouped its losses and may wind up going home with eight gold medals.

The unofficial team championship is in the Russian fold once more, mainly due to the efforts of women Nordic skiers who swept the gold board clean. And the Russians are favored to win the hockey and men's cross-country skiing relay gold medals, the last two of the 11-day Games.

A Russian speed skater named Lidia Skoblikova took home four gold medals from Innsbruck, the Austrian site of the 1964 Games, and the 11 gold altogether nailed down the team title for Russia with 195½ points, almost 100 points more than second-place Norway.

The Russians slipped badly at Grenoble, in the French Alpine countryside, especially without a new queen to take Lidia's place. Norway walked off with the team crown, scoring 122½ points and winning six gold. The Russians managed only four gold and 107 points for second place.

SHE'S STRONG

Now a new Soviet queen has arrived on the scene, a woman so strong she puts some men to shame.

Galina Koulakova, 29-year-old ski instructor, won her third gold medal in Nordic skiing when she anchored the winning Russian team in the 15-kilometre cross-country relay race.

The cross-country event was one of three finals staged today. In the other two, Jean Wicki drove Switzerland's No. 1 sled to victory in the four-man bobsled and Stein Baas-Kaiser of the Netherlands won the women's 3,000-metre speed skating gold medal.

The Firth twins, Sharon and Shirley, and Roseanne Allen, all from Inuvik, N.W.T., were 10th in the cross-country relay and Hans Gehrig of Montreal piloted Canada's No. 2 sled into 13th place in the four-man competition.

The 30 points the Russians got for winning all three women's Nordic gold helped them clinch the team title at Sapporo with 123 points after completion of 32 events. East Germany, with 92½, is in second spot but can't catch the Russians. Scoring is based on the traditional 10-5-4-3-2-1 point system for the first six placings in each final.

HOCKEY IN SPOTLIGHT

As the Games wind up Sunday, all eyes were turned to the hockey tournament, where Russia plays Czechoslovakia for the championship.

The NBC-televised game starts at 10:30 p.m. EST tonight.

Russia is certain of a medal in hockey and needs only a tie against the Czechs to win its fourth gold in five Olympics. The Russians entered the Games in 1956.

But the unbeaten Russian team's only barrier to a third straight Olympic hockey title — the once-beaten Czechs — are in a vengeful mood after losing their only loss 4-1, to little-regarded United States.

Outside of the hockey program, the only golds left to be awarded are in the men's slalom today and in the men's 40-kilometre cross-country relay race Sunday.

DUTCH BIG WINNERS

In speed skating, Holland emerged as the big winner, taking four of the eight gold medals awarded. Ard Schenk, the Dutch skating marvel, took three gold and Mrs. Bass-Kaiser added the fourth today when she won the 3,000-metre race in Olympic record time of 4:52.14. It was the seventh record to fall here.

Dianne Holum of the United States, winner of the 1,500-metre gold, was second and Atje Keulen-Deelstra, another Dutch girl, third. Canada did not enter the race.

The 34-year-old Dutch winner, who holds the world 3,000-metre mark of 4:46.50 and won the world title for the event in 1967, said capturing the gold "equalled the thrill of that."

In the cross-country, Miss Koulakova and Lubov Moukhatcheva won in 48 minutes 46.15 seconds. Finland was second and Norway, the defending champion, third. The Canadian team was more than five minutes behind the Russians.

JUNIOR SHUTTLE ACES BID FOR B.C. CROWNS

Young badminton players, vying for spots on the provincial team as well as titles, began play today in the two-day B.C. Junior championships at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Results of this competition form the basis for selection of the B.C. squad which will compete in the Canadian championships at Toronto, March 5-7.

Team selections are expected to be announced by the B.C. Badminton Association following the finals Sunday.

Jets Nipped by Nats; Tackle Cats Tonight

Two former clubmates will be at opposite ends of the ice tonight as Victoria Cougars tackle Winnipeg Jets in a Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Darryl Fedorak will be in the Cougars' goal while former Victoria netminder Dave Maynard is expected to start in goal for Winnipeg.

Maynard, a 19-year-old, went with Rod Loynachan to Winnipeg in a four-player deal that brought Reg. Malinoski and Dean Magnus to Victoria.

Since joining the Jets, Maynard has reduced his goals-against average from 4.39 to 3.98 and is reported to be pleased with his regular duties with Winnipeg.

"Dave is most happy to be playing full-time in his draft year," said Victoria general manager Eric Bishop. 'And we're very pleased with Malinoski and Magnus. They definitely figure in our plans for next season."

DOUBTFUL STARTER

But Magnus is a doubtful starter for tonight's meeting at 8:30. The big left-winger injured his right hand in the Tuesday game against New Westminster Bruins here and had the hand placed in a cast Thursday.

His spot will probably be occupied by Ron Poole.

Meanwhile, The Jets suffered a heartbreaking loss on Friday night, bowing 4-3 to Vancouver Nats in sudden-death overtime.

Centre Bobby Smith scored his second goal of the night at 1:24 of the extra session to keep Vancouver's overtime win streak intact. The Nats have won all three games this season that have gone into sudden-death.

KINGS ON COMEBACK?

And regular followers of WCHA action are beginning to ask a question: "Are the former champion Edmonton Oil Kings starting their comeback?"

The Oil Kings, leaders of won a crucial game Friday the Western Division for much of the early season and long one of the league's most powerful clubs, have recently appeared to be mired in third place.

The Oil Kings, however, night by blanking second-place New Westminster Bruins 5-0 to move within four points of the Bruins.

In the only other game, Regina Pats downed Saskatoon Blades, 10-4.

Wrestlers Seek Island Crowns

Grapplers will be chasing titles and trophies at the Victoria YM-YWCA on Saturday, Feb. 19.

They'll be competing in the 1972 Vancouver Island closed wrestling championships, bidding for honors in 14 divisions from 78 pounds to heavyweight.

Entries should be submitted to George Allistan at the "Y" by Monday.

Cubs Pad Lead

Victoria Cubs exploded for three second-period goals Friday night and blanked University of Victoria Norsemen 4-0 in a Vancouver Island Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The Cubs' defence permitted just 12 shots on goalie Rick Tkalcic, who had little trouble in recording the shutout.

Victory moved the junior team to within one victory of the league title and dampened the Norsemen's fading playoff hopes.

In an exhibition game, Butler Brothers shut out London Boxing Club 3-0.

Heard Grabs Lead; Miller Challenges

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Young Jerry Heard, despite an "inconsistent round," took the lead away from oldtimer Bob Rosburg Friday and predicted his contemporary, Larry Miller, will tear up the Indian Wells course in the last two rounds of the $145,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

Meanwhile, a dejected Arnold Palmer called Friday "just a bad day at Black Rock" after knocking balls out of bounds twice and once three-putting from eight feet in a four-overpar 76 at La Quinta Country Club. He fell to a 213, eight strokes off Heard's pace with two rounds to go.

The 24-year-old Heard of Visalia, Calif., seeking his second victory in four years on the PGA tour, scored a 69 at Indian Wells for a 54-hole total of 205, under par by 11 and two shots ahead of the 45-year-old Rosburg, who matched par of 72 at Eldorado Country Club.

Miller, also 24 and from Napa, Calif., was eight under after a 70 at La Quinta, and the 6-foot-2 blond plays the last 36 holes on 6,500-yard Indian Wells, considered the easiest of the four courses in this tournament in which pros play 72 holes with three amateur partners, then finish by themselves in the final 18 Sunday at Indian Wells.

Tournament officials announced Friday that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who has hit four persons with three errant shots here the last two years, would tee off on Indian Wells with Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra and pro Doug Saunders.

Five pros were seven under at 209, just four strokes off the lead, but they all have only one round—Sunday's—at Indian Wells. In fact, Miller is the only player of the top 18 with two rounds there.

George Knudson of Toronto was six strokes behind Heard after shooting a 73 Friday.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Winning awards in Times Bowler-of-the-week contest is regular habit for Ernie Moon, who barely missed 1,000-point mark as he won men's fivepin award for fourth time. Rolling in Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome, Moon mauled pins for sizzling series of 988 on games of 258, 355 and 375 in 16th week of ninth annual competition.

Vikettes Nip Foes; Vikings Roll to Win

Both University of Victoria Vikings and Vikettes celebrated Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball victories on home boards Friday night.

Vikings shattered a troublesome zone defence in the second half and coasted to a 74-49 men's league win over University of Lethbridge Pronghorns after Vikettes had struggled to nip Lethbridge 48-43 in the women's league preliminary.

Tom Holmes and Gord Hoshal each notched 10 points in the final half after Vikings had struggled to a 27-23 lead at the intermission. Hoshal finished with 22 points and sparked the fast-breaking attack prescribed by coach Gary Taylor in the second half to overcome the Pronghorn defence.

Holmes, who had 11 rebounds, finished with 14 points while Don Hamilton struck for 16 points to lead Pronghorns.

Coach Mike Gallo called for a modified zone for Vikettes defence midway through the final quarter and finally solved the problem of Jo-Ann McDonnel, who ended up with 15 points for Lethbridge.

Gallo assigned Yvonne Letellier the task of stopping the sharpshooter and it worked. Lorna McHattie, who fouled out with nine minutes remaining, topped Vikettes with 12 points, one more than the total accumulated by Miss Letellier.

All four teams play at the UVic gym again tonight with the men taking the floor at 8:30 p.m. and the distaff squads battling at 6:30.

In other men's games Friday night, University of B.C. battered Calgary 90-65, Manitoba trimmed Saskatchewan 93-82 and Brandon stopped Regina 92-74. In women's play, Regina topped Brandon 61-40.

HOCKEY DISASTER FOR UVIC

Playing without the guidance of coach Howie Carty and minus the services of regular goalkeeper Murray Findlay, University of Victoria Vikings fell victims to a 24-1 trouncing at the hands of University of Calgary Dinosaurs during a Friday night Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association hockey league battle in Calgary.

Carty, winless in 13 starts with the club this season, resigned late Thursday. Findlay is suffering from the 'flu and was unable to make the trip.

Backup netminder Robin Hay parried 42 shots as the Dinnies narrowly missed the Canadian intercollegiate scoring record of 24-0.

Gord Palmer scored the lone UVic goal on a power play in the second period.

Mets Top Jayvees In Opener

Jim Duddridge scored 27 points Friday to pace Victoria Metropolitans to a 68-52 triumph over University of Victoria Jayvees at UVIC and take a one game lead in the Vancouver Island junior men's basketball final.

If the Jayvees will try again they'll have to stop Duddridge and his clubmates who play in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's League, in the second game today at 4:30 p.m. at UVic.

Elzo de Vries had 18 points for the Jayvees.

METROPOLITANS (68) — Ian Lewis 2, Mike Mitchell 2, Marc Lavertu, Jack Robinson 9, Jim McKay 2, Angus Levins, Loris Corletto, Duff McCaghey 9, Rich Connolly, Jim Dudderidge 27, Alfred Hess 8, Dave Mulcahy 9.

Fight From New Loop Hinted As CFL Rejects New York Bid

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Football League turned down a bid Friday to expand to New York, and the decision immediately raised the spectre that a new U.S. pro football league might be formed that could woo some CFL teams.

The nine-team CFL ended its annual meeting with a decision not to accept, for the time being anyway, an application from Robert E. Schmertz to establish a team in Yankee Stadium.

Then it set up a four-man committee to continue study on expansion and "fully examine the ramifications of this decision both within and without Canada."

Officially the vote was 8 to 1 against the New York franchise. But in fact, outgoing president Sam Berger said later, the split was 5 to 4 in favor with the four Eastern Conference clubs and British Columbia Lions on one side and Winnipeg, Saskatchewan, Edmonton and Calgary on the other.

The CFL constitution requires unanimous Eastern support and three of five Western Conference teams for expansion approval.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said that, realizing the hopelessness of getting the necessary seven-club support, the other teams voted against in the final count. That is, with the exception of Toronto Argonauts which backed Schmertz to the end.

Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes and succeeded as league president by Bill Clarke of Saskatchewan Roughriders, said he wanted to continue discussions with New York

"I hope New York doesn't give up on this. I sincerely hope they can wait a little longer."

Berger, Clarke, Lew Hayman of Toronto and Pat Mahoney of Calgary Stampeders make up the study committee on expansion.

In New York, Schmertz said he felt the CFL had "made an unwise decision." U.S. promoters would probably attempt to form their own league, including some Canadian teams.

"I might be spearheading" the campaign for a new league, he said.

ISSUE NOT DEAD

Berger said the issue of expansion into the U.S. is not dead.

"I haven't changed my views. I'm still sympathetic to the New York application, but I still want to maintain Canadian content in the game and study in depth what effect the acceptance of the New York application would have."

Besides the election of Clarke as president, the league named David Loeb, owner of Ottawa Rough Riders, as vice-president with Greg Fulton of Toronto remaining as secretary-treasurer.

Gaudaur also announced new regulations on player cuts and waivers.

Each of the nine clubs will be required to trim their rosters to 32 men by 3 p.m. July 27, four days before this season's opening game.

BUSY SOFTBALL SEASON PLANNED FOR VICETTES

Victoria Vicettes appear to be heading for a busy senior women's softball season.

Manager-Coach Wally Yeamans says that Vicettes, who campaigned in a Vancouver league last year, may play in two circuits this summer.

They will again enter the mainland loop and hope to compete in a proposed Victoria senior league, which could involve three other clubs.

Yeamans is getting an early start with a series of indoor training sessions. Players wishing to try out with the club may call Yeamans at 384-6159.

Runners, Bays Share Top Spot

It's shaping up as a fight to the finish for first place in the Victoria Senior High School Boys' Basketball League.

Oak Bay Bay's 54-52 squeaker over Mt. Douglas Rams and Reynolds Roadrunners' 66-41 swamping of Esquimalt Dockers Friday night made things even tighter at the top.

The victories created a three-way jam with Belmont Braves at the top with just two weeks left in the schedule.

In Friday's other game, improving Victoria High Totems moved into a three-way tie for the fourth and final playoff spot clipping Mt. View Hornets 64-54 at Mt. View.

Grant Boland hooped 17 points and Mark Anderson tossed in 15 for the Bays.

Greg Gardner had 18 points and Bert Zethof 10 for the Rams.

Mike Finlayson scored 17 points for the Runners, who led the visiting Dockers 33-22 at the half.

Cordova Bay Juniors Gain Provincial Final

Cordova Bay captured the Vancouver Island junior girls' basketball championship Friday at Royal Oak by defeating First United 39-35 in the deciding game of a best-of-three final series.

Sue Metcalfe led Cordova Bay with 10 points, one more than the total contributed by clubmate Patti Godfrey. Audra Sinclair played a starring role in the Cordova Bay win by scoring all of her seven points after coming in for the final 10 minutes.

Anne Craigdallie led First United with 10 points.

Cordova Bay now meets the University of British Columbia junior varsity squad here next weekend for the first game in the best-of-three provincial final.

UBC Team Takes Track Meet Title

SASKATOON — University of B.C. athletes racked up 182 points enroute to sweeping the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association track and field championships here Friday.

The Vancouver school, which won the men's (101 points) and women's (81) divisions finished 63 points above defending champion Saskatchewan with 119 points.

University of Victoria finished fifth overall with 23 points behind Manitoba (67) and Alberta (52) in the nine-team one-day meet.

Third place finishes by Mike Hicks, who cleared 13 feet in the pole vault, and Adrian Jones, who clocked 4:16.1 in the mile behind the record breaking winning time of 4:15.9 by Bill Smart of UBC, were UVic's best performances and led the men's team with 18 points.

Jeff Hawker and Charlie Thorne of Victoria placed fourth and fifth in the two-mile run, won by Ken French of UBC who established a new record of 9:18.0.

The UVic women's team managed five points on Vicki Hammond's fourth-place finish in the long jump, won by Brenda Eisler with a new record of 19 feet two and one-half inches. Bev Jackson finished eighth in the high jump, won by Debbie Brill UBC at five feet, six inches.

Competing for UBC, Victoria athlete Penny May set a record as she won the women's 40-yard hurdles in 5.5 seconds.

Penny finished second behind Patty Loverock in the 40-yard dash and placed third in the long jump and shot put.

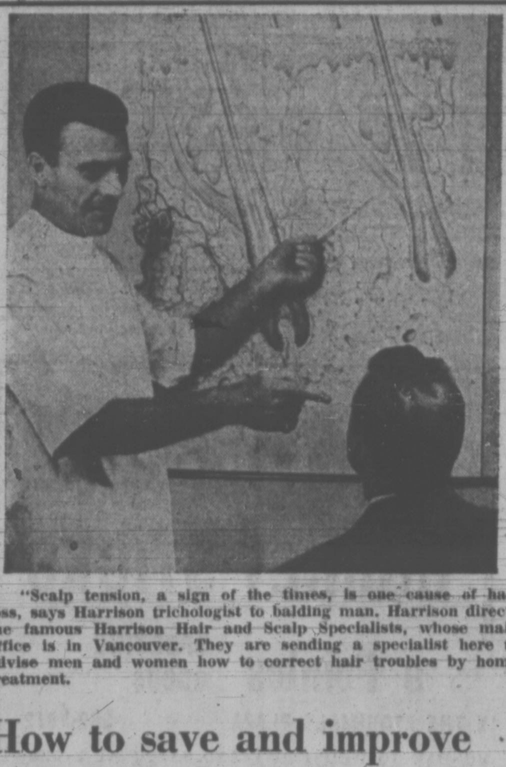
PHONE THEFT GOES FROM BAD TO WORSE

NORTH FORK, Calif. (UPI) — When vandals ripped off this town's only public telephone several years ago, the chamber of commerce lobbied for a new one.

They finally got another pay telephone installed in the well-lighted parking lot of a grocery.

Now they need another one.

A thief not only stole the second telephone, but also removed the phone booth and the concrete base



"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of hair loss, says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. and Tues.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, February 14 and 15.

This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named staff trichologist J. Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex hotel.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD BALDNESS

Your hair is a natural asset—especially today, when the "youthful" look is so important in your business and personal life. Keep your hair alive, healthy and growing. Remember, in most cases, nothing can make your hair grow again once it is gone. Your hair usually starts to thin at the temples, the crown, or right across the back of the head. It thins slowly, day by day, and sometimes you don't notice that bald spot until it's too late.

DANDRUFF IS ONE OF THE MOST COMMON CONDITIONS ASSOCIATED WITH BALDNESS

Dead cells are continually being shed from the scalp and when this process becomes excessive, dandruff may "choke" the follicles, preventing new hair from growing. In many cases, a dandruff condition may lead to infection and hasten the onset of baldness.

NEGLECT CAN START HAIR LOSS

It is surprising how many people neglect the warning signs — and sometimes they are quite unaware of the damage they are doing. But you can recognize the danger signals — falling hair, itchy scalp, too-oily or too-dry hair and dandruff — these are all signs that your hair and scalp could be in a poor, unhealthy condition. Pay attention to these danger signals and seek professional help.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE

Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That's why we urge you to see Mr. Edgar before more damage is done.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the Harrison method permits you to actually save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems come to the hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday anytime between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. and ask the desk clerk for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

China: Digging the Duck-Billed Dino

LONDON (The Manchester Guardian) — The pages of the New China News Agency bulletin were enlivened recently by an unusual story from Shantung province. The complete skeleton of a duck-billed dinosaur it was reported, had recently been excavated by palaeontologists with the help of local officials and "poor and lower-middle peasants." Measuring 16½ yards from mouth to tail and eight from toe to crown, it was said to be "the biggest duck-billed fossil dinosaur ever unearthed anywhere."

There has been a spate of recent reports from China of the results of archaeological excavations made during and since the Cultural Revolution. Chinese sources have explained that a great number of these discoveries were made in the course of the nationwide campaign to dig underground air-raid shelters in order to "prepare against war." (This campaign was stimulated first by American escalation in the Vietnam war and later by the border clashes with the Soviet Union.) In Peking, the excavations for a new underground railway system and the demolition of parts of the city walls have also led to new discoveries.

The last great boom in archeological and paleontological finds took place during a previous mass campaign when, during the Great Leap Forward, new methods of deeper plowing and of land reclamation opened up many previously unknown sites. In the early 1960s these discoveries were published in a series of superbly produced and illustrated reports — all now out of print and collectors' items in the West.

Other finds reported in recent weeks include the discovery of the artifacts of a primitive culture dating back 6,000 years in Kansu province, auricle bones from the Shang Yin culture at the dawn of recorded Chinese history, large quantities of Chou bronzes and several brick tombs of the Han dynsasty.

DIDACTIC EMPHASIS

One of these, according to the story, contained the skeletons of adults and children who had been killed as a human sacrifice. "Such bloodshed," said the New China News Agency, "exposes the brutality of the feudal ruling class" as well as providing "material for research on social conditions at the time."

This comment reflects a fundamental and diactic concern in China with the social and economic aspects of archeology, which is far removed from the "pots and pans approach" more familiar in the West. A visit to a Chinese museum is not so much an education in art as in the lives and living conditions of the artisans, and since the cultural revolution this kind of analysis has become ever more explicit.

Al museums and historical sites were closed down during the Cultural Revolution. But contrary to general belief, the Chinese are now anxious to explain, the Red Guards did not rush around mutilating the nation's classical heritage. Certainly the absence of lasting damage can now be verified by visitors to the better-known museums and sites on the tourist track, although the mark of the sloganeering paint brush can still be seen in some places.

Early in 1971 the country's museums began to reopen on what was described as an experimental basis, in order to receive "the opinions of the masses." Particular attention was paid to explaining the historical and class contexts of the exhibits.

In July the first report of discoveries during the Cultural Revolution was given publicity, after five years of total official silence on all archeological matters. The timing of the pronouncement must have been a political decision, and it projected an image of China which would have been regarded as hopelessly bourgeois — at least by the ultra-leftists during the Cultural Revolution. But the more recent reports from China help to confirm the initial impression that very substantial discoveries have indeed been made.

By intention or otherwise the first report in July last year came just a week after the announcement that U.S. President Richard Nixon would be visiting China. Ironically, it may well be the president of the United States — a country responsible in the past for plundering so many of China's cultural relics — who, when he visits Peking, will get the first close look at the new treasures of the Cultural Revolution.

DAMMED OR NOT, NILE FLOWS ON

By C. C. MINICLIER

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Hippos wallow in it, papyrus thrives on it, men ride on it and their women do the family wash in it.

Men, from Winston Churchill to Gamal Abdel Nasser, have dreamed of taming it.

Without most of Sudan and Egypt would be unpopulated.

The Nile River—from start of the White Nile in Uganda, and the Blue Nile in Ethiopia, to their merger in Sudan and on through Egypt —sustains life on its 4,000-mile course north to the sea.

Here its life-giving value is dramatically illustrated as one stands amid the high shade trees and brilliant red Christmas stars of the botanical garden, planted by Lord Kitchener, on an island in the Nile.

Through the lush foliage one sees the opposite bank, where hot, virtually lifeless sand dunes, rising from the river's edge, mark the abrupt start of the western desert.

To walk 10 miles from the Nile in upper Egypt is to leave the green belt of carefully irrigated farm land, palm trees and life, and enter the merciless desert.

In 1896, the Egyptian public works ministry began keeping records of the level of Lake Victoria, in central Africa near Jinja, Uganda, where the White Nile begins. A few years later, a British colonial secretary named Winston Churchill visited Jinja and said it would be a wonderful thing if "the immortal Nile were to begin its journey to the sea" by plunging through hydroelectric turbines.

They eventually were installed at Jinja and at the start of the Blue Nile in Ethiopia, but the greatest Nile electrical source, and the second biggest rockfill dam in the world, was formally opened only a year ago.

The high dam at Aswan, built by more than 30,000 men working around the clock at a cost of more than $1 billion, assured water and electrical power for Egypt's development.

PROJECT HAS CRITICS

Like all tremendously expensive, awe-inspiring projects, the dam has its critics.

Egyptians note that much of the criticism comes from the West, which declined to finance the project and watched with chagrin when the Soviet Union provided interest-free loans of more than $250 million toward its construction and put more than 300 Soviet factories to work producing equipment for the dam and its huge turbines.

Behind the dam, a 300-mile-long lake reaches across the Sudanese border. In front, 650,000 acres of land, once flooded annually and able to produce only one crop, now are irrigated and produce two or three crops yearly. Ultimately, 1.2 million acres of other land are to be reclaimed by irrigation.

The dam offers a potential of 10 billion killowat hours yearly and already provides power for Egypt's major cities and industries. A Soviet project is to bring electricity to 5,000 villages.

Fishing in Lake Nasser, as the reservoir is known, is becoming a major industry, with Soviet help.

DISEASE BEING SPREAD

Bilharzia, an energy-sapping disease carried by snails in slow moving waters, is being spread by the new irrigation schemes, critics observe. But Fgyptians argue that the disease already is carried by most rural Egyptians, and international efforts, aided by new drugs, are under way ultimately to eradicate it from Egypt.

Erosion, endangering bridges and valuable delta farm land, is another worry, but plans are afoot to build a series of 10 barrier dams.

To offset increased salt in the irrigated lands, a 10-year drainage program is under way.

Cruise Line To Purchase Empress

MONTREAL (CP) — An American travel firm has entered into an agreement with CP Ships to purchase the 800-passenger Empress of Canada, the last of the Canadian line's trans-Atlantic passenger vessels which was taken out of service in November.

In an announcement, CP Ships said the agreement was signed with Carnival Cruise Lines, Ltd., a subsidiary of American International Travel Service, Inc., and the Empress has been renamed the T.S.S. Mardi Gras.

The purchase price was not announced.

Beginning in March, the vessel will make seven-day cruises between Miami and Puerto Rico. the Virgin Islands and Jamaica.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Loneliness . . . or Solitude?

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Shortly before his death a few years ago, Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan, an influential U.S. psychiatrist, wrote this: "The deepest problem of people today is loneliness, isolation, and the difficulty of self-esteem in our society."

Most of us have known the pains of loneliness. And we strive frantically to escape those pains. Many of our amusements and entertainments are not expressions of joy in living but symptoms of our joyless loneliness. Fear of loneliness drives us down many rough roads — roads of fanaticism, religious and political and aesthetic; roads on which alcohol is consumed excessively and other drugs, legal and illegal, are taken unwisely; roads of involvement in trivial pursuits and dangerous pastimes. We'll do almost anything to escape the pains of loneliness.

Paul Tillich, one of the great religious thinkers of our time, made a helpful distinction between "loneliness" and "solitude", between "the pain of being alone" and "the glory of being alone". The life and teaching of Jesus delineates that distinction. He taught, and demonstrated in his own life, how the pain of loneliness can be relieved through the graces of solitude. In his own withdrawals into solitude Jesus received the refreshment of mind and the heart and the renewals of courage which enabled him to do his work in the world.

We all need our times of aloneness. Periods in solitude are necessary to emotional health. We do require times of withdrawal from the hustle and confusion of everyday life. Blaise Pascal, the 17th century French philosopher, gave this warning: "Most of the ills of the world come from men not being able to sit quietly in a room and think."

But the full human life cannot be lived in solitude. Periods of solitude can help us overcome the pains of loneliness — but only when they stimulate and energize us for life in the busy world.

In the final analysis, loneliness can be redeemed by love — love, that is, in the biblical sense of willing the good of other persons, love established in recognition of the ultimate significance of each person. Love is in caring for and caring about other persons as persons. Loving and being loved are among the necessities of life.

Thomas Wolfe, the novelist, said this in one of his books: "The central purpose of Christ's life is to destroy the life of loneliness and establish here on earth the life of love." That is good New Testament interpretation.

When we struggle to relieve our own loneliness, no matter what methods we use, we are rarely, in the long run, successful. It is only when, motivated by love, we try to relieve the loneliness of others that our own loneliness is relieved. Love is the way through loneliness.

JESUIT LEADER DEFENDS PAPACY

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The leader of the Society of Jesus has told his worldwide spiritual army to beware of criticizing Pope Paul VI, the order announced this week.

The Rev. Pedro Arrupe said some Jesuits are among those responsible for "damage" to the Pope's image.

In a letter addressed to all 31,700 members of the society, Arrupe said: "It would be good to keep in mind that constant and disrespectful criticism carries with it, as a side effect, the destruction of authority itself — a most harmful and disruptive effect for the work of the church."

The Jesuit order was founded four centuries ago as a tightly-disciplined body at the service of the papacy. Arrupe said that by now "the spirit of fidelity to the persons of the Holy Father . . . ought to be firmly ingrained in our mentality."

Arrupe suggested that some Jesuits who have criticized the Pope "may have been seeking after popularity."

Lots to do at home

LOOK TO NORTH, CHURCH TOLD

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Anglican Church is devoting too much time and effort to overseas missions and not enough to its work in northern Canada, according to Dr. G. F. C. Jackson of Regina.

"We have left our missions to languish without support and undergirding . . . and overburdened our clergy up there," he said.

He called for "concern and support for the work of the Anglican Church among native and white people in the north.

"We are not doing a good job as a church," he said.

Dr. Jackson said that all the "propaganda" directed to churchmen to date has dealt with India, Africa and, lately, the Caribbean. But, he said, "the day of the overseas mission is rapidly receeding."

PEKING PHONE BUSY

PEKING (Reuter) — Western residents of Peking were inundated with telephone calls Thursday when a regular telephone link opened between the Chinese capital and Hong Kong.

The first call out of Hong Kong was believed to have been received by Britain's new charge d'affaires here, John Addis, who was telephoned by Hong Kong government officials.

Mayor Pollen and media cruise past bad and the not so bad

Bennett Slams Pollen In Hotline Talkfest

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen is under attack again from Social Crediters; this time it was the boss himself.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett phoned CJVI hotline host Joe Easingwood Friday morning to tee off on Pollen.

"He (Pollen) just gets elected in December, does nothing, makes a few cracks and criticisms at the provincial government and runs for a holiday in Honolulu," the premier said. "I wonder who's tired."

Immediately prior to the current legislature session Bennett vacationed in Southern California for approximately two weeks.

'ASK SKILLINGS'

When questioned by Easingwood the premier kept repeating this statement.

Earlier this week Pollen criticized Greater Victoria's four Socred MLAs — Waldo Skillings, John Tisdalle, Herb Bruch and William Chant — for having never done anything for the area in all the years they have been in office. Skillings retorted in the house Wednesday, calling Pollen a "pipsqueak."

When asked why Pollen had left the Social Credit party, Bennett again repeated. "You had better ask Mr. Skillings."

Do you think Pollen is a good man? the premier was asked.

"I only judge a person by what he does, and so far he has done nothing."

Asked about who chose Pollen to run as a Socred MLA in Oak Bay in 1968, Bennett replied: "I didn't nominate anybody . . . I don't select the candidates."

Obviously nettled, Bennett often stammered during his phone call.

Pressed about the lack of treatment centres in B.C. for treatment of young drug users, Bennett said "talk to Mr. Loffmark about it."

Easingwood then said he found it impossible to get hold of the health minister.

"He's on vac . . ." hesitated the premier before he went on to say "you got hold of the premier."

When it was suggested to him that his home-owner grants were discriminatory to tenants, especially elderly persons, Bennett replied. "Any tenant can go out and buy a home in B.C."

SOCRED POLICY

He said that Socred policy is trying to encourage renters to buy homes.

He claimed that with the home-owner grant "a thousand renters a month" are now buying homes in B.C.

An elderly woman later phoned in and asked Bennett about people who have bad health and therefore can't run a home.

"If they run a rented home, they can run a bought home," the premier replied.

"There is one thing about the premier of this province, though he may be criticized, he never makes a promise he doesn't keep," Bennett said.

Asked again about an interview: "I make no promises. I have only made one promise in my life and I made it to my wife."

MAN SAVES FAMILY IN MORNING FIRE

An early-morning fire today caused $8,000 damage to a house after a man evacuated his wife and three children.

The fire occurred at 3:35 a.m. at 1904 Davie St.

Fire department officials said Joac Moniz woke up to the smell of smoke coming from the room where his three children were sleeping. Moniz roused his wife and they got the children out of the house.

Officials said Moniz suffered minor burns on the hand and back.

Administration Costs Cited

A study committee set up by the Community Chest of Greater Victoria has urged it to take a close look at the administrative expenses of the agencies it supports.

The committee says the chest's directors should decide whether to continue financial backing of agencies whose budgets include "excessively large administrative and executive expenses, particularly when related to the total allotment made by the Community Chest."

At a press conference Thursday when the report was made public, vice-president W. H. Armstrong said such factors have always been taken into account when assessing agencies' budget requirements, and grants have been set accordingly.

Under questioning, however, he admitted that instances do arise where a significant slice of a particular allotment goes in salaries and other administrative expenses, and said he could understand public concern on this score.

But Armstrong pointed out that full-time professional staff employed by various agencies enable them to provide services which, in turn, generate a great deal of volunteer help.

Good Housekeeping Can Help Save Shoreline, Pollen Says

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

"All we want is intelligent shoreline housekeeping."

With this punchline to a colorful commentary on the condition of Victoria's Inner Harbor waterfront Friday, Mayor Peter Pollen was probably understating his intentions.

LITTLE NEED

But to reporters and photographers accompanying his water-taxi tour of the harbor there seemed little need for the familiar Pollen overemphasis.

Except for a few isolated patches, Pollen showed the waterfront to be a popular place to deposit junk and waste of all descriptions.

Along with Old. Ove Witt, parks chairman, Pollen's aim is to persuade the managers of the Inner Harbor's industries, by means of photographic evidence, that they should begin cleaning up their messes.

A favorable response will include paying money towards cleanup operations made necessary by the actions of several industries.

"Look at that," Pollen remarked, pointing to the oily shoreline, were a mass of tangled, rusting lumbering cable had been pushed half into the water. The site was part of the B.C. Forest Products plant at the upper end of the harbor.

Pollen then identified a burned out and broken down wooden hulk as another part of the BCFP operations.

Passing some isolated Arbutus trees fronting the Point Ellis House museum, the water taxi came upon a log boom where a jack-ladder was feeding logs into the BCFP mill.

That sight, Pollen said, was the healthy variety of industrial waterfront.

While the mayor expressed surprise at seeing some improvements on the state of the waterfront since his last, private, tour a few weeks ago, other spots had worsened.

"Now that light blue wreck wasn't there three weeks ago," he said, indicating a small bay where a city sewer once emptied, now taking on the appearance of a junk car dump.

At the Ocean Cement site in Rock Bay, Pollen pointed out two small houses on trailers sitting at the waterfront foot of an unused city roadway. Without permission or explanaion, the houses had appeared two or three years ago, he said.

But the Ocean Cement shoreline itself was looking up, the mayor judged.

Indicating a barge stacked high with wood chips, Pollen explained that spilled chips over the years have killed plant life on the harbor bed.

NOISY RATS

One of the two green sheds that jut out from the Ocean Cement site at the foot of Humboldt was described by Pollen as a derelict. The city might find a way to tear it down before the deadline for removal of the whole factory comes in about 18 months, he said.

One of the neatest installations was the federal department of transport operation just north and west of the Johnson Street bridge.

One of the worst: the Victoria Machinery Depot at Ogden Point, the "frontispiece" of the harbor, said Pollen.

If a yachtsman moors his boat at the CPR docks in front of the legislative buildings, Pollen said, he can hear and see the rats that collect around the pilings at night.

"Big jobs like that," Pollen said, holding his hands 18 inches apart. About half of the outer dock is fenced off and condemned, and the pilings are largely rotted away.

One of the best ways of getting industry to cooperate, he said, was to open up parts of the harbor to the public.

In this way, the actions of industries "will be continually scrutinized," and encouraged to keep up a program of "intelligent housekeeping."

. . . But Apathy Can Kill It

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

As a load of fill rolled down the bank, the last remaining bit of one of Victoria's popular swimming areas was obliterated this week for all time.

"The end of White Beach in the Outer Harbor at the foot of St. Lawrence Street is a symbolic example of the gradual degradation of our natural environment," said Blayney Scott, a member of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

How long are we going to continue to place commercial use over people use," he added. "The destruction of the beach is an example of misplaced values."

White Beach, which is no more, formed part of a small cove situated between the Outer Wharf and the Victoria Machinery Depot property. The west point of the cove is occupied by the James Bay Anglers Association which operates a boat ramp.

No newcomer can visualize today how the beach once looked because Canadian National Railways, which obtained the foreshore rights, has filled in the areas to create more land for the storage of lumber.

But Scott recalls it was a clean, white sandy beach more than 100 yards long. In the 30's it was frequented by Victorians because the water was warm and sheltered from winds. There was a changing house and sufficient space for picnicking.

Erosion of the beach was gradual, he said. First the city selected the beach to run a sewage pipe out to sea. This resulted in a ban on swimming.

Alternate routes through commercial property were not considered.

"Then slowly, bit by bit through the 50's refuse and fill were dumped on the beach," he said. "Despite this children played on the beach."

The CNR completed the job with fill.

"White Beach may not have been any concern to people living in choice residential areas of Greater Victoria," said Scott. "But it was important to children of families in the lower income brackets.

"It is a symbolic example of disregard for land values, poor management and lack of planning," he said. "It's a dead loss now — too late to do anything."

Norman Taylor, president of the James Bay Anglers Association, said several years ago the association attempted to save the small bay.

"But the city was unwilling to spend the money," he said. "We had plans to build a breakwater out to sea which would have created a small basin."

Disputed Rate Blamed on Oak Bay

The municipality of Oak Bay itself requested a reassessment of a condominium building on Newport which resulted in other assessment increases which council had condemned as "discriminatory."

This fact came to light Friday at an Oak Bay court of revision when municipal assessor D. C. Wyatt was questioned by lawyer Douglas Gray.

Gray, representing his mother who owns one of the condominium suites at the Oak Bay Towers, 1400 Newport, asked Wyatt who had ordered the reassessment of the property.

Wyatt said he had written provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright requesting the reassessment. Wright had replied Dec. 20, ordering that it be done.

At a recent council meeting, several of the condominium suite owners appeared before council, stating that the increases on assessments, some as high as 50 per cent or more, would result in their total taxes being increased by, in some cases, close to 200 per cent. These figures are based on the 1971 mill rate and do not allow for an increase in the mill rate.

Led by John H. F. Turner, who Friday made representations on behalf of himself and 21 other occupants of Oak Bay Towers, they asked that council write Wright, suggesting that the large increase be phased over a period of years.

Council agreed to ask the provincial assessment commissioner to ease the blow by phasing the increases over a period of years, agreeing with the owners that the big jumps were discriminatory.

NOTHING TO HIDE

Wright's reply was received by municipal administrator E. H. Hart Friday, who said he could not reveal the contents until all council members had had an opportunity to see them.

Wright, too, felt that it was up to Oak Bay council to release the information first although he said that his department had nothing to hide.

He agreed that it was Wyatt who had asked him to order a reassessment and he cited section 9-2 as his authority for ordering it.

"If there is an extreme discrepancy in assessments, obvious inequity, a reassessment can be ordered," he said.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray contended that the reassessment was "null and void" because it was not based on any changes in the physical characteristics of the land or properties.

Therefore, he said, any increases should be limited to the 10 per cent ceiling set for any one year in another section of the assessment Equalization Act.

Wright said Friday the 10 per cent ceiling could also be wiaved if a reassessment had been ordered.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray and others argued that a 1971 amendment to the Strata Titles Act had resulted in discrimination against condominium owners.

The amendment states that condominium suites be assessed as separate parcels of land and improvements. This ruling does not apply to other types of apartment buildings.

Wyatt told the court Friday that the reassessment was designed to bring the levies more in line with those on residences and the other two condominiums in Oak Bay, the Anchorage and the Uplands Gates.

The general assessment aimed for, he said, was 33.5 per cent of the market value, based on actual sales. He said that 1971 assessments for Oak Bay Towers' residents had averaged out at 22 per cent of actual sale prices.

The hearing was adjourned to 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23.

Difference Of a Word

In a Friday Times story headlined "Police Struggling In Attack On Crime" the word "not " was inadvertently dropped from one paragraph.

The paragraph read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

It should have read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was not cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

Funds Sought for Centre

A door-to-door blitz to raise $600,000 for a recreation complex near Sidney will be launched on the Saanich Peninsula next Thursday.

Al Storey, spokesman for the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association, says plans for an indoor pool have been added to the curling and skating rink complex proposed for three acres of department of transport land beside Victoria International Airport.

SPARA was formed about two years ago and has been trying to get the recreation project off the ground since then. About $10,000 has been raised and SPARA directors believe the time has come to go to the people.

The 50-metre pool proposed would make organized swim meets possible and the building would also house roller skating, lacrosse, boat shows and badminton in addition to ice skating and curling.

A mezzanine floor above the curling surface provides for lounge and catering facilities.

Storey says peninsula residents will save themselves tax dollars by supporting the project through buying debentures now rather than through a referendum later.

If the project was approved by referendum later it would cost homeowners $400 each, in comparison to $205 invested in debentures now, he said.

"The difference is that tax money is gone forever whereas debenture purchases yield six per cent per annum for 12 years."

Curtis 'Spread Too Thin'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis' political rival at the last municipal election said today recent developments prove again Curtis "is spreading himself too thin."

A. W. (Bud) Mesher, auto dealer and open-line broadcaster, said B..C Hydro made clear two years ago it planned running a high voltage power line on towers beside Colquitz Creek.

He was referring to a recent letter from Curtis to Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum in which Curtis said the line with its 90-foot towers would destroy a green-space rehabilitation program along the creek.

"This is something a mayor. if he's paying attention to his job, should have known all about," said Mesher.

He had criticized Curtis before for the variety of roles he fills, including chairman of the Capital Regional Board and the same post with the Municipal Finance Authority in addition to his job with a local radio station.

Mesher said another example of Curtis being out of touch in the municipality where he is mayor is the current spat between him and senior administrators over alleged planning oversights to the main firehall addition.

Why Not the Lottery With a Difference?

TODAY LET ME DROP some ifs on you.

If, for a few dollars, you could buy a government bond that paid four and a half per cent interest per annum . . .

And if you knew that a substantial portion of that interest would go into a government administered, conducted and policed lottery prize fund . . .

Further, if at any time you could cash in your bond at purchase price . . .

Finally, if the interest remaining after deduction of prize money and administrative costs went to B.C. hospitals as a contribution for specialized services and research . . .

Would you head for the nearest sales depot and buy such a bond?

I would, quick as a shot. So, I firmly believe, would enough Canadians and visitors to Canada to make the scheme a success on all counts.

In terms of our provincial reality as we find it, what I've laid out for you is mere wishful thinking. But in the United Kingdom, a lottery based on bond sales has been flourishing for years.

The U.K. purchaser who invests a pound sterling in one of these bonds looks on the plan as a useful means of saving to which is attached a chance at money prizes both great and small. (Winning number in the monthly draw fetches the lucky holder a tax-free £50,000. Top weekly draw ticket pays £25,000.)

I see no valid reason why we shouldn't put a variation of the U.K. premium savings bonds lottery to work in this province. It would not, of course, finance our hospitals, which would continue to depend for their bread-and-butter allotment on government grants from taxes.

But it would provide funds with which to enlarge their scope and effectiveness. In our own home town, the yield of a lottery based on bond interest might go a long way toward meeting the annual cost of maintaining the open-heart unit which we lack and so badly need.

In this matter of lotteries, Premier Bennett's government has so far displayed a thumbs-down attitude. When Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) urged a lottery in recent House debate, the response was lethargic.

I think it's high time that the legislators who failed to react to the LeCours suggestion roused to an awareness of certain facts.

One is that a strictly-controlled government lottery of the sort I propose could prove a useful supplement to taxes in meeting specific hospital needs.

Another is that Canadians who prove their willingness to flirt with fortune by purchasing all manner of lottery tickets each year, would welcome a B.C.-tailored version of Britain's savings-cum-gamble scheme.

Also, since we do spend on lotteries, why not have a try at keeping some of the money at work in our province?

At this point, we might dip into a letter from E. F. (Beau) Tracey, 2411 Epworth Street, who sends along impressive lists of premium savings plan prize-winners printed in recent issues of London's Daily Telegraph.

"I suspect that most if not all of those sitting in the Legislature have at some time purchased a ticket for a turkey, car, boat, etc.," former Royal Marine Tracey declares. "And, let's say it — a ticket on a lottery in other provinces, or even in the Irish.

"Well, nothing could be fairer than the bond interest lottery operated by government in the United Kingdom, where the 'tickets' are sold in post offices and banks, and the draws are operated electronically. The investor in this draw doesn't even lose his money. It's there as long as he desires, and can be withdrawn any time."

Naturally, a B.C.-based scheme would have its limitations. Draws might be made only once or perhaps twice a year, and of necessity, the prizes would be fewer and smaller.

Even so, I think the notion's worth looking into.

This year, I'll no doubt buy a ticket or two on the Irish and indulge in several other chance-takings from which sponsors far removed from the domestic scene reap rich harvests.

As one who wouldn't mind having his cake and nibbling it too, I'd much sooner invest those bucks in a bond-supported lottery here at home.

Erosion of the beach was gradual, he said. First the city selected the beach to run a sewage pipe out to sea. This resulted in a ban on swimming.

Alternate routes through commercial property were not considered.

"Then slowly, bit by bit through the 50's refuse and fill were dumped on the beach," he said. "Despite this children played on the beach."

The CNR completed the job with fill.

"White Beach may not have been any concern to people living in choice residential areas of Greater Victoria," said Scott. "But it was important to children of families in the lower income brackets."

"It is a symbolic example of disregard for land values, poor management and lack of planning," he said. "It's a dead loss now — too late to do anything."

Norman Taylor, president of the James Bay Anglers' Association, said several years ago the association attempted to save the small bay.

"But the city was unwilling to spend the money," he said. "We had plans to build a breakwater out to sea which would have created a small basin."

Disputed Rate Blamed on Oak Bay

The municipality of Oak Bay itself requested a reassessment of a condominium building on Newport which resulted in other assessment increases which council had condemned as "discriminatory."

This fact came to light Friday at an Oak Bay court of revision when municipal assessor D. C. Wyatt was questioned by lawyer Douglas Gray.

Gray, representing his mother who owns one of the condominium suites at the Oak Bay Towers, 1400 Newport, asked Wyatt who had ordered the reassessment of the property.

Wyatt said he had written provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright requesting the reassessment. Wright had replied Dec. 20, ordering that it be done.

At a recent council meeting, several of the condominium suite owners appeared before council, stating that the increases on assessments, some as high as 50 per cent or more, would result in their total taxes being increased by, in some cases, close to 200 per cent. These figures are based on the 1971 mill rate and do not allow for an increase in the mill rate.

Led by John H. F. Turner, who Friday made representations on behalf of himself and 31 other occupants of Oak Bay Towers, they asked that council write Wright, suggesting that the large increase be phased over a period of years.

Council agreed to ask the provincial assessment commissioner to ease the blow by phasing the increases over a period of years, agreeing with the owners that the big jumps were discriminatory.

NOTHING TO HIDE

Wright's reply was received by municipal administrator E. H. Hart Friday, who said he could not reveal the contents until all council members had had an opportunity to see them.

Wright, too, felt that it was up to Oak Bay council to release the information first although he said that his department had nothing to hide.

He agreed that it was Wyatt who had asked him to order a reassessment and he cited section 9-2 as his authority for ordering it.

"If there is an extreme discrepancy in assessments, obvious inequity, a reassessment can be ordered," he said.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray contended that the reassessment was "null and void" because it was not based on any changes in the physical characteristics of the land or properties.

Therefore, he said, any increases should be limited to the 10 per cent ceiling set for any one year in another section of the assessment Equalization Act.

Wright said Friday the 10 per cent ceiling could also be wiaved if a reassessment had been ordered.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray and others argued that a 1971 amendment to the Strata Titles Act had resulted in discrimination against condominium owners.

The amendment states that condominium suites be assessed as separate parcels of land and improvements. This ruling does not apply to other types of apartment buildings.

Wyatt told the court Friday that the reassessment was designed to bring the levies more in line with those on residences and the other two condominiums in Oak Bay, the Anchorage and the Uplands Gates.

The general assessment aimed for, he said, was 33.5 per cent of the market value, based on actual sales. He said that 1971 assessments for Oak Bay Towers' residents had averaged out at 22 per cent of actual sale prices.

The hearing was adjourned to 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23.

Difference Of a Word

In a Friday Times story headlined "Police Struggling In Attack On Crime" the word "not" was inadvertently dropped from one paragraph.

The paragraph read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

It should have read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was not cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

Funds Sought for Centre

A door-to-door blitz to raise $600,000 for a recreation complex near Sidney will be launched on the Saanich Peninsula next Thursday.

Al Storey, spokesman for the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association, says plans for an indoor pool have been added to the curling and skating rink complex proposed for three acres of department of transport land beside Victoria International Airport.

SPARA was formed about two years ago and has been trying to get the recreation project off the ground since then. About $10,000 has been raised and SPARA directors believe the time has come to go to the people.

The 50-metre pool proposed would make organized swim meets possible and the building would also house roller skating, lacrosse, boat shows and badminton in addition to ice skating and curling.

A mezzanine floor above the curling surface provides for lounge and catering facilities.

Storey says peninsula residents will save themselves tax dollars by supporting the project through buying debentures now rather than through a referendum later.

If the project was approved by referendum later it would cost homeowners $400 each, in comparison to $205 invested in debentures now, he said.

"The difference is that tax money is gone forever whereas debenture purchases yield six per cent per annum for 12 years."

Curtis 'Spread Too Thin'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis' political rival at the last municipal election said today recent developments prove again Curtis "is spreading himself too thin."

A. W. (Bud) Mesher, auto dealer and open-line broadcaster, said B.C Hydro made clear two years ago it planned running a high voltage power line on towers beside Colquitz Creek.

He was referring to a recent letter from Curtis to Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum in which Curtis said the line with its 90-foot towers would destroy a green-space rehabilitation program along the creek.

"This is something a mayor, if he's paying attention to his job, should have known all about," said Mesher.

He had criticized Curtis before for the variety of roles he fills, including chairman of the Capital Regional Board and the same post with the Municipal Finance Authority in addition to his job with a local radio station.

Mesher said another example of Curtis being out of touch in the municipality where he is mayor is the current spat between him and senior administrators over alleged planning oversights to the main firehall addition.

Why Not the Lottery With a Difference?

TODAY LET ME DROP some ifs on you.

If, for a few dollars, you could buy a government bond that paid four and a half per cent interest per annum . . .

And if you knew that a substantial portion of that interest would go into a government-administered, conducted and policed lottery prize fund . . .

Further, if at any time you could cash in your bond at purchase price . . .

Finally, if the interest remaining after deduction of prize money and administrative costs went to B.C. hospitals as a contribution for specialized services and research . . .

Would you head for the nearest sales depot and buy such a bond?

I would, quick as a shot. So, I firmly believe, would enough Canadians and visitors to Canada to make the scheme a success on all counts.

In terms of our provincial reality as we find it, what I've laid out for you is mere wishful thinking. But in the United Kingdom, a lottery based on bond sales has been flourishing for years.

The U.K. purchaser who invests a pound sterling in one of these bonds looks on the plan as a useful means of saving to which is attached a chance at money prizes both great and small. (Winning number in the monthly draw fetches the lucky holder a tax-free £50,000. Top weekly draw ticket pays £25,000.)

I see no valid reason why we shouldn't put a variation of the U.K. premium savings bonds lottery to work in this province. It would not, of course, finance our hospitals, which would continue to depend for their bread-and-butter allotment on government grants from taxes.

But it would provide funds with which to enlarge their scope and effectiveness. In our own home town, the yield of a lottery based on bond interest might go a long way toward meeting the annual cost of maintaining the open-heart unit which we lack and so badly need.

In this matter of lotteries, Premier Bennett's government has so far displayed a thumbs-down attitude. When Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) urged a lottery in recent House debate, the reponse was lethargic.

I think it's high time that the legislators who failed to react to the LeCours suggestion roused to an awareness of certain facts.

One is that a strictly-controlled government lottery of the sort I propose could prove a useful supplement to taxes in meeting specific hospital needs.

Another is that Canadians who prove their willingness to flirt with fortune by purchasing all manner of lottery tickets each year, would welcome a B.C.-tailored version of Britain's savings-cum-gamble scheme.

Also, since we do spend on lotteries, why not have a try at keeping some of the money at work in our province?

At this point, we might dip into a letter from E. F. (Beau) Tracey, 2411 Epworth Street, who sends along impressive lists of premium savings plan prize-winners printed in recent issues of London's Daily Telegraph.

"I suspect that most if not all of those sitting in the Legislature have at some time purchased a ticket for a turkey, car, boat, etc.," former Royal Marine Tracey declares. "And, let's say it — a ticket on a lottery in other provinces, or even in the Irish.

"Well, nothing could be fairer than the bond interest lottery operated by government in the United Kingdom, where the 'tickets' are sold in post offices and banks, and the draws are operated electronically. The investor in this draw doesn't even lose his money. It's there as long as he desires, and can be withdrawn any time."

Naturally, a B.C.-based scheme would have its limitations. Draws might be made only once or perhaps twice a year, and of necessity, the prizes would be fewer and smaller.

Even so, I think the notion's worth looking into.

This year, I'll no doubt buy a ticket or two on the Irish and indulge in several other chance-takings from which sponsors far removed from the domestic scene reap rich harvests.

As one who wouldn't mind having his cake and nibbling it too, I'd much sooner invest those bucks in a bond-supported lottery here at home.

Indian basketry for collectors . . .

Somehow it had escaped our notice . . . not having had much to do with things Indian . . . but we learned this week that good Indian basketry pieces are scarce as hen's teeth, and have actually become collectors' items . . . So it isn't surprising that the Handloom . . . who've managed to acquire several choice baskets and Maquinna hats woven from sweet grass by Nootka Indians . . . are feeling pretty pleased with themselves! . . . These baskets are beautifully made and designed . . . have cedar bark lining and good strong handles . . . Very attractive and quite expensive . . . but then, as we said, they're very hard to come by . . . So if you'd like a memento of a fast-dying art . . . Handloom's the place to find it! . . . Some gorgeous new Wayne Ngan pottery is on display, too . . . large plates, vases, bowls, lidded pots, etc. . . . Some have lead trailing by way of ornamentation . . . others are done with the brush stroke, very oriental in feeling . . . There's a lovely bowl with blue birds . . . Big blue cookie jars . . . If you're a pottery buff, you'll want to see all the new Ngan pieces at Handloom . . . Be sure to see Elsie McNab's little pottery "Amish People" too . . . they're delightful! . . . By the way, Handloom's Empress shop is now open again . . . so drop in! . . . The Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

Eggs are sexy, says a U.S. nutritionist. They provide vitamins for health and beauty . . . are low in calories.

Spring is busting out all over . . . at Wilson's! . . .

"What's coming in for spring?" . . . people have been asking us for the past few weeks . . . Well, as we've told you before, new clothes have been arriving at Wilson's . . . first in a trickle . . . now in a flood . . . So the best advice we can give you is go see for yourself! . . . Last week, for instance, a number of very smart suits and dress and jacket ensembles arrived from Mayfair . . . a Canadian manufacturer noted for excellence of craftsmanship . . . and the "soft construction" and fine detailing which make Mayfair clothes such a joy to wear . . . If you're going south in the near future, you'll want to look at the jacket dresses in a lightweight, silk-like material . . . Short sleeved dress, and jacket buttoning to the neck with silver buttons . . . in blue, vanilla and geranium . . . A perfect travelling outfit! . . . The same style is used for a camel hair outfit . . . and judging by what we've seen so far, camel hair promises to be as popular as ever . . . There are two-piece suits with softly styled jackets and straight skirts with little slits on either side . . . in a lovely shade of blue wool, as well as in geranium red . . . And an off-white dress with jacket which we could visualize as a smart going-away costume for a spring bride! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Jeans are definitely the "in" thing for the young. Not only in North America but all around the globe.

Mirror, mirror on the wall . . .

Mirrors are magic! . . . Judiciously selected and strategically placed . . . they can perform near-miracles in any room of a house . . . make small rooms seem larger . . . focus interesting reflections into hitherto dull spots . . . even bring the outdoors inside! . . . We saw a number of very beautiful mirrors in The Gallery this week . . . ovals, oblongs, rectangles . . . all with rich-looking carved or moulded frames . . . in various sizes to suit your every need . . . Prices are quite reasonable for such beauties . . . $85 to $95 . . . There's a dainty little cheval mirror . . . tall and narrow . . . just perfect for a corner in a bedroom . . . These are hard to find, as you probably know . . . So go have a browse around the Gallery . . . you might get some ideas! . . . During our own browsing, we fell in love with a lovely little "mini-sideboard" . . . swirl mahogany, with glass centre cupboards and two side cupboards and drawers. Just 28" high and 10" wide . . . this would make a very nice hall piece . . . And if you live in an apartment with a small dining area . . . it may be just what you need . . . The Gallery has another shipment of Victorian chairs too . . . Hand-carved mahogany with tufted velvet covers . . . in a lot of new colors . . . Rich reds, burgundy, greens and gold . . . The Gallery, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Valentino's evening wear for summer was ruffled, tucked and lace trimmed.

Pretty D'Antonelli shoes for spring . . .

If you'd like a pretty, dressy shoe . . . at not too high a price . . . we recommend you pay an early visit to Munday's and see their new patterns in D'Antonelli shoes for spring . . . D'Antonellis are Canadian-made shoes . . . very well designed and well-crafted . . . and bearing a price tag of just $27 . . . which is also the price of matching handbags, made from exactly the same leather as the shoes . . . This spring, all the D'Antonelli patterns at Munday's are new . . . There's a simple, very good-looking calf shoe with A-line throat (which means cut straight across), illusion heel and graceful tapered toe . . . Comes in beige, tan, or navy . . . A good suit shoe, we think . . . Another very pretty shoe is suede . . . bone, mid-blue and an off-red shade called melon . . . This has a high gored front and fold-over flap trimmed with nailheads . . . Another suede shoe with lower heel and broader toe has an A-line throat and rolled leather ornamentation . . . a type of trim being shown quite a bit for this coming season . . . Another similar suede shoe with sling back and plaster scroll trim should be on hand by the time you read this . . . Bone, melon and that very pretty mid-blue we mentioned above, are the colors for these two latter models . . . Two or three different styles in handbags match most of the D'Antonelli shoes. . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 382-2211.

White with touches of beige, navy with white, and black with pink and green are Valentino's colors for summer 1972.

Take advantage of this big perm special . . .

Forget about the snow and look at it this way . . . Winter's almost over . . . soon you'll be blossoming forth in new spring clothes . . . and doesn't it make good sense to get your hair in tip-top condition . . . cut and permed and styled to make you look new all over . . . to do justice to those smart new clothes? . . . We've just emerged preening from the House of Glamour . . . with a brand new, permanent which we swear is the best we've ever had . . . but then we say this every time we get a perm at H of G . . . and it's always true! . . . What's more, this is the time for every woman to save money on her new perm because H of G have their big spring special on for the whole month of February . . . and if you're smart you'll make an appointment for yourself before the month is out! . . . You'll save money . . . and you'll be delighted with the results . . . Think about having a conditioning treatment too . . . you'd be surprised what one or two of these treatments can do for hair that's a bit dry or listless . . . Finally, how about letting the clever H of G people give you a new styling? . . . A real morale pepper-upper if ever we knew one! . . . Short haircuts are big news for spring . . . and the H of G stylists will create the perfect cut to make you look younger and prettier than ever! . . . House of Glamour, 1175 Douglas St., 386-6188.

Acquire a little silk dress with pleated or gathered skirt, and a jacket that can be shrugged on over everything.

Dine in style from this new oven-to-table ware . . .

Fine bone china certainly has its place in the scheme of things . . . but for family day-in-day-out use . . . we think there's just nothing to beat a really good oven-to-table ware set . . . especially in a home that veers to the contemporary in decor . . . One of the top makes of vitrified stoneware carried by Montague Bridgman is English Purbeck . . . and when we were in the store the other day, we found they had two new patterns . . . distinctive enough to catch our eye even before they were pointed out to us . . . One, called "Rock Fleur" is deep cream colored with a greyish brown border and etched flower design in the centre of the plates . . . The other new pattern is "Aztec" . . . a geometric design in the same basic colors . . . Put us in mind of some museum pieces we've seen in Mexico . . . There's a warm glow to this oven-to-table ware . . . and the colors . . . far from clashing with anything you already own . . . will, you'll find, blend beautifully . . . and enhance the effect of colorful cloths or crystal . . . Mugs, cups, teapot (very nice shape, by the way, with wooden handle) . . . salts and peppers, etc. are in plain dark brown to be used with either pattern . . . This Purbeck is open stock . . . How One Working Mother Copes With Mealtime

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Most working mothers stuck with cooking dinner after an eight-hour stint at the office adopt one of two philosophies:

They belong to the "get the whole nasty business over with" school or the "put it off as long as possible" group.

Women in the second group keep hoping their husbands will crack just once and cook the dinner. But night after night they are disappointed.

Those who believe in rushing dinner to the table so they can relax afterwards are far more practical. They are also more resourceful — they have to be.

Women's magazines are full of cooking features geared to the meal time problems of the working wife. Unfortunately, these articles are too often written with the rich working wife in mind. Their authors assume their readers have wall-to-wall freezers and unlimited food budgets.

Lobster, Sherry

For example, the February issue of one magazine contains an article that promises "dinner in thirty minutes." The recipe calls for lobster, shrimp, canned white sauce and sherry. This entree is served in pastry shells with either asparagus or fiddlehead greens "to add a touch of color."

The writer ignores the fact that many wives work to keep their families out of bankruptcy.

When a magazine or newspaper does feature low-cost meals, the main course always requires hours of tenderizing, simmering or slow baking. If this advice is followed, what is saved at the supermarket is lost on the hydro bill.

Helpful advise for working mothers like Liz Godfrey, 31, who want to serve an economical meal half an hour after they arrive home, is almost non-existent.

Mrs. Godfrey teaches full-time at a day care centre. She likes to serve dinner by 6 p.m. at the latest, although she rarely gets home before 5:20 p.m.

Limited Budget

Her grocery budget is limited. Her husband, Jack, is a full-time student at the University of Victoria. She tries to keep within a $2 per day limit for dinner for three adults (they have a boarder) and an 8-year-old.

Her system takes brains, stamina, and planning. Saturdays Mrs. Godfrey checks food advertisements in the newspaper and chooses "whatever kind of roast is cheapest" anywhere in the Greater Victoria area.

This roast serves as the main course for at least two meals. For examples, Sunday's roast of beef will be served Monday or Tuesday as hot beef sandwiches or stew.

Sunday afternoons Mrs. Godfrey bakes six dozen bran muffins, six dozen butter tarts and a couple of cakes or pies. These will last her family and their boarder until Friday.

Plans Carefully

Mrs. Godfrey does a lot of planning to cut down costs and save time. Sundays she draws up a menu for the week and sticks to it. This eliminates time wasted trying to decide what to fix for dinner when she gets home from work.

A typical week's menu would be:

Sunday: roast, roast potatoes, cabbage, cake, tea or milk.

Monday: hamburgers in buns, tossed salad, instant pudding, choice of coffee, tea or milk.

Tuesday: leftover roast beef with gravy, carrots and mashed potatoes, jello, coffee, tea or milk.

Wednesday: fried chicken, rice, turnips, strawberries (frozen), coffee, tea or milk.

Thursday: meat loaf prepared in the morning and placed in the automatic oven timed to be ready by 6 p.m., corn (frozen), potatoes baked with the meat loaf, instant pudding, coffee, tea or milk.

Friday: spaghetti, tossed salad, jello, coffee, tea or milk.

Saturday: chuck steak marinated overnight in the refrigerator, mashed potatoes, carrots, canned fruit, coffee, tea or milk.

Mrs. Godfrey always serves soup as a first course because it "cuts down on the amount of meat and potatoes they can eat."

Too Tired

Fridays, dinner consists of spaghetti, macaroni and cheese or homemade pizza because Mrs. Godfrey feels "too tired by the end of the week to cook."

Her menus are all planned to take a maximum of 30 minutes cooking time. Wednesday's meal is typical.

The moment Mrs. Godfrey came in the door at 5:20 p.m. she plugged in her electric frying pan to heat while she coated cut-up chicken in seasoned flour.

Once the chicken was browning she cut up turnips and heated water for both vegetables. By 5:30 p.m., the entire meal was cooking. Dinner was ready by 5:50.

Liz Godfrey works full-time in Centennial Day Care Centre

The grocery budget, excluding bread and milk, averages about $25 a week. Mrs. Godfrey expects to have to spend more than this for the next few months. Last summer she froze 45 pounds of carrots, 30 pounds of beans, 20 dozen cobs of corn and 20 pounds of berries. She used up the last of her frozen vegetables this week and will now have to spend money on vegetables.

She saves money on meat by buying the cheaper and tougher cuts of beef and tenderizing them in a special marinade made by combining 1 cup red wine, ¼ cup lemon juice, ¼ cup salad oil, 1 garlic bud (crushed), ½ tsp. red pepper, 1 tsp. dry mustard.

Chuck steak marinated in this mixture for 24 hours is "as tender as sirloin," according to Mrs. Godfrey.

FDA Urged to Ban Dye

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Food and Drug Administration was urged Friday to ban permanently a widely-used food, drug and cosmetics dye suspected of causing cancer, fetal death and birth defects.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, co-ordinator of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, said in a letter to the FDA that the dye, known as FD and C Red No. 2, is used in production of $28 million worth of food each day.

An estimated 1.5 million pounds of Red. No. 2, made from coal tar, are used annually to color breakfast cereal, gum, candy, pet foods, gelatin desserts, soft drinks, lipstick and pill coatings. Its presence is noted only as "artificial colorings" on a label.

Dr. Wolfe said FDA scientists have confirmed portions of Russian studies indicating the dye causes tumors in rats and has toxic effects on chicken and rat embryos. U.S. food and drug laws prohibit any food additive which causes cancer in humans or animals.

Food Prices Go Up . . . Up . . . Up . . .

Mrs. Elke Kluge, with son Nicholas, shops for bargains

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

How do increased food prices affect you, the consumer?

The Times surveyed three local supermarkets this week to compare costs of certain food stapes with their costs in 1968, just five short years ago.

The shopping trip revealed that the meat eater is having a thin time of it and the sweet-toothed are taking it in the jaw.

Fish may be frozen — but prices aren't.

The biggest single price jump seemed to be in granulated sugar. In 1968, according to Statistics Canada, sugar cost 9.6 cents per pound. Stores surveyed this week showed the price for the same amount to be 17 cents — a 43 per cent rise in the last five years.

The one department in supermarkets most prone to attacks of galloping price tags is the meat counter. When the butcher refers to cuts, you can bet your beefsteak he's not talking about price reductions.

Sirloin, the Cadillac of the carnivore world, has risen from its 1968 average of $1.28 a pound to today's range of $1.79 to $1.85. Rib roast, $1.14 a pound in 1968, can't be found now for much less than $1.20, and it could cost you up to $1.41 a pound.

Even the lowly hamburger meat, alias ground beef, has risen in the world, if price is the criterion. In 1968 you could have picked up a pound, says Statistics Canada, for 59.5 cents. Now you're paying 75 to 79 cents a pound.

We may live in Victoria-by-the-Sea, but our geographical location has done little to prevent fish from tipping the scales at ever-increasing prices. Frozen cod fillets, circa 1968, went glassy-eyed for 48.5 cents a pound. Today they won't bat an eyelid for less than 69 cents, a 42 per cent rise in half a decade.

Canned salmon of the fancy pink variety, weighing in at 7⅝ oz. per can, also commands a fancier price today. Its 1968 price of 42.3 cents has been superseded by a local average of 69 to 75 cents.

The cost of dairy and poultry products showed similar rising trends. Chicken, however, averaging 59 cents a pound for a 1½ to 4 pound bird, has not risen as steeply as many of the other items surveyed. In 1968, cost would have been 49.6 cents. Reasons for this could be increased consumer demand (many people use chicken as a meat substitute) and mechanization of 'chicken factories'.

Milk has risen from 29.7 cents a quart to 36 cents, Grade A butter won't melt in anyone's mouth for much under 76 cents a pound, up from 71 cents in 1968.

The following table shows a comparison of grocery staples surveyed in three large local stores. The 1968 cost is taken from the Statistics Canada average January retail price for selected food items.

Item (varying by brands)	Local Aver. Price	1968 Price
Oranges, medium, per dozen	99-1.20	65.7
Bananas, per lb.	20	15.8
Potatoes, table, 10 lbs.	59-79	57
Lettuce, head	38-42	34.9
Infant's canned food, vegetable, per can	14	12.6
Soup, vegetable, 10 oz.	15-19	15.5
Orange pekoe teabags, 60	89-99	85
Coffee, instant, 6 oz.	89-1.43	1.07
Coffee, medium, ground, per lb.	87-1.00	89.3
Catsup, 11 oz.	29-35	26.7

SHOPPERS' REACTIONS

This week's release by Statistics Canada — stating that food costs have risen by close to 8 per cent in the past year — was no news to most shoppers in stores surveyed this week by the Times.

The statistics merely bear out the shoppers' worst fears.

Mrs. Elke Kluge has two children. Her husband, who works at UVic, gives her an allowance which she describes as "generous enough to leave her something to save after the groceries are bought."

Increased prices have met with some resistance from the Kluge household, however.

Mrs. Kluge will go for cheaper cuts of meat and she will shop around much more in search of bargains. She goes as far as Sidney for her fish and has begun to make her own bread and do her own canning.

Mrs. Hillary Ives, of Saanich, also buys for a husband and two children. Food price rises have become so much the order of the day, says Mrs. Ives, that she and her husband have come to realize that an annual housekeeping review is a necessary part of the domestic economy.

When things become too tight, the first thing to be cut back is meat, she says.

"There's just no way I will pay $6.00 for a roast. Even a Sunday one."

The lunch hour break is Ted Nowotniak's chance once a week to go shopping for groceries. The Nowotniaks find it easier for him to slip into the supermarket, but getting through the checkout counter is proving more expensive with every passing week.

"We used to reckon on $15.00 doing the pair of us. Then we discovered we were overspending this amount fairly regularly. We've stopped trying to plan how much we need to spend on food."

One-time sirloin samplers, Nowotniak and his wife are now converts to the chuck steak.

A surprise lesson in economic nationalism came from Mr. and Mrs. E. Spencer, of Oregon, a pair of self-confessed vagrants hoping to tour the world. A former grocer, Mr. Spencer warns the Canadian shopper against buying goods made by U.S. companies. He cites the case of paper goods, breakfast cereals and soap powders as classic examples of items that are "incredibly more expensive" in Canada than their identical U.S counterparts.

The Spencers, ex-professionals of the shop counter, are guided in their shopping by quality, quantity and price comparison.

No amount of guidelines make shopping any easier for Mrs. Ana Mair. She and her husband, like a great many other Victorians, live on a pension. For this group most of all, the spectre of spiralling food costs is an ominous one.

'It used to be that pork spare ribs was the most economical cut of meat on the market. Now it's become so expensive that we may as well go for something that has less bones in it."

Mrs. Mair's search for bargains is becoming more difficult each week.

"It seems at times as if there will be no cheaper substitutes left in a few years," she says. And it's not only the basic food items that cost the pensioner dearly. The Mairs are particularly fond of honey, but with a 28.5% rise in five years, even this small luxury may be in jeopardy.

The problem, says Mrs. Mair, is that whatever happens, "we've got to eat."

And that, in a phrase, is how Mr. Rising Food Price has got each one of us firmly over a barrel.

Cost of Loving Rises With Card Sales Tax

LONDON (CP) — More Valentines than ever before will be slipped into Britain's mailboxes for this leap-year Valentine's Day, despite a continuing tough sales tax on greeting cards which doesn't help the cost of loving.

Jim Scott, president of an association embracing 31 firms of card and calendar manufacturers, says sales this year will probably reach 22 million — a large proportion of them still the traditional hearts-and-flowers type, though the biggest demand now comes from the younger end of the market for humorous, boldly-designed cards.

One representative message this year, apt in view of the frenzied real estate boom here, goes as follows: "I know your love is not for sale, but could I interest you in a long-term lease arrangement?"

Card manufacturers are still squealing about the swinging sales tax—originally 55 per cent — slapped on their products by the Labor goverment in 1968. It now has been cut to 45 per cent, but greeting cards still rank as luxury goods along with furs, perfume and jewelry, although Scott maintains "we are in the communications business."

The sales tax was the worst blow to the greeting card industry since Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook as wartime supply minister banned them shortly before Christmas, 1941. The outcry from manufacturers was so great that the ban was reversed two months later on the ground that greeting cards were essential to the war effort.

In spite of the industry's current complaints, card sales generally are booming.

Valentines of one sort or another have a far longer history than any other cards. Among the earliest recorded in Britain, and still preserved in the British Museum, was one sent to his wife by a French nobleman caputred at the battle of Agincourt and imprisoned in the Tower of London in 1415.

Henry VIII — he of the six wives — was, appropriately enough, the man who instituted the Feb. 14 holiday by royal charter in 1537.

St. Valentine himself is thought to have been a Christian martyr executed for his faith Feb. 14 in the year 270. One story is that he restored the sight of his jailer's blind daughter and on the night before his execution wrote her a farewell note signing it From your Valentine.

But the modern association of Feb. 14 with rituals of love probably originates in the Roman Lupercalia, a fertility festival held in mid-February.

They're Swingers at 70

TORONTO (CP) — Romance is in the air when more than 100 swingers — with an average age of 70 — turn out each Thursday night for a senior citizens' dance at a local recreation centre.

Matty Eckler, centre director, said there have been a dozen marriages since the dances started 10 years ago.

Raymond Bruce, 74, was a widower with 10 children when he met his bride-to-be.

"When I laid eyes on Violet," he said, "I told myself: 'There's the gal for me.'

"We went steady at the dances and then we got married on Dec. 19, 1970. We're still here every week, no matter what the weather's like."

"There are four fellows interested in me," confided Mrs. Betty Lavery. "I can't decide which one I like best."

She and Mabel Rainsbottom were wary about disclosing their ages. "We're girls until we're 90," Mabel declared.

Road to Popularity Hard One to Travel

DEAR ABBY: I have a sweet motherless 14-year-old niece who comes to me with her problems. She has asked me so many times to tell her how to be "popular." Is there something you can recommend for her to read? I know there is no easy road to popularity, but I would like to help her. Please? — Aunt Laura.

DEAR ANUT LAURA: Will this do? I wrote it in my column nearly 10 years ago, and it's still true:

"The key to being popular with both sexes is: Be kind. Be honest. Be tactful. If you can't be be beautiful (or handsome) be well-groomed, tastefully attired, trim of figure, and KEEP A SMILE ON YOUR FACE! Be clean in mind and body. If you're not a brain, try harder. If you're not a great athlete, be a good sport.

"Try to be a standout at something. If you can't dance or sing, learn to play an instrument. Think for yourself, but respect the rules. Be generous with kind words and affectionate gestures, but save the heavy artillery for later. You'll be glad you did. If you need help, ask God. If you don't need anything, THANK God!"

CONFIDENTIAL TO "GRATEFUL BEYOND WORDS": Most small-town clergymen are overworked and underpaid, so since you say you can "well afford it, offer him a gift of cash. If he wishes to donate it to the church, let it be his option. Your letter indicates that your clergyman went far above and beyond the call of duty in your behalf, so be as generous with him as he was with you. (And if he's "insulted," you can blame me.)

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occassions."

The 24-Hour Dress

For the woman who has "nothing to wear" there is something most reassuring about having a dress that will be appropriate for any social occasion.

And when a designer is thoughtful enough to provide a pattern for a dress that can change its character from daytime to evening with only a change of fabric, it is an economic pleasure as well.

Mr. D'Crenza, the designer in this instance, who dresses so many international travellers, suggests the dress in a heavy crepe for an evening look. He has used a contrast belt set into side seams to simulate a high-waisted look but the belt could be self-material and set at a line most becoming to the wearer.

The long-sleeved version is made up in this designer's favorite fabric, men's wear flannel, but the pattern is well suited to any other type of wool. The skirt moves with the body in that slight flare so flattering to the figure.

To order the D'Crenza California Couture printed pattern No. D-4201 in sizes 10 to 16 (new sizing) send $1.50 in American funds to Couture Patterns, Box 2740, G.P.O. New York, N.Y., 10001. Add 25 cents for mailing and special handling. Print plainly your name, address, pattern number and size. Please allow 14 days for delivery.

Child-Proof Pill Box Recommended

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled this week that the mother of a three-year-old Brantford girl, who died Jan. 14 of a drug overdose, should have returned a tranquilizer pill container to a locked box where medication was kept in their home.

Robert Farr told coroner Dr. James Carson that the lock-equipped box was obtained after his daughter, Tracy Lynn, had consumed pills twice before.

The jury recommended that further design and development be done to produce a pill container that cannot be opened by children. It was recommended that use of the containers be mandatory for all prescriptions.

The inquest was told the child consumed 25 to 30 of the pills, Etrafon D, an anti-depressant tranquillizer that had been prescribed for her mother.

Dr. A. E. Croal, a pathologist at Brantford General Hospital, where the girl died, told the jury cause of death was brain damage resulting from an overdose of the drug.

Mrs. Farr said she was busy and had put the pills on the top shelf of a cupboard in the kitchen rather than returning them to the metal box.

She added she was sleeping that afternoon and when she awoke she found her daughter convulsing. The empty pill container was on a kitchen counter, near a chair the youngster had used to climb on to the counter. The child died a week later.

The jury criticized the Farr's family physician, Dr. R. W. Farley, saying that, knowing the mother's condition and the child's past history, he should not have prescribed such a large amount of the drug. Evidence revealed he had prescribed 100 pills for Mrs. Farr in November.

Radiation Study Underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government is launching a five-year study to determine whether humans are endangered by electromagnetic radiation from such everyday gadgets as television sets and microwave ovens.

Clay T. Whitehead, director of the White House office of telecommunications policy, has approved a $63-million program involving more than a dozen agencies.

The study was recommended by the Electromagnetic Radiation Advisory Council, a body of non-government experts that has worked with federal agencies for the last two years.

The study also will focus on equipment such as radio transmitters, radar sets and lasers.

The council has suggested a series of experiments starting with animals and eventually involving humans.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, Feb. 13, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emotions run high; nothing now is apt to occur halfway. Know this and don't play games. If you start something, finish it. Romantic interests are highlighted. If married, you rediscover mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What has been held back is released. Secrets pour out; frustrations are aired. Time now is for action, not procrastination. Be independent, but avoid being overly aggressive. Important task is finished.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message. Be ready for new contacts, concepts and challenges. Bring forth creative resources. What was to have been settled is reactivated. Stress independence, originality. Keep communication lines open.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friend is aggressive. Hold your ground. Be amiable without being weak. Money is involved. Give yourself time. Refuse to be rushed into any agreement. Be quiet within. Answers will be forthcoming.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lie low. Obtain hint from Cancer message. There are more options than you might imagine. Know this and play waiting game. Permit one close to you to take initiative. Maintain sense of humor. Be receptive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tread lightly. Don't force issues. There are fine points yet to be settled. Read between lines. Cautious approach uncovers loopholes. Act accordingly. Protect self in clinches. Maintain steady pace.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This is no time to dabble. It is the cold plunge or nothing. Creative endeavors are favored. Trying to do things in routine manner could lead to disappointment. Give of yourself — all the way.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov. 21): Don't permit pride to stand in way of progress. Means ask for aid if needed. Family member can figure prominently. Contract dispute is settled if you get expert advice. Build on solid foundation. You will comprehend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Postpone journey if possible. Ideas, plans need time to jell. Quarrelsome neighbor, relative grabs spotlight. Refuse to become discouraged. Realize jealousy accomplishes only unhappiness. You will understand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Speculative ventures would best be left for another time. Avoid arguments with young persons. Creative drive requires constructive outlet. Don't hurt one you love. Stick to what is familiar.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can successfully present program or format. Piece together puzzle. You can come up with meaningful answers. Key is willingness to let go of past. You can make your own future — and it can be bright.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Secret is revealed. What was considered embarrassing becomes topic for open discussion. Be forthright. Trying to hide facts would be error. Know this and act accordingly. Leo figures prominently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you can be determined, at times stubborn. You are a square shooter, one who despises pretense. Recent adjustment in domestic area ultimately will benefit you. Significant month this year is October. You are on the way to remarkable comeback.

Forecast for Monday, Feb. 14, 1972.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent friendly approach. Maintain balance and stress humanitarianism. Your wishes, with regard to opposite sex, can be fulfilled. Look beyond surface indications. Over-all view brings desired results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Recognition for civic efforts is due. You may be surprised. What you thought others took for granted is not that way. Creative move impressed professional superior. You're going in right direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't lose sight of potential. You have a long way to go — but the journey is worth it. Means you can rise above obstacles. You learn now how to apply philosophical concepts. You become a bigger, better person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some around you are intense. Display humor, but don't laugh at wrong moment. Question of financial settlement is apt to be paramount. Sagittarian figures prominently. You get to bottom of mystery.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on joint effort, tying together loose ends. Be aware of public relations. Question concerning marriage can be settled. Check details. It may be necessary to consult legal expert. Be thorough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work, health problems can be solved. Know this and avoid tendency to brood. Change works in your behalf. Don't resist progress. Get together with one who shares your interests. Gemini is involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are revitalized. Your ideas are young. You come alive. Friends and family pay meaningful compliments. You can make successful domestic adjustment. Give and receive gifts. You're going to be happier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Build on solid base. Get house in order. Take inventory. Complete transactions. Attention centres around home base. Eliminate safety hazards. Be practical. Avoid self-deception. See in realistic light.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Activity centres around relatives, neighbors. Journey that has been delayed is undertaken. There are quick changes; forces tend to be scattered. Check reports, messages. Don't take others too seriously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Collect information. Discuss budget with family member. Don't overextend. Plan carefully in area of money management. There is a tomorrow. Genuine bargain available if shrewd. Be a comparison shopper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle high; timing improves. What you need comes into your life. Take initiative. Emphasize independence of thought, action. One who means much to you fulfills your desires. Ride with tide.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Activity indicated in connection with organization which aids handicapped. You could be visiting individual confined to home, hospital. Be charitable. Permit best instincts to flourish. You gain by giving.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY this can be a power year. You can make progress financially and emotionally. If single, marriage is on horizon. Accept added responsibility. Rewards can be great. You have innate ability to communicate, to report, to move with the times.

His Walk Was a Snow Job

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Walking 300 miles across Ontario on snowshoes to blaze a hiking trail may not sound like an architectural project but it is for Peter Ridgway.

The third-year architecture student at University of Toronto justifies his class project by saying resorts involve architecture and trails are resorts.

Ridgway, 21, said he decided to lay out a hiking trail for his project after spending a weekend at Dyer's Bay in the Bruce Peninsula.

"We just sat up there on the cliffs, looking out over the bay, and I decided I wanted to find some way of preserving this type of experience."

He said he could have designed a resort hotel but added it would defeat his purpose by restricting the natural beauty to those who could pay and resulting in environmental damage in the form of parking lots and access roads.

SEES ENDLESS TRAIL

Last fall he compiled data about trails and maps of central Ontario and traced a tentative route running from the forks of the Thames in London to Lake Opeongo in Algonquin Provincial Park.

But he pictures his trail, which as yet has no name, as an endless one. He sees it eventually joining up with other trails in the province and in New York State.

He began his hiking just before Christmas when he walked from London to Elmira, 60 miles to the northeast.

"I think this area is best suited to trails for the type of people who want to get out for just a day, or who don't want to carry a pack."

Recently he has been hiking in the Barrie area on his way to Huntsville, 70 miles to the north. He also plans to do the stretch through Algonquin Park.

Ridgway said he had never gone hiking before but had little difficulty learning to walk with snowshoes.

AIMS FOR GRANT

Wearing thermal underwear, a sweater, a leather vest and snowmobile suit, he says he is not bothered by the cold once he gets moving. He carries 35 pounds of equipment including tent, sleeping bag, maps and dried food.

"The worst part is setting up the camp or taking things down in the morning because you have to take your gloves off."

He plans to apply for an Opportunities for Youth grant from the federal government in the summer. If he receives it he will go back along the trail organizing committees in each area.

"By then I'll have a handbook with a suggested route, but it'll be up to local people who know the area better to make arrangements for going through the various properties."

Ridgway says people, particularly those in small towns, are interested in his project and see the trail as a major tourist attraction.

Another reason he says he is getting support is because people who use hiking trails have a good reputation.

"The type of people who go hiking aren't the type who leave a mess behind."

RIDGWAY . . . long walk

DAZZLING SAND BLINDING

ADDIS ABABA (Reuter) — A strange blindness that afflicts the inhabitants of Ethiopia's Dahlak Islands in the Red Sea may be caused by excessive ultra-violet radiation from sand and coral.

This is the conclusion reached by a British medical team under the leadership of Frederick Rodger, a tropical eye disease specialist. The team, from Britain's Scientific Exploration Society, spent five weeks on the islands.

Rodger told reporters he had been able to gain a general idea of the disease after examining a number of islanders suffering from both early and late stages of blindness.

"The most likely cause seems to be excessive ultra-violet radiation resulting from reflection from the dazzling white sand and coral," he said.

The team examined 1,800 persons out of the population of 3,000 and found 120 to be completely blind and at least half suffering from varying degrees of "Dahlak blindness."

"The condition was far worse and more common than we had thought," he said. "It was not apparent until about the age of 20. It took another 20 years to interfere with the eyesight and yet another 20 years before total blindness resulted."

The disease could be cured by surgery if caught at an early stage, Rodger believes. If sufficient fresh water could be found, it should be used for irrigation to grow trees to provide shade and lessen the reflection problem.

Hand Tools Stolen

Hand tools valued at $120 were stolen overnight in a break-in at Oak Bay Manor, a new senior citizens' complex nearing completion at Cadboro Bay Road and Bowker in Oak Bay.

Police said the thieves took only hand tools, leaving a number of power tools scattered around the locker, which had been opened by forcing the lock between quitting time at 4:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. this morning.

LITTLE AIRLINE THAT TRIED IS PRAIRIE FAVORITE NOW

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — A few years ago, the airport bus wheeled off the main route to pick up a fare on a side street.

One passenger wondered if the detour would make them late for the plane.

"Don't worry," said the bus driver. "I'm the pilot."

Driver Walter Ross also could have told the concerned customer that he was the president of the airline and one-third of the total staff.

That was 1966 and Time Airways Ltd. was making two round trips a day between Calgary and Lethbridge with an eight-passenger Beechcraft. Its competition was a 48-passenger Air Canada Viscount, making one trip daily.

Mr. Ross obviously knew what he was doing driving that bus because he now has four aircraft serving Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton.

Time, operating on the theory that the public wants small craft making frequent flights, now averages 150 passengers a day on the Calgary-Lethbridge run. Air Canada is no longer on the route.

The company now has a staff of 35, including 12 pilots, and has its own organization to handle reservations, maintenance and pilot training.

A scheduled airline was not in his plans until he criticized the service that was offered to Calgary by Air Canada.

"The local newspaper and some people in the community challenged me to do something about it and I filed an application to Ottawa."

GRANTED ROUTE

Two and a half years later he was flying the route and in 1970 Air Canada altered policy and relinquished some routes, such as the Lethbridge one, to regional carriers.

In putting together his operation, the 40-year-old Mr. Ross had extensive dealings with the federal air transport committee and he says he is baffled by some of the bureaucratic processes.

"Government people get so involved in details like gathering statistics they sometimes don't know what they are doing."

For example, he was told to change the company's financial year-end from April 31 to Dec. 31 because federal statisticians wanted their information on a year-end basis.

However, he said, the government is fair in its dealings and better than regulatory bodies in the United States which sometimes allow airlines to compete on uneconomic routes and go bankrupt.

One irritation is the rising airport costs which he says are "going up much faster than labor or fuel costs."

He is annoyed that airlines must pay $1 for every 10 seats on an aircraft—full or empty—for the use of terminal facilities by passengers.

He said plans for a $48-million terminal at the Calgary airport are unnecessary.

"The planners are trying to predict what will happen between 1970 and 1980 on the basis of what happened to airline traffic between 1960 and 1970 and that doesn't necessarily hold."

Despite the growth of Time Airways, it hasn't become distant from the people it serves.

"Our pilots are not just pilots. They have to be public relations men too and they're not so high on the hog that they can't carry a little baggage once in a while.

"Sometimes passengers joke about our 'itty-bitty' aircraft and wonder if we land on runways or on the grass. We offer a reliable service with no frills except some cute girls.

"We've never had an accident, our on-time record is better than 99 per cent and cancellations are practically unheard of."

Can a Big-City Surgeon Be Happy Rated GP?

NORTH HATLEY, Que. (CP) — Dr. Hector McDougall, after years of big city hospitals, practises from the rear of a small village restaurant.

It's a far cry from New York's Park Avenue, where he began his career but the 52-year-old surgeon says: "It's a great way to practise medicine." He's one of that vanishing breed, the rural general practitioner.

The general practitioner has a different approach, he says.

"In a way it's more rewarding. Surgery is a referred practice. Operating on practically everybody else's patients, you see the person in a more detached fashion. You never get to know them as well as you do in a practice like this."

And he enjoys seeing "everything, all classes of people."

"Sitting next to the president of the bank may be the biggest bum in the town. They all sort of gather here."

Dr. McDougall hangs his plain wooden plaque from a converted dining room. But these quarters are fully equipped including standard reception foyer, office, examining room, laboratory and a small operating room.

The nearest hospital is in Sherbrooke, about 20 miles to the northeast. Rather than send patients away for tests, he stains the occasional lab culture himself. And while he is not about to undertake major surgery, he does perform some minor operations.

HIS DAY IS BUSY

His car, standing ready with oxygen, can and does serve as an ambulance.

When he is not making house calls at 3 a.m., Dr. McDougall might see 50 or 60 patients a day. They come mostly from a 15-mile radius, but the summer visitors come from as far as Texas.

A routine day in this GP's life may range from stitching fingers to bleeding noses or more complex treatment like male sterilization (vasectomies), child-bearing and a great many problems with aging. He also administers some psychiatric medication.

Dr. McDougall graduated from McGill University in Montreal, and has since been a surgeon in several hospitals both in Quebec and New York. He chose North Hatley out of appreciation for the nearby Lake Massawippi, the tennis and the skiing. He lives with his wife on a farm just outside the village.

You Can't Smuggle Stuff Into Andorra

(MAINLY BECAUSE IT'S LEGAL)

ANDORRA LA VELLA, Andorra (Reuter) — "The word smuggling doesn't appear in the Andorran dictionary — here we call it commerce."

The remark was made by a former top official of this tiny mountain state, perched high in the Pyrenees Mountains.

Andorra's situation as a duty-free haven between France and Spain brings it millions of visitors each year in search of cheap transistor radios, cameras, tape recorders and sporting goods.

Not all of them declare their purchases at the frontier on their way home.

In fact, not all of them even pass through customs posts and old-fashioned smuggling is still a roaring business.

Where in the past contraband tobacco and radios were carried over the rugged Pyrenees in heavy backpacks, today Land Rovers are used more frequently.

The native Andorrans, who make up only 30 per cent of the little country's population of 20,000, seem proud of their long association with the smuggling business.

The rest of the inhabitants — 12,000 Spaniards, 1,500 Frenchmen, and 500 others from 31 different nations — turn a benevolent blind eye to Andorra's contraband trade, second only to the tourist business as a money-earner for the tiny state.

"Of course, smuggling is not even against the law here," an expatriate Frenchman said.

"The Andorran police will never turn over smugglers to the Spanish or French authorities because under Andorran law they have done nothing wrong," he added.

Local shopkeepers claim that, for a small extra charge, they can deliver duty-free goods to your door in neighboring Spain or France. It may take a week or two, but it will get through eventually.

Peace Bid Toppled Khanh

HAMBURG (UPI) — Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Khanh says he was toppled from his post by the Americans in 1965 because he wanted to make peace with the Viet Cong and prevent an Americanization of the Vietnam war.

"For the Americans, the people of the National Liberation Front (the political arm of the Viet Cong) were Communists, nothing else," Khanh said in an interview appearing in the latest edition of the West German weekly news magazine Der Stern.

"For me, they were no Communists, but revolutionaries. I wanted to make peace in 1965. I wanted to prevent an Americanization of the war," he said. "I told this time and time again to (former U.S. ambassadors in Saigon) Henry Cabot Lodge and Maxwell Taylor. And this finally broke my neck. In mid-February 1965, I was topped by the Americans and sent abroad as a "special envoy," Khanh said.

In reply to a question why he later was stripped of his special envoy's post, Khanh said: "At the end of 1965 I had a conversation in New York with UN Secretary-General Thant. I told him I would do everything to make peace with the National Liberation Front, so I lost my job."

ALBERTA WOOING WINTER TOURISTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta is trying to balance its winter tourism business with its summer visitor levels by using ski promotion programs aimed at Japan, the United States and Eastern Canada.

Bob Dowling, tourism minister, said the Alberta Government Travel Bureau has spent nearly a year developing a program to attract skiers to the province's "Big Four" mountain ski areas — sunshine Village, Mount Norquay and Lake Louise, all near Banff, and Marmot Basin at Jasper.

"I am very pleased with the high degree of co-operation between hotel-motel operators, ski areas and ski schools, bus and transportation companies, and particularly with the major airlines and travel trade organizations, which have created competitive and enjoyable winter ski vacations in Alberta," the minister said recently.

He specifically referred to the charter operations that have made "our Rocky Mountain ski areas the most desirable ski experience in North America and at prices very competitive with European and U.S. ski destinations."

About 10,000 to 12,000 new skiers are expected in Alberta from Eastern Canada this winter, Mr. Dowling said

Japan, as a high potential travel area, was given special attention during an 18-day trade mission last October, he said. About 2,000 travel agents in Japan received a special promotion package.

With about 25-million skiers in Japan as possible visitors, the travel bureau aimed at developing new ski packages for Japanese travellers.

The travel bureau estimated that about 2,000 to 3,000 Japanese will visit the Western Canada mountain areas during the 1972 season.

Hotel Loses Water Lot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Friday the federal government has decided against granting a lease on a water lot on Vancouver harbor for the proposed Four Seasons hotel-apartment development next to Stanley Park.

He said it appears the developers now will have to make changes in their plans and return to city council for approval.

Ottawa made its decision because the schemes, which appeared good in the past, now are inappropriate with the population density that has built up in the city's west end, he said.

PANLIBHONCO Spells Freedom

NEW YORK (AP) — In the merchant shipping community there used to be a word that meant—to big shipowners—freedom from taxes, seamen's unions and stringent safety regulations. The word was PANLIBHONCO.

The word was derived from the Republics of Panama, Liberia, Honduras and Costa Rica. For lush licensing fees, those countries would register ships from any nation under their flags and wish them bon voyage.

PANLIBHONCO, as such, is no more, because Costa Rica has dropped out of the business and Honduras is down to 54 vessels at sea under her "flag of convenience." Liberia and Panama are still going strong. And Lebanon, Cyprus and Somali now are offering their flags to all comers.

Liberia now has 2,060 ships flying her flag and Panama 1,031, according to Lloyds Registry of Ships, making them the world leaders in the "flag of convenience" business.

The practice began in Liberia after the Second World War. The West African country has no indigenous merchant fleet and its only harbor was completed in 1948 with U.S. funds.

REGISTER IN NEW YORK

This lack of nautical accommodation in Liberia means nothing to a shipowner desiring the Liberian flag. Even a visit to the country is unnecessary because the registration is done in New York.

The Liberian deputy commissioner for maritime affairs is an American lawyer named Albert J. Rudick, now in his 17th year in the post. He is a maritime lawyer who worked previously for a shipping company.

Rudick said he was aware that some ships sailing under "flags of convenience"—he bristles at the term—have reputations as being unseaworthy. But he quickly asserted that the ships are indeed safe.

He cited such changes in Liberian safety regulations as the refusal since 1968 to register vessels more than 20 years old and the hiring of inspectors at ports around the globe.

What a shipowner gets for registering his vessels in Liberia is a tax break—"there are no taxes on earnings in Liberia," Rudick said—and freedom to choose his own labor.

He said about 25 per cent of Liberian flag ships are American-owned.

The U.S. Coast Guard says its standards for safety are much tougher than those applied to flag-of-convenience vessels. Coast Guard inspectors spotcheck every vessel that calls on U.S. ports.

Seamen's unions in the United States look down on American-owned ships that fly flags of convenience and term them "runaways" from American wage scales.

Registration in Liberia costs an initial fee of $1.20 a net ton, with an annual tax of 10 cents a net ton. To this is added an annual $250 inspection fee for each vessel and a $300-per-vessel fee to allow Liberian officials to attend international shipping conferences.

Victoria-Bound

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council's finance committee recommended the city send a delegation to Victoria to ask the provincial government for a 15-per-cent increase in its per-capita grant to municipalities. The committee plans to ask other municipalities to join the delegation.

BACK TO SALT MINES FOR FAST, FAST RELIEF

KRAKOW (AP) — The expression "back to the salt mines" brings a hope of better health to scores of asthmatics in Poland.

They step onto a mine elevator and descend 641 feet to the mine's fifth level.

At first glance, there's little to distinguish the small group from miners mingling round them. But soon they don pajamas inside a fenced-off area, and move along the tunnel until they reach two enormous cavelike chambers.

There they calmly climb into 32 beds—in rows like those of a hospital ward. Men are confined to one cave, women to another.

Lamps fixed on the craggy surface of the walls give out a little light. In a passage outside the caves sits a blue-uniformed nurse with a telephone link to the surface.

SOME SPEND NIGHT

All are aware that just 100 feet below scores of miners are laboring away, digging out slabs of salt rock. No talking is allowed among the patients, who must spend three hours underground doing deep-breathing exercises. Others spend a night in the cave, then are brought to the surface and taken to the Kinga Sanatorium inside the mines' complex.

The disused tunnel at the Wieliczka salt mine is being used to combat chronic asthma and skin allergies. Each member of the group is a patient undergoing treatment.

It's the result of a large-scale experiment carried out in 1958 to determine what happens to asthma sufferers hundreds of feet below ground. The results were startling, says Dr. Mieczyslaw Skulmowski, who claims to have invented the method of treatment.

"In the underground atmosphere of the salt mines, shortness of breath and coughing disappear," he said. "The patients' appetite improves dramatically and some even gain weight."

They generally walk away practically cured, he asserts with a qualifying note: "It's almost impossible to hope for a complete success unless an asthma patient is under 20.

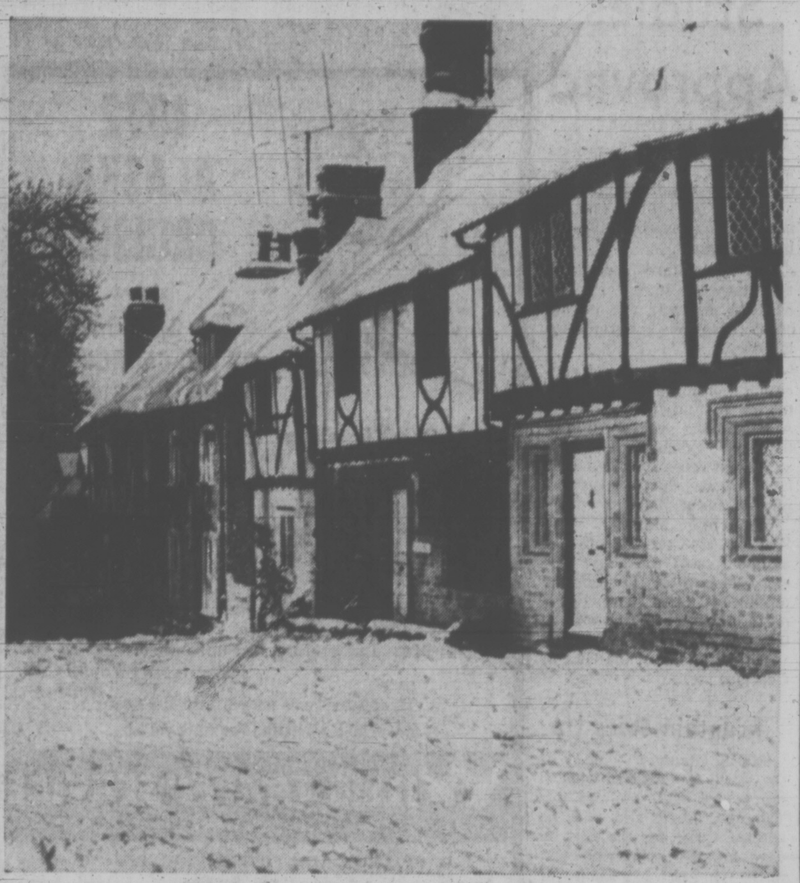
SIX MONTHS' RELIEF

He figures a patient can expect at least six months' relief from asthma. Only the most acute cases are accepted on the recommendation of hospitals. So far the Kinga Sanatorium has treated more than 1,000 patients between the ages of two and 78.

One of the main attractions for patients is the method's simplicity, breathing deeply in a mine.

Why is a salt mine beneficial? Skulmowski gives these reasons:

The caves have a favorable concentration of carbon dioxide; there's more oxygen than above ground; 99.9 per cent of the caves' dust in the air contains nothing more than common salt particles; the patient is kept away from unfavorable weather conditions.



CHILHAM IN WINTER, with a fresh scattering of snow, is typical of many such villages in Kent, England. Among its many attractions are a fine church, Jacobean mansion and the remains of a Norman castle.

Migration Slows

TOKYO (Reuter) — Many species of birds have stopped their seasonal migration to Japan because of pollution and the destruction of their natural habitat.

Officially, there are 424 species of birds in Japan, of which 76 per cent are migratory.

A survey by the government's environmental agency showed that the number of migratory birds is declining alarmingly.

For example, the survey reported only 5,000 wild geese sighted in 1971 — one-tenth the number recorded in 1953.

A growing conservation movement, which puts the blame for the decreasing number of birds on air and water pollution and the spread of agricultural chemicals, is being joined by ornithologists, members of the public and the government.

The environmental agency pointed out that industrial encroachment has reduced the number of traditional wintering places for the birds to 27 from 149.

To protect water birds from pollution and destruction of their natural habitat, the agency has designated Lake Biwa, Japan's largest, as a protected area.

3 best buys in the Orient.

1. Pearls. The treasure that every woman cherishes—and every man wants to give. The Orient's the home of cultured pearls, and they come rainbow-colored in white, pink, cream and blue. At a fraction of what you'd pay at home.

2. Dolls. Japan is the doll capital of the world and it's a hard-hearted shopper who can resist their charm and appeal. Take your pick—from copies of authentic ceremonial figures to such familiar faces as Barbie and Ken.

3. Custom-made clothing. There are 20,000 tailors in Hong Kong—all first-rate. Just one fitting and you can have a custom-made suit in 24 hours. At a beats-anything-back-home bargain price.

3 best buys to the Orient.

1. 15 days. $999. Fully-escorted tour to Tokyo, Kamakura, Hakone, Atami, Kyoto, Taipei, Hong Kong and Honolulu. Included are round-trip air fare from Vancouver, all hotels, most meals.

2. 22 days. $1400. The best of Japan, Taipei, Hong Kong, Singapore, Bali and Bangkok—with local escorts all the way. One price pays for air fare from and to Vancouver, hotels, breakfasts and many other meals.

3. 30 days. $1780. The Orient and the South Pacific in one great package. Japan, Taipei, Hong Kong, Australia, New Zealand, Nandi, Suva and Hawaii. Local escorts everywhere. Included are round-trip jets from Vancouver, hotels, most meals.

If you've been shopping for a vacation to the Orient, Japan Air Lines has the best ones going.

We call them Kampai Tours ("Kampai" is the Japanese way of saying cheers, good spirits). You'll call them the most enjoyable vacation ever.

Kampai Tours were designed by the people who know the Orient best (that's us). For the people of Canada who want a vacation that's truly theirs (that's you). Just clip out the coupon and we'll send you the good word about three of them.

Nothing could be easier. Unless it's your flight on a JAL jet. From the moment you step aboard, you'll relax in the serene atmosphere created by your gracious, kimono-clad JAL hostess. It's all part of our thousand-year-old hospitality that our regular guests treasure and first-timers marvel at.

For complete details about our Kampai Tours, send the coupon, talk to your travel agent or give our Vancouver office a call at "O" ZE 6800.

Spouse Benefits Widened

Common law spouses and the illegitimate children of people who die without wills may go to court for maintenance benefits under legislation brought before the house Friday by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

The provisions are contained in a bill to amend the Administration Act. Also contained in the bill is a requirement that all beneficiaries of wills and persons likely to question wills receive notice before probate is granted.

This was requested earlier in the session by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) who introduced a private member's bill seeking to amend the Administration Act in a similar way.

Peterson explained outside the house that his bill also drops the term "concubine" from usage under the act because it has become obsolete, having been on the books since 1897.

He said the main intent of the bill is to allow common law wives a way to seek relief in court when their spouses die without wills.

He said the amendment was introduced in co-ordination with the outlook of further family law legislation soon to be brought before the house.

Previously, said Peterson, common law spouses could only get $500 in intestate situations. The term "common law" will apply in cases where the couple has lived together two years or more.

Also in the bill is a provision guaranteeing the spouse of a deceased person payment of back wages owed up to three months before death.

Money must be paid irrespective of any debts of the deceased, said Peterson.

HOME RIGHTS

The bill also contains a section guaranteeing the surviving spouse the right to remain living in the family home for the rest of his or her life.

This does not mean the spouse would receive absolute title to the home in cases without wills, Peterson said.

Another section removes a cumbersome portion of the act which required adultery to be proved after death of one party in order that the surviving spouse receive no part of the estate.

In the new amendments, Peterson said, the surviving spouse would take no part of the estate if it can be proved that the couple had lived apart for at least one year with no intention of returning to live together again.

Applications for maintenance for illegitimate children may be made on behalf of these people by guardians or next friends if the child is a minor.

Surviving spouses in cases without wills also would receive ownership of all household furnishings.

POLITICAL RHETORIC READY TO PERCOLATE

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — With an election looming, there likely will be some stormy days ahead for the new session of Parliament beginning next Thursday.

"This is the time the gloves come off," one Conservative MP says. "You might say the campaign is on."

The Liberal government is expected to launch the new session with an election-tuned throne speech that will paint an optimistic portrait of the country, and include a generous package of proposals to make it even better. The opposition, of course, plans to scratch at it.

Both Conservative and New Democrat MPs have been busy preparing questions and reviewing issues to fire at the government. They will draw attention to everything from high unemployment in the Atlantic provinces to the hiring of Pierre Vallieres, who faces charges in connection with FLQ activities in Quebec, on a federal contract.

Vallieres was hired through a Canadian manpower centre by a Quebec research group to work on a winter works program in Mont Laurier, Que. The group received a $40,000 grant under the federal initiatives program and opposition MPs say there has been an angry reaction to the Vallieres hiring from unemployed constituents, particularly in the west.

Some Conservative MPs are planning to seek a special emergency debate to focus attention on the issue. Former prime minister John Diefenbaker says he has received several letters about Vallieres.

There are also opposition plans to give Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer a rough ride over the Christmas Eve escape in Montreal of Yves Geoffroy, who was given permission to leave St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary to get married. Geoffroy, sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his wife, hasn't been seen since.

The opposition also plans to maintain its barrage of criticism about unemployment, the rising cost of living, and the alleged failure of the $1 billion winter works program.

Conservative MPs from the Atlantic provinces, encouraged by party leader Robert Stanfield, will concentrate on the high unemployment levels there, coupling this with an attack on the government's program to lessen regional disparities.

The NDP has prepared comprehensive charts on Canada's employment and labor force patterns, which MPs say disproves most of the arguments advanced by the government as to the reasons for high unemployment.

GREEN MOUNTAIN PARK PROPOSED

NEY

Green Mountain should be made a provincial park, Frank Ney (SC—Nanaimo) told the legislature Friday.

In a speech emphasizing tourism and recreation, Ney, who also is mayor of Nanaimo, said a small investment could turn Green Mountain into an ideal ski area for southern Vancouver Island residents.

"The time has come when the government should act boldly and put in a $250,000 road right to the lodge at Green Mountain and name it as a provincial park," he said.

He also proposed the government should turn Newcastle Island into a special education area for school children and tourists.

Ney said the island has a varied history of Indian use and mining activity as well as interesting vegetation changes from south to north.

He also called for stricter guidelines for the Vancouver Island forest industry to preserve wildlife habitats.

Studying Studies Approved

The legislature approved motions Friday authorizing the house committees on agriculture, social welfare and education and expropriation to begin hearings.

The agriculture committee will study the impact imported food products are having on the province's agriculture industry.

The social welfare and education committee will study tenure for university professors, and the special committee on expropriation will study the recently-tabled B.C. law reform commission report on this subject.

Resources Minister Ray Williston also served notice of motion to ask the house forestry committee to consider provincial forest service reports on contractor clauses in tree-farm licences and log salvage operations in the Gulf of Georgia.

Hearing Aid Dealings Questioned by Dawson

A lawyer and New Democratic Party MLA was accused in the legislature Friday of "lending his talents" to some hearing aid dealers "seeking to evade proper procedures" under the Hearing Aid Act.

The accusation was levelled by Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson at Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds).

She said the majority of dealers have observed the intent of the act, but that a minority seek to receive their registration and licences without providing a $5,000 bond.

"Furthermore, it appears that they do not wish to meet the educational standards or pay the fees which have been incorporated in the regulations set out in the act," she said.

While she found the attitude of the minority hard to understand, "what is even harder to understand is that a member of this house has, so I am informed, permitted himself to be placed in the position of being retained by a group of hearing aid dealers who feel they should be able to continue to trade as they did before the act became law."

'BUNCH OF HOGWASH'

Identifying the member later as being from Burnaby-Edmonds (Mr. Dowding), she said "Judas extracted as his fee 30 pieces of silver for his betrayal of his friend and master — I wonder what is the betrayal fee of the member of this house for all the citizens of this province who must have recourse to a hearing device"

Inside the house, Dowding commented "what a bunch of hogwash."

Outside, he told a reporter any member of the house who is also a lawyer has a duty to advise clients. "It is as simple as that," he said.

Mrs. Dawson also criticized Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) for remarks she made last week about conditions at Willingdon School for Girls in Burnaby.

She said Mrs. Dailly "chose to ignore all the good work the staff has done."

The NDP members told the house that troubled young women at Willingdon are locked in their rooms at night, kept away from community life and sometimes forced into solitary confinement. She advocated closing the facility in favor of regional treatment centres.

Mrs. Dawson said Mrs. Dailly has a "lack of comprehension" of the problems and a "total disrespect" for communities and dedicated people who are trying to help

Fountain Dries Up

ROME (Reuter) — Many of the world famous fountains in the centre of Rome ran dry Thursday night and will be without water for the next 12 days because of construction work on an extension of Rome's subway system.

Civil Service Grows

The provincial civil service grew nine per cent in 1971 to a total of 29,142 persons, the annual report of the civil service commission said Friday.

The report was tabled in the legislature by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black.

The highways department had the most employees — 5,195 — but 4,726 of these were temporary. Largest number of permanent employees was in the mental health branch with 3,874.

The report said a total of 16,011 civil servants were permanent staff and the remaining 13,130 temporary help.

Turnover rate for permanent staff was 14.3 per cent, down from 16.5 per cent in 1970. Employees pay raises averaged 6.5 per cent, said the report.

Safety Record

KELOWNA (CP) — Management of the Crown Zellerbach lumber mill says the mill has set a record one million hours of operation without a lost-time injury. The record was set from June, 1969, to Jan. 31, 1972, said manager Richard Carlson.

Leduc Remembers

LEDUC, Alta. (CP) — "Oil, it's oil."

The driller's excited cry rang out on a sunny but frosty winter afternoon in a farm field 20 miles southwest of Edmonton.

It was Feb. 13, 1947, and Imperial Oil Ltd., after 27 years of searching, had found oil in Western Canada.

The discovery, 25 years ago Sunday, pushed Alberta headlong to petroleum prosperity — a good reason to celebrate.

Leduc will do just that this weekend, with an anniversary banquet, curling, hockey, figure skating and snowmobile races.

"The hotels have been booked solid for a month," said Murrey Parrow of the Leduc anniversary committee. "There are going to be a lot of oil people in town."

Leduc No. 1 touched off an exploration scramble that by 1952 had found the Redwater, Golden Spike, Bonnie Glen, Westerose, Wizard Lake, Fenn-Big Valley, Homeglen-Rimbey and Joffre Oil Fields.

They form a crescent shape from northeast to southwest of Edmonton, which has ridden the boom to become a city of 450,000.

The exploration spilled over into other western provinces, resulting in major gas finds in British Columbia and oil in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Imperial spent $23 million and came up with 133 dry holes on the prairie before Leduc. Linked together, the 133 wells would have gone down into the earth more than 100 miles.

Viewpoints Differ

CALGARY (CP) — The mayor of Canmore, Alta., says an airport capable of handling small commercial and executive jets is welcomed in the community, but some residents apparently don't agree.

The mayor, Dr. Alfred Miltins, said the planes would create no more noise than trains cause in the valley. However, Avis Stephenson said most residents like Canmore the way it is and don't want the noise. She said two petitions against the airport were being circulated and another would be sent around the town soon.

Pay Increased

REGINA (CP) — About 1,000 of Saskatchewan's senior civil servants will receive pay increases averaging 7.51 per cent, Premier Allan Blakeney announced following a cabinet meeting Friday.

The increases apply to out-of-scope administrative personnel whose salaries were not affected by an agreement reached last fall with the Saskatchewan Government Employees' Association.

Premier Optimistic

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer predicted Friday that Manitoba's unemployment rate would drop significantly this month and continue to drop throughout the spring.

Schreyer told a news conference the majority consensus of opinion is that there will be a general upturn in the employment situation and the general state of the economy this year.

Idea 'Still Good'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The two ministers responsible for developing an agriculture policy agreeable to Prairie farmers said Friday they still think the ill-fated grains income stabilization bill was a good idea.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson and Otto Lang, newly-appointed justice minister who retains responsibility for the Canadian Wheat Board, said they felt it should be reintroduced in some form.

Alert System Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Medical Association will attempt to have established a nation-wide alerting system to detect potentially dangerous toys and games, President C. J. Varvis said Friday.

The AMA has sent a resolution to the Canadian Medical Association suggesting that a mechanism be established to evaluate the new toys and games before they are ffered for sale, Dr. Varvis said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A charge of assault causing bodily harm was thrown out of provincial court Friday when the prosecution failed to prove that the man in the prisoner's box was the accused.

Ross Rousseau, 24, of Vancouver had been charged with assaulting a companion in Victoria, Oct. 22.

After the Crown completed its case against the accused Thursday afternoon, defence lawyer Harold F. Turnham asked for dismissal of the charge because none of the Crown witnesses had testified that the man facing them in the box was in fact Rousseau.

Prosecutor John Macintyre argued that the accused "was not an unknown person" and that witnesses had been looking directly at him when they were giving their testimony.

Judge William Ostler adjourned the case to Friday and asked both lawyers to come up with cases on record to support their submissions.

Friday, Turnham and Macintyre admitted they had record to support their sub-been unable to find precedents bearing on the issue. Ostler, however, had found one case which supported Turnham's application.

"It is probably trite to say that the Crown must establish the identity of the accused in court," the judge ruled, "but it is the law.

"Therefore, although it is with great reluctance, I must dismiss the charge against this accused."

Gregory Pelletier, 19, of no fixed address, was sentenced to four months definite and 12 months indeterminate in the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre on charges of uttering forged cheques and obtaining money by false pretences.

Ostler noted that Pelletier had been placed on probation for three years for similar offenses last month in Vancouver.

"There is no doubt that the motivation for this pattern of offences is continued association with drugs," the judge told Pelletier.

According to a pre-sentence report, the accused started using marijuana at the age of 13, then "progressed, if that's the word for it," through LSD, speed and heroin, said Ostler.

"It is a progression frequently found in this court, in spite of many comments to the contrary."

Ostler recommended Pelletier be transferred to one of the province's outdoor rehabilitation programs, and ordered the three-year probation term imposed in Vancouver to be continued after the accused's release from this sentence.

Leslie James Green, 18, of 388 Vincent, was sentenced to six months definite and one year indeterminate on a charge of breaking and entering with intent to steal.

Ostler noted Green was still on probation from a May, 1971, conviction for breaking, entering and theft, and that previous brushes with the law included seven convictions as a juvenile, "none of which has proved to be a deterrent."

Jerome Peter Parnell, 17, of Masset, was jailed for eight months definite and one year indefinite by Judge Edmond St. Jorre when he appeared for sentence on charges of indecent assault and two counts of possession of narcotics.

Parnell pleaded guilty to the charges when he appeared in court Jan. 30.

At that time, court was told a woman was cleaning the windows of her car on Gladstone Avenue the morning of the day before, when the accused came up behind the woman and grabbed her.

Asked by police why he had done it, the accused said, "I guess she looked pretty tempting."

The woman spotted the accused later that day on the same street and called police.

Theft of a $9.99 pair of jeans from the Bay, Jan. 14 netted a 19-year-old Grade 12 student a suspended sentence and 18 months' probation on a charge of theft under $50.

Dean Everett Peterson, of 1457 Clifford, pleaded guilty to the charge.

Richard William Stewart, 24, of 1387 Hillside, was given a suspended sentence and placed on two years' probation for shoplifting records worth $148.81 from the Bay, Dec. 10.

Donald John Campbell, 17, was remanded in custody to Feb. 22 for pre-sentence report and sentence on charges of breaking, entering, theft and mischief.

Court was told the accused, in company with one or more juveniles, broke into at least four places in Esquimalt and Victoria, Jan. 17 to 20.

Police said the loot included $2 taken from a collection tin inside the Church of the Nazarene at 886 Craigflower, Esquimalt, Jan. 17. The tin was opened with a can opener.

The mischief charge involved shooting out seven ornamental lights at Gorge-Kinsmen Park, Jan. 20.

The defunct men's wear store Workshop Men's Wear Ltd. was fined a total of $60 on six counts of failing to remit social service tax and was given three months to pay the $185.50 tax owing.

* * *

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson fined James Robert Merrill, 25, of 1016 Brock Ave., $350 and handed him a four-month partial driving ban for impaired driving Jan. 10.

Falling Rock Derails Train

SPENCE'S BRIDGE (CP) — A large rock tumbled onto the Canadian National Railways main line through interior British Columbia Friday night, derailing a diesel locomotive and halting traffic for about three hours. No one was injured.

Bigger Not Best

BURNABY (CP) — Pollution fighter Donald Chant of Toronto said mankind's desire to build bigger and better technology is the primary cause of pollution.

Dr. Chant, the head of Pollution Probe, an Ontario anti-pollution group, said technology is the main cause of pollution and "it seems to be absurd to say you can cure pollution with the addition of more technology."

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me:
thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The memory of the kindness and sympathy shown us by our neighbours and friends will remain with us through the years. We want you all to know, that we are truly grateful for the comfort you have given us during our time of sorrow in the sad loss of our beloved husband and father, Jack E. Johnson —Daphne Johnson and Family.

GREEN — In loving memory of my darling daughter, Dorothy Grace, who passed away Feb. 12, 1968.

Gone but leaving memories
Death can never take away,
Memories that will always linger
While on this earth we stay.

—Ever remembered and loved by her mother and all who knew her.

LINDLEY — In memory of our loving mother and grandmother, Mabel Lindley, died February 12th, 1960.

When a mother breaths her last farewell,
The stroke means more than tongue can tell.
The world seems quite another place,
Without the smile of a mothers' face.

—Ever remembered by Irene and Fordon Shepherd and family.

STEVENS — In memory of the late Leslie John Stevens, who passed away Feb. 13, 1964.

We think of you as living still,
Not dead, just called away
To God's reward of joy and peace,
Where we'll join you His last day.

—Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.

SPECIAL DEALS FOR HOMEOWNERS AT ASSOCIATES

If you're buying your house, you're eligible for a special Homeowner Loan at Associates any time you need cash. That means we may be able to give you a better deal. Lower rates . . . or longer terms . . . or even both.
The amount you can borrow is limited only by the equity you have in your home. $5,000, $10,000, maybe $25,000 or more. So if you have high-interest debts outstanding, or if you need cash for a second car, a boat, or any other good reason, talk to Associates about a low-interest Homeowner Loan. See how much better off you'll be — long-term.

?? $500 ??

There are times when $500 looks like a small fortune not easily got, but when you do get it you want to use it wisely. There are many many ways $500 can be used. Pay off old debts; new clothes for the kids and family, dental and medical expenses or just tucked away in the bank for that rainy day you hope doesn't come

?? OR ??

You can invest it in your future and the future of your family. You could start your own home. No landlords to tell you what to do. No compulsory rent increases. Sure it might not be the palace you would like but it would be a start. It would be solid, comfortable and mostly
IT WOULD BE YOURS!

Hot Pants are a must for every wardrobe — and here are a few good ideas as to what to do with them. For evening: wear them under a long skirt slit up one side seam to show them off. For day wear: take any of your last year's minis or tunics — again slit the side seams — and voila, a total new look! For leisure and sportswear: just add your favorite skirt and enjoy the sun and fun. This easy pattern is ideal for all fabrics. X-174 is cut in Misses Sizes 6-16 and Junior Sizes 5-15. Size 12, misses, and Size 11, junior, both require approximately ⅞ of a yard of 45" fabric. This pre-cut, pre-perforated Spadea Designer Pattern produces a better fit. To order X-174: give size, name, address. Send $1.00 postpaid in U.S. funds. Address SPADEA, Box N, Dept. CVX5, Milford, N.J. 08848.

Sheffield Draws With Manchester

LONDON (CP) — Manchester City came from behind to earn a 3-3 draw with Sheffield United today and remain at the top of English soccer's First Division.

Francis Lee scored the first and last Manchester goals in the seesaw match, giving him 29 for the season, tops in the division. Goals by Lee and Colin Bell put Manchester ahead 2-0 after 33 minutes. Then Ron Dearden, Alan Woodward and Ian Currie scored for Sheffield United and Manchester had to come from behind for the tie.

Teach-In Panels Pull Big Names

More than 70 persons will participate in panel discussions in a teach-in on environmental control and pollution to be held in Oak Bay Senior Secondary School on February 29.

The teach-in called Ecologue 72 is sponsored by Students for Environmental Rescue (SFERE) — a school organization devoted to the identification and solution of environmental problems.

More than 1,100 students and members of the public are expected to attend the meeting to be opened by David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Panelists will include Dr. Pat McGeer, B.C. Liberal party leader, David Barrett, leader of the opposition, Mines Minister Frank Richter, Robert Williams, NDP M.L.A., David Brousson, Liberal M.L.A. for North Vancouver-Capilana, Dr. Scott Wallace, Progressive Conservative M.L.A. for Oak Bay, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

The teach-in will be held throughout the day. There will be three sessions, each consisting of 20 panels to be located in various classrooms. Maximum attendance at any one panel session will be 50.

Panel topics include: air pollution, forests and parks, pesticides and wildlife, politics of pollution, population and resources, power generation and use, transportation, urban litter.

There will also be slide and film presentations.

SFERE co-presidents are students Marshall McCall, Ken McCarter and Ivor McMahen.

Deaths Preventable

CALGARY (CP) — A large portion of cancer deaths could be prevented with co-operation between scientists and the public, says the executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Dr. R. M. Taylor of Toronto, addressing delegates to an educational conference of the society, said it is estimated that about 90 per cent of the 5,000 yearly lung cancer deaths in Canada could be prevented if people would stop smoking.

Tories Spurred

SASKATOON (CP) — The Progressive Conservative Party was told Friday it will have to be more active in Saskatchewan if it hopes to win the next federal election.

The recommendation came from 50 party members at the start of a two-day organizational and policy seminar. They said the federal party will have to put "more of an effort" into the provincial campaign if it even hopes to retain the five seats it now holds here.

PROBLEM

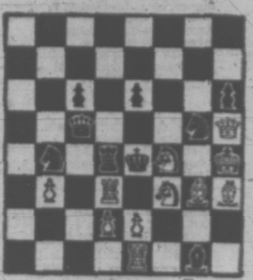
BLACK: 9



WHITE: 11

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE HALLMARK OF SPASSKY

Every prominent chess player has one game that demonstrates perfectly his hallmark. The hallmark of world champion Boris Spassky is to be found in the game he played against grandmaster Lev Polugayevsky, which was judged the most spectacular encounter of the 25th USSR championship, played in Riga, in 1958. Spassky was only a challenger for the world crown at the time.

Here, Boris Spassky himself comments on the game.

WHITE: Spassky

BLACK: Polugayevsky

(a) I don't think Black's QK is better placed here than if he were on QB3. By renouncing the struggle for the central square of Q5, Black actually promotes his opponent's hope of mounting an attack, because White's Knight in the middle of the board occupies a very strong position.

(b) Black would be ill-advised to continue 10 . . . P-N5 in view of 11. N-Q5, PxN; 12. N-B6, Q-N3; 13. PxP; and White gets a terrific attack for the sacrificed piece.

(c) Now, too, it is still risky to play 11 . . . P-N5, because White parries it with the same 12. N-Q5. If, for example, 12. PxN; 13. PxP d.ch., K-Q1; 14. N-B6ch, BxN; 15. PxB, N-K4; 16. Q-B4, mounting a dangerous attack. Bad would be 12. NxP; in view of 13. NxKP, NxQ; 14. N-B7 mate.

(d) Interesting tactical complications would arise if 13. P-N5. If the Knight retreats, Black at once stops the attack by 14. N3-K5. White, however, could ignore his threatened Knight and continue 14. B-R4ch:

(A) 14. NxB; 15. NxN, QxN; 16. PxN, PxP; 17. N-B5.

(B) 14. K-Q1; 15. PxN, PxP; 16. BxP, BxB; 17. N-B6ch, BxN; 18. QxPch.

(e) It was necessary to continue with 14. PxB in order to castle on the Q-side after 15. PxP. He would have had greater defensive resources than he has now.

(f) This minor combination only shows Black's poor strategy. He loses a pawn.

(g) It was easy to imagine the helpless position of Black's King in case of 17. PxB; 18. NxKP, NxN; 19. Q-Q7ch, K-B2; 20. R-Blch, etc.

(h) If 20. NxN; I was going to play 21. N-B5, RxRch; 22. RxR, B-B4; 23. Q-N5, P-N3; 24. N-R6ch; K-N2; 25. N-N4 and White wins.

(i) Black could win the White Queen now with 21. B-N4, but that would not save him from losing the game. There would follow: 22. NxB, BxQch; 23. PxB, Q-N3; 24. NxR, RxN- 25. P-K6.

(J) At this point, Black sealed his move 41. P-N3 but resigned without resuming play. The end-game, of course, is hopeless for him.

1 The solution to the problem above is: 1. N-Q5.

Red Officers Free on Bail

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A U.S. district court judge granted a motion Friday allowing three Soviet fishing fleet officers to return to home pending trial on charges of illegal fisheries support activities in U.S.

At the same time, Judge James Von Der Heydt set requirements for bail bond totalling $160,000 for the three officers.

5 Feared Dead In Lowell Fire

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Fire raced through a three-storey rooming house on the edge of the downtown area today and police said five persons died.

Officers said several other registered occupants of the building were unaccounted for but it was not determined whether they were in the building when the blaze broke out.

Race Law Invalid

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that Georgia's laws against racially mixed marriages are unconstitutional. U.S. District Court Judge Albert J. Henderson ordered the state not to enforce the laws, and to cease discrimination against racially-mixed couples who want to get married.

Wonderful World of Animals

By Dr. FRANK MILLER

DEAR MR. MILLER: I read where Vitamin E is necessary for reproduction in rats. How much vitamin E should my rats, Rita and Roxann, be getting? —J.T.

DEAR J.T.: Most rat rations, particularly if they contain whole grain cereals, already contain adequate amounts of the required vitamin E for reproduction. But don't expect this vitamin to perform miracles. This may be what's required here if Rita and Roxann, as potential partners, are accurately named. A male-female pair is a prime requirement. More essential, even, than "E".

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've got a new parakeet and we can't remember whether you said that people can get worms from parakeets or not. Can they? —S.T.

DEAR S.T.: You wouldn't have to worry about worms from a parakeet. From a human disease standpoint, psittacosis is the disease to be concerned about when parakeets and people get together. Fortunately, the number of parakeets and other psitticine birds in this country who have developed the disease has been dramatically decreased in recent years.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Ginger, our older dog, will eat brewer's yeast when I mix it in her food and I would think it would help her. Is there any reason why she shouldn't get it —E.B.

DEAR E.B.: Brewer's yeast is the best plant source of natural B-Complex and it is also, in quantity, an excellent source of high class protein. It contains various vital minerals from calcium to copper. It's quite likely Ginger would benefit from brewer's yeast in her diet; just how much would depent on her present diet, metabolism and general condition.

CHESS MASTER

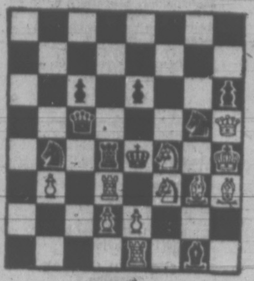
International Chess Master

PROBLEM

By T. A. Krish, India

BLACK: 9



WHITE: 11

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE HALLMARK OF SPASSKY

Every prominent chess player has one game that demonstrates perfectly his hallmark. The hallmark of world champion Boris Spassky is to be found in the game he played against grandmaster Lev Polugayevsky, which was judged the most spectacular encounter of the 25th USSR championship, played in Riga, in 1958. Spassky was only a challenger for the world crown at the time.

Here, Boris Spassky himself comments on the game.

WHITE: Spassky

BLACK: Polugayevsky

(a) I don't think Black's QK is better placed here than if he were on QB3. By renouncing the struggle for the central square of Q5, Black actually promotes his opponent's hope of mounting an attack, because White's Knight in the middle of the board occupies a very strong position.

(b) Black would be ill-advised to continue 10 . . . P-N5 in view of 11. N-Q5, PxN; 12. N-B6, Q-N3; 13. PxP, and White gets a terrific attack for the sacrificed piece.

(c) Now, too, it is still risky to play 11 . . . P-N5, because White parries it with the same 12. N-Q5. If, for example, 12. PxN; 13. PxP d.ch., K-Q1; 14. N-B6ch, BxN; 15. PxB, N-K4; 16. Q-B4, mounting a dangerous attack. Bad would be 12. NxP; in view of 13. NxKP, NxQ; 14. N-B7 mate.

(d) Interesting tactical complications would arise if 13. P-N5. If the Knight retreats, Black at once stops the attack by 14. N3-K5. White, however, could ignore his threatened Knight and continue 14. B-R4ch:

(A) 14. NxB; 15. NxN, QxN; 16. PxN, PxP; 17. N-B5.

(B) 14. K-Q1; 15. PxN, PxP; 16. BxP, BxB; 17. N-B6ch, BxN; 18. QxPch.

(e) It was necessary to continue with 14. PxB in order to castle on the Q-side after 15. PxP. He would have had greater defensive resources than he has now.

(f) This minor combination only shows Black's poor strategy. He loses a pawn.

(g) It was easy to imagine the helpless position of Black's King in case of 17. PxB; 18. NxKP, NxN; 19. Q-Q7ch, K-B2; 20. R-B1ch, etc.

(h) If 20. NxN; I was going to play 21. N-B5, RxRch; 22. RxR, B-B4; 23. Q-N5, P-N3; 24. N-R6ch; K-N2; 25. N-N4 and White wins.

(i) Black could win the White Queen now with 21. B-N4, but that would not save him from losing the game. There would follow: 22. NxB, BxQch; 23. PxB, Q-N3; 24. NxR, RxN- 25. P-K6.

(J) At this point, Black sealed his move 41. P-N3 but resigned without resuming play. The end-game, of course, is hopeless for him.

1 The solution to the problem above is: 1. N-Q5.

Red Officers Free on Bail

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A U.S. district court judge granted a motion Friday allowing three Soviet fishing fleet officers to return to home pending trial on charges of illegal fisheries support activities in U.S.

At the same time, Judge James Von Der Heydt set requirements for bail bond totalling $160,000 for the three officers.

5 Feared Dead In Lowell Fire

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Fire raced through a three-storey rooming house on the edge of the downtown area today and police said five persons died.

Officers said several other registered occupants of the building were unaccounted for but it was not determined whether they were in the building when the blaze broke out.

Race Law Invalid

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that Georgia's laws against racially mixed marriages are unconstitutional. U.S. District Court Judge Albert J. Henderson ordered the state not to enforce the laws, and to cease discrimination against racially-mixed couples who want to get married.

Wonderful World of Animals

By Dr. FRANK MILLER

DEAR MR. MILLER: I read where Vitamin E is necessary for reproduction in rats. How much vitamin E should my rats, Rita and Roxann, be getting? —J.T.

DEAR J.T.: Most rat rations, particularly if they contain whole grain cereals, already contain adequate amounts of the required vitamin E for reproduction. But don't expect this vitamin to perform miracles. This may be what's required here if Rita and Roxann, as potential partners, are accurately named. A male-female pair is a prime requirement. More essential, even, than "E".

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've got a new parakeet and we can't remember whether you said that people can get worms from parakeets or not. Can they? —S.T.

DEAR S.T.: You wouldn't have to worry about worms from a parakeet. From a human disease standpoint, psittacosis is the disease to be concerned about when parakeets and people get together. Fortunately, the number of parakeets and other psitticine birds in this country who have developed the disease has been dramatically decreased in recent years.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Ginger, our older dog, will eat brewer's yeast when I mix it in her food and I would think it would help her. Is there any reason why she shouldn't get it —E.B.

DEAR E.B.: Brewer's yeast is the best plant source of natural B-Complex and it is also, in quantity, an excellent source of high class protein. It contains various vital minerals from calcium to copper. It's quite likely Ginger would benefit from brewer's yeast in her diet; just how much would depent on her present diet, metabolism and general condition.

Trees Do Not Live by Pruning Alone

By JACK BEASTALL.

A fruit tree will bear fruit whether it is pruned or not pruned, but the fruit may not be large nor of good quality.

Conversely, a fruit tree may not bear good crops just because it is pruned, since pruning is only a small part of the overall culture.

Soil conditions, which include drainage, type of soil, fertility and depth, have a pronounced effect on growth and vigor.

In the home garden a fruit tree can be thrown out of balance when its roots are under a lawn that is receiving the basic lawn feeding program recommended for this area.

The fertilizer will be picked up by the tree roots at the wrong time of year and disrupt the normal cycle of growth.

Likewise, when roots penetrate the soil beneath a neighbor's garden, the tree will respond to whatever feeding and cultivating the neighbor may do, beneficial or otherwise.

Fertilizer applied in late February will reach the roots just as growth starts in spring and benefit the crop for that year.

But when applied during summer it increases the color of the fruits and decreases the keeping qualities.

Pruning must be geared to the tree as a whole and the environment in which it is growing.

To look at a tree and say "I don't like that branch, I'll cut it off" is the wrong approach to pruning. The correct approach is to say "If I were to cut off that branch what would result?"

We must always remember that a tree, or any other plant, is a balanced entity. It has developed a root system sufficient in size to maintain the amount of top growth it has made.

When the gardener reduced this top growth by one half, the root system is then twice as large as needed. The result will be vigorous growth for the next few years until root and top growth are again in balance.

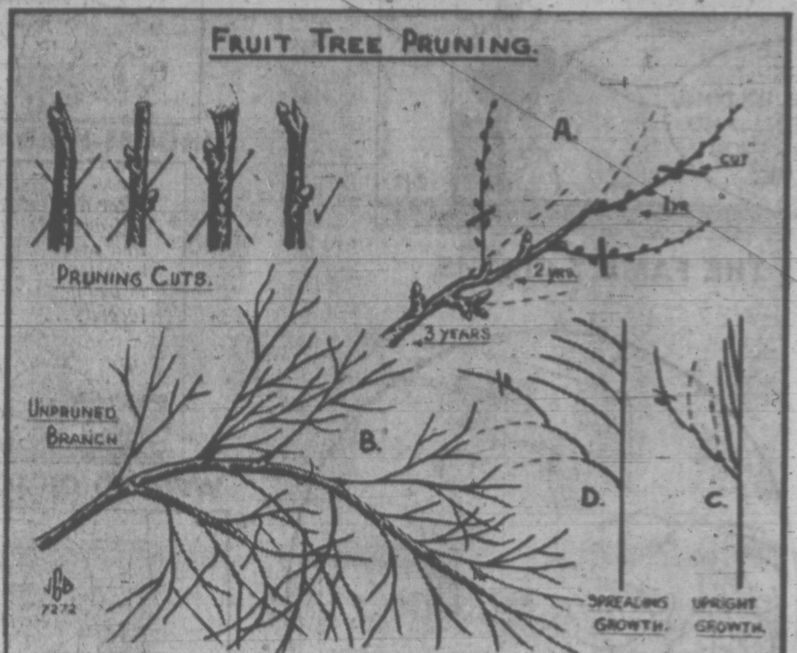
During this period of vigorous growth there is little energy to spare for developing quality fruit and we hear the gardener say: "I've pruned it well but the fruiting is poor."

In an effort to preserve some measure of balance, severe pruning, such as needed on older neglected trees, has to be spread over a period of years, at least five years, sometimes more.

This requires a carefully laid out program which details exactly what will be done each year, with provisions for adjustments if the results are not quite as anticipated.



With proper pruning from the time of planting, a fifteen-year-old tree can be pruned in about 20 to 30 minutes because the delicate balance between fruiting and new growth has not been upset.

When the balance is not right and the tree makes the vigorous wood growth so often seen in home gardens, pruning should be minimal for a year or two so that the balance can be restored.

Most home gardeners fall down on the pruning of young, newly planted trees. It is such a thrill to see leaves and shoots all over the tree they cannot bear to cut off anything.

This is a case of sparing the rod and spoiling the child. In a few years the tree is a weak, shapeless object totally unfit to produce the fruit dreamed of by the gardener.

To correct this condition will take several years, a loss that could be avoided if pruning had been done from the start.

First, decide the size of tree the garden will accommodate then the number of branches that will reasonably make that size of tree. Select these branches and remove all other growths.

Over the next five years build the branches into a strong framework that will withstand wind, wet snow, and the weight of a good crop of fruit.

To do this the main leader, and the leader of each branch is cut back by one half of the growth made the previous year. (See detail A.)

This is done because the buds in the centre portion of the season's growth are strong, whereas those near the top are weak, giving growth as shown at B.

Before making any cut determine whether the tree is an upright grower, or whether spreading in habit.

If upright, prune to a bud facing outwards (see C) so that the new growth will be more spreading and allow light and air into the centre.

If naturally spreading, prune to a bud facing inwards (see D) thereby reducing the overall spread, an important point in a small garden.

Cutting off pieces of a three is one of the easiest of gardening jobs, but figuring out what the result will be when a cut is made is one of the most difficult.

Reason it this way: If I cut here, what is going to happen? Laterals will grow here, here, and here, Do I want laterals in these places? If I shorten this branch will it result in a lot of growth in the centre and reduce light and air? Is it better to leave the branch as it is?

The pruning of plums and cherries is quite distinct from the pruning of apples and pears.

At no time after the framework has been built on a young tree can one indulge in severe pruning. To do so causes bark splitting, gum oozing and disease, which in turn result in the gradual dying of the trees.

Finally, before pruning see that secateurs, pruners and saws are clean and sharpened. The first enemy of a fruit tree is the gardener who knows nothing about pruning; the second is a dirty, blunt tool.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

If growing-on space available until outdoor planting time, more summer annuals can be sown in slightly heated greenhouse or sunroom: 10-week stock, annual phlox, pansies, carnation, schizanthus.

Sow sweet peas in separate small peat pots indoors. Need coldframe or other semi-protected place after first leaves develop.

If soil and general weather conditions suitable, or before end of February, sow outdoors where they are to flower, the seeds of Shirley-poppy, mignonette, sweet sultan; all good summer cut flowers.

Look for black tarry bands of tent-caterpillar eggs on young twigs of fruit and some ornamental trees. Remove from twig.

Sow onion, early cabbage, summer cauliflower, leeks, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, and a few lettuce — all in greenhouse, covered coldframe or porch.

On filberts, shorten branches, remove twiggy growth. Form spurs where male and female flowers show. Fat round buds are female flowers and should be open any day now to be fertilized by catkins.

U.S.-Canada Relations 'Near Catastrophe'

WASHINGTON (CP) — The breakdown in trade talks between the U.S. and Canada may have set the stage for the worst period of relations between the two countries in a decade.

Although government officials in Ottawa and Washington have been ordered to play down publicly the seriousness of the situation, both Canadian and U.S. officials say privately the outlook for Canada-U.S. relations this year is bleak, to say the least.

"I think we're in a situation that borders on catastrophe," one key official, who is known for moderation in his private and public statements, said Friday.

With few exceptions, officials on both sides believe that meaningful negotiations will not resume until after a Canadian federal election is held, probably this year.

The Financial Times Friday reported rumors circulating in Ottawa and Washington saying the Nixon administration is considering a seven per cent excise tax on cars imported from Canada.

If true, it would mean the effective end of the 1965 Canada-United States auto trade agreement and a possible recession in the auto industry here.

Speculation about the tax surfaced when the Journal of Commerce, a New York publication, ran a front page story out of Washington Friday that this is what Treasury Secretary John B. Connally has up his sleeve to bring Canada into line.

Officials here are guarded in their comments, but one said "this would be one of the tactics Mr. Connally might use to force a complete revision of the auto pact."

The tax used to be levied on all cars sold in the U.S. but was removed as part of President Nixon's new economic policy announced last Aug. 15.

If it is re-imposed on Canadian cars only, it would, in Ottawa's view, constitute an effective abrogation of the auto pact, and be contrary to rules under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

In Ottawa today, Trade Minister Pepin said the reports are "very speculative."

"There are plenty of other tactics they could use to force revision of the pact," Pepin said.

Mining Future Cloudy

The outlook for British Columbia's mining industry in 1972 is not good, Mines Minister Frank Richter told the legislature Friday.

He also charged New Democratic Party tax policies for the industry would drive investment capital away from the province.

Richter told the legislature mining in B.C. is a very competitive business which is not in a preferred position in world markets.

"Threats of punitive tax measures and takeover of the mining industry by an NDP government is the surest way of driving investment capital from the province and is a direct threat to the 30,000 more workers supported by this industry," Richter said.

Investment confidence in the provincial mining industry appears to be weakening, said Richter. The number of claims staked in 1971 dropped to 44,300 from 84,665 in 1969.

DRILLING DOWN

Diamond drilling activity dropped 25 per cent last year and is expected to drop further next year. Skilled mining engineers and professionals are starting to appear on Canada Manpower's unemployment lists, and five major companies have withdrawn their operations from B.C. in recent months.

The total value of mining production increased in 1971 to more than $321 million only because of dramatic increases in Kaiser Coal production.

"But for the Kaiser coal operation, mineral production value in British Columbia in 1971 would have faced a serious decline."

Richter said 1972 should see coal production values to increase almost $20 million to an estimated total of $70 million.

ONTARIO TOPPED

Despite an uncertain investment climate, he said, B.C. received more revenue from mining in 1970 than did Ontario.

B.C.'s revenue share was nearly $49 million compared with Ontario's income of $26.6 million. Yet B.C.'s total value of mineral production was

TWISTED WRECK of a CNR freight train lies mangled on its side after 20-car derailment blocked the Montreal-Toronto line near Morrisburg, Ont., Friday. Two explosions, which sent flames 100 feet high, apparently originated in a tanker car carrying propane gas. No injuries were reported.

Limit Urged On St. Joe's

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A confidential study prepared by a provincial agency suggests St. Joseph's Hospital be limited to 500 beds.

At the same time the study ignores about four acres of land being purchased for expansion alongside the hospital for $900,000.

The report was prepared by a team from the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service at the request of a committee of advisors to the Capital regional hospital board.

Intended as a survey of obsolete beds at the hospital as a preliminary to planning renovations and expansion, the study suggests "capping" the hospital at about 500 beds basically on the present site.

General planning in recent years had proposed St. Joseph's grow from 430 beds to about 620 and Royal Jubilee from 533 to about 650.

500 LIMIT

The study sees limiting St. Joseph's to about 500 beds involving a good deal more than adding 70 beds. Major renovations would replace the hospital's ancient X wing with a new five-storey structure and a floor would be added to certain four-storey sections.

One "package" outlined for updating the hospital would cost about $6.5 million and another would cost almost $17.5 million.

But the study says nothing about the land alongside, which is finally being bought to allow expansion after almost three years of bickering between the city of Victoria, provincial government, regional hospital board and the public society taking over the hospital.

Purchase of the approximately four acres, which includes Humboldt Street and part of the St. Ann's Academy grounds, is in the final stages of documentation. The cost is almost $900,000.

NECESSARY

The study by itself raises the question: is this land purchase necessary after all?

The paradoxical aspect to the current situation is that on one hand a study by a provincial agency ignores the land while on the other, the provincial government has indicated it will pay a 60 per cent share in the cost of the land acquisition.

Speculation is that the land will be used — to build extended care beds. The capital regional board has been having trouble negotiating the right price for a site off Helmcken Road near the Trans-Canada Highway where a 225-bed extended care hospital is proposed.

LIBERAL CHIEF QUITS IN ONTARIO

ROBERT NIXON

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Nixon today announced his resignation as Ontario Liberal party leader, saying the last two provincial elections have shown that "my particular qualities do not precisely fill the bill."

Nixon made it official in a speech prepared for presentation to the Ontario party's annual convention at noon.

The 43-year-old farmer-teacher from St. George, Ont., said in the speech he will stay on until a new leader is chosen. No date has been set for a leadership convention.

Nixon, who won the leadership just prior to the 1967 provincial election, called on the party's executive board to establish a committee to make "definite plans for a leadership convention."

He said the arrangements should not interfere with the federal election, expected this year.

Contenders for the leadership are considered to be Vernon Singer, deputy party leader from Toronto, Donald Deacon, member of the legislature for York Centre, Philip Givens, former mayor of Toronto and legislature member for Toronto York-Forest Hill, and Patrick Reid, legislature member for Rainy River.

James Bullbrook, Sarnia lawyer and outspoken Liberal front-bencher in the legislature, was also in the running but has indicated he will not seek the leadership.

'WAC WANTS STRIKES'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Conservative leader Derril Warren said Friday Premier Bennett wants strikes and mass demonstrations to result from recent changes in provincial legislation.

In a speech to the Monarchist League of Canada, Warren said the changes were "conceived on the basis of providing an election issue and converting human passions from debate to inflamed animosity."

The changes he referred to are the limitation on salary increases for teachers and what he called bargaining in bad faith with doctors over medical fee increases and inadequate provincial grants to municipalities.

The legislation limiting teachers' incomes was "bad, discriminatory and a cleverly connived election issue" and a denial of basic democratic rights.

On medicare, Warren accused the government of negotiating in bad faith over a rise in doctors' fees after doctors agreed in 1971 to a moratorium on a fee increase.

Negotiations had broken off and Premier Bennett had created "a further divisive force within society" by not meeting and bargaining collectively, he said.

"He feels that by pitting the rich doctor against the poor taxpayer, he will secure the vote of the largest group."

Warren said the government had raised grants to municipalities by only 5.8 per cent since 1957, but total municipal expenditures had expanded threefold. This was "a clever divisive manoeuvre which pits the taxpayer against the municipality."

New Islands To Appear Off Coast

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — British Columbians can expect two new islands of their coast, but it won't be for a million years or so.

That's the word from a team of scientists who recently surveyed the sea bottom in the northeastern Pacific Ocean.

The scientists from the United States, Canada and Japan, who spent five months off the Pacific Coast, announced Sunday that two well-known seamounts —Cobb and Bear—may eventually rise above the surface and become islands.

The survey also found sediment deposits off the coasts of Washington and Oregon that suggest the presence of oil.

The expedition was conducted by the U.S. commerce department's national oceanic and atmospheric administration in co-operation with two Canadian and three Japanese geo-physicists.

The two Canadians were Dr. S. P. Srivastava and Ron Macnab of Bedford Institute here.

Douglas Elvers of Leesburg, Va., the project's chief scientists, said the team found a trench filled with sediment, mainly sand and silt, more than a mile thick.

The trench lies at the base of the continental slope off the coasts of Washington and Oregon, more than 1½ miles below the surface of the sea.

Mr. Elvers said in Washington the two seamounts may eventually rise above the sea either through volcanic growth "or general uplift of the rises."

Mediation Report Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Union leaders representing electronic technicians on strike at government airports awaited receipt of a mediator's proposed settlement today to start an immediate vote of the 2,200 members.

The unusual decision to canvass the membership immediately on receipt of the mediator's proposal came after walkouts by some of the union's designated personnel — those forbidden by law to walk off their jobs in the interest of public safety.

The package put together by mediator Gordon Simmons remained a secret Friday as the industrial relations expert from Queen's University talked into the night with representatives of the government's treasury board, the body bargaining with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Simmons told IBEW representatives that he hoped to be able to put his proposals before them sometime today, but could not say whether this would be morning or afternoon.

PROMISES ACTION

William Andreeff, president of IBEW Local 2228, said the mediator's package would be presented as quickly as possible to the full membership, without any recommendation for or against adoption by the leadership.

"We'll not pull our men off the street until we've got an agreement," he added.

Any package would have to be acceptable to treasury board before there could be hope of the strike, which hinges mainly on salary demands, being settleed, Andreeff said. But the mediator's proposals would be sent out for a vote by the IBEW membership "no matter what the other side says."

Smoking Grass 'Not Harmful'

WASHINGTON (WD) — U.S. federal health officials told Congress Friday that their studies so far showed no unhealthy effects from the moderate use of marijuana by normal adults.

The experts even found that preliminary surveys showed that chronic users in Greece and Jamaica felt no ill effects from marijuana — a finding that surprised Dr. Robert Peterson, the U.S. national institue of mental heatlh expert who compiled the report.

But the 276-page NIMH report — issued under law in the name of U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Elliot Richardson — did not give marijuana a completely clean bill of health.

Like alcohol and other mind bending drugs, marijuana adversely affects driving skills, including the ability to put on the brakes in a hurry. In addition, it can cause psychotic breakdowns in people who are already unstable and retard the emotional development of young teen-agers.

QUESTIONS REMAIN

Moreover, the effect of the heavy use of marijuana, over long periods of time is "one of the biggest question marks," said Dr. William Bunney, the new director of NIMH's division of narcotic addiction and drug abuse.

NIMH director Dr. Bertram Brown, said "the current state of scientific and medical evidence" does not justify making the use of marijuana legal.

"But," he added, "I have personally felt for a long time that the penalties for the use and possession of marijuana are much too severe and much out of keeping with knowledge about its harmfulness. I have been strongly in favor of decriminalization, but not for the total removal of penalties."

By "decriminalization," Brown said that he meant "penalties that do not jail people."

USE INCREASING

The HEW secretary's report said that marijuana use is widespread in the U.S. and, contrary to estimates made in last year's report, is on the increase. As many as 90 per cent of some groups of high school students have used marijuana. Peterson said that its use in some isolated cases

BOTTLERS BACK OFF REFUNDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifteen brands of empty soft drink cans will no longer be refunded at bottle depots in the province, William Barter, general manager of Pacific Reclamation Ltd., announced Friday.

Barter said the move is being taken because bottlers are withdrawing from the depot system.

A spokesman for one major bottler said his company was withdrawing from the system because proposed amendments to the Litter Act will force retailers to take back cans.

The brands affected by Friday's announcement are Coca-Cola, Fresca, Fanta, Tab, Sprite, Pepsi, Diet Pepsi, Mountain Dew, Schweppes, Orange Crush, Hires, Royal Crown, America Dry, 7-Up and Diet 7-Up.

Pensioners May Soon Flock to Ghost Town

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Vancouver brothers have purchased the abandoned mining town of Bralorne, 110 miles north of here, and plan to turn it into a residential community for people who can get along without full-time jobs.

Frank Whiting, a geological engineer and president of Marmot Enterprises Ltd., announced Friday he and his brothers bought the townsite from Bralorne Can-Fer Resources Ltd. for a price "somewhere in the $100,000-to-$200,000 range."

He said work will begin within 10 days on rehabilitating many of the 200 buildings in the 1,400-acre townsite, which was a going concern until last fall, when the gold mine closed. Population at one time approached 2,000.

"It would be low-cost housing for pensioners or people in similar financial situations," said Whiting, who created Marmot Enterprises for the purpose with his brothers, both of whom are in the construction business.

"They would be provided with part-time jobs in running the community, from repairing things to collecting garbage to maintaining the water to being the librarian."

Whiting said some of the larger buildings, such as the school and apartment blocks, could be used by educational or charitable groups as temporary headquarters for outdoor holidays.

"Bralorne is a complete town," he said. "It has all the general amenities of life, although a little bit old style and a little bit run-down."

An earlier plan by a group of young persons to buy the townsite and create a model community of craftsmen and environmentalists was abandoned last December when the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. refused financial backing.

Whiting estimated Bralorne would have an eventual permanent population of about 500.

"It's going to cost $500,000 to $1 million to improve the water and sewer systems and do the other work," he said. "We are now in the process of acquiring investors"

He said his company is asking the provincial government for permission to subdivide the townsite so the lots can be sold to individuals.

"Some of the housing is worth $20,000, and some of it $2,000," he said.

He said he expected residents would be paid prevailing wages for their work in the community. Eventually, Bralorne could develop into a self-governing community with its own elected council.

Bennett Slams Pollen In Hotline Talkfest

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen is under attack again from Social Crediters; this time it was the boss himself.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett phoned CJVI hot-line host Joe Easingwood Friday morning to tee off on Pollen.

"He (Pollen) just gets elected in December, does nothing, makes a few cracks and criticisms at the provincial government and runs for a holiday in Honolulu," the premier said. "I wonder who's tired."

Immediately prior to the current legislature session Bennett vacationed in Southern California for approximately two weeks.

'ASK SKILLINGS'

When questioned by Easingwood the premier kept repeating this statement.

Earlier this week Pollen criticized Greater Victoria's four Socred MLAs — Waldo Skillings, John Tisdalle, Herb Bruch and William Chant — for having never done anything for the area in all the years they have been in office. Skillings retorted in the house Wednesday, calling Pollen a "pipsqueak."

When asked why Pollen had left the Socred Credit party, Bennett again said repeatedly: "You had better ask Mr. Skillings."

Do you think Pollen is a good man? the premier was asked.

"I only judge a person by what he does, and so far he has done nothing."

Asked about who chose Pollen to run as a Socred MLA in Oak Bay in 1968, Bennett replied: "I didn't nominate anybody . . . I don't select the candidates."

Obviously nettled, Bennett often stammered during his phone call.

Pressed about the lack of treatment centres in B.C. for treatment of young drug users, Bennett said "talk to Mr. Loffmark about it."

Easingwood then said he found it impossible to get hold of the health minister.

"He's on vac . . ." hesitated the premier before he went on to say "you got hold of the premier."

When it was suggested to him that his home-owner grants were discriminatory to tenants, esepcially elderly persons, Bennett replied. "Any tenant can go out and buy a home in B.C."

SOCRED POLICY

He said that Socred policy is trying to encourage renters to buy homes.

He claimed that with the home-owner grant "a thousand renters a month" are now buying homes in B.C.

An elderly woman later phoned in and asked Bennett about people who have bad health and therefore can't run a home.

"If they run a rented home, they can run a bought home," the premier replied.

"There is one thing about the premier of this province, though he may be criticized, he never makes a promise he doesn't keep," Bennett said.

Asked again about an interview: "I make no promises. I have only made one promise in my life and I made it to my wife."

MAN SAVES FAMILY IN MORNING FIRE

An early-morning fire today caused $8,000 damage to a house after a man evacuated his wife and three children.

The fire occurred at 3:35 a.m. at 1904 Davie St.

Fire department officials said Joac Moniz woke up to the smell of smoke coming from the room where his three children were sleeping. Moniz roused his wife and they got the children out of the house.

Officials said Moniz suffered minor burns on the hand and back.

Administration Costs Cited

A study committee set up by the Community Chest of Greater Victoria has urged it to take a close look at the administrative expenses of the agencies it supports.

The committee says the chest's directors should decide whether to continue financial backing of agencies whose budgets include "excessively large administrative and executive expenses, particularly when related to the total allotment made by the Community Chest."

At a press conference Thursday when the report was made public, vice-president W. H. Armstrong said such factors have always been taken into account when assessing agencies' budget requirements, and grants have been set accordingly.

Under questioning, however, he admitted that instances do arise where a significant slice of a particular allotment goes in salaries and other administrative expenses, and said he could understand public concern on this score.

But Armstrong pointed out that full-time professional staff employed by various agencies enable them to provide services which, in turn, generate a great deal of volunteer help.

Good Housekeeping Can Help Save Shoreline, Pollen Says

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

"All we want is intelligent shoreline housekeeping."

With this punchline to a colorful commentary on the condition of Victoria's Inner Harbor waterfront Friday, Mayor Peter Pollen was probably understating his intentions.

LITTLE NEED

But to reporters and photographers accompanying his water-taxi tour of the harbor there seemed little need for the familiar Pollen overemphasis.

Except for a few isolated patches, Pllen showed the waterfront to be a popular place to deposit junk and waste of all descriptions.

Along with Old. Ove Witt, parks chairman, Pollen's aim is to persuade the managers of the Inner Harbor's industries, by means of photographic evidence, that they should begin cleaning up their messes.

A favorable response will include paying money towards cleanup operations made necessary by the actions of several industries.

"Look at that," Pollen remarked, pointing to the oily shoreline, were a mass of tangled, rusting lumbering cable had been pushed half into the water. The site was part of the B.C. Forest Products plant at the upper end of the harbor.

Pollen then identified a burned out and broken down wooden hulk as another part of the BCFP operations.

Passing some isolated Arbutus trees fronting the Point Ellis House museum, the water taxi came upon a log boom where a jack-ladder was feeding logs into the BCFP mill.

That sight, Polle said, was the healthy variety of industrial waterfront.

While the mayor expressed surprise at seeing some improvements on the state of the waterfront since his last, private, tour a few weeks ago, other spots had worsened.

"Now that light blue wreck wasn't there three weeks ago," he said, indicating a small bay where a city sewer once emptied, now taking on the appearance of a junk car dump.

At the Ocean Cement site in Rock Bay, Pollen pointed out two small houses on trailers sitting at the waterfront foot of an unused city roadway. Without permission or explanaion, the houses had appeared two or three yeas ago, he said.

But the Ocean Cement shoreline itself was looking up, the mayor judged.

Indicating a barge stacked high with wood chips, Pollen explained that spilled chips over the years have killed plant life on the harbor bed.

NOISY RATS

One of the two green sheds that jut out from the Ocean Cement site at the foot of Humboldt was described by Pollen as a derelict. The city might find a way to tear it down before the deadline for removal of the whole factory comes in about 18 months, he said.

One of the neatest installations was the federal department of transport operation just north and west of the Johnson Street bridge.

One of the worst: the Victoria Machinery Depot at Ogden Point, the "frontispiece" of the harbor, said Pollen.

If a yachtsman moors his boat at the CPR docks in front of the legislative buildings, Pollen said, he can hear and see the rats that collect around the pilings at night.

"Big jobs like that," Pollen said, holding his hands 18 inches apart. About half of the outer dock is fenced off and condemned, and the pilings are largely rotted away.

One of the best ways of getting industry to cooperate, he said, was to open up parts of the harbor to the public.

In this way, the actions of industries "will be continually scrutinized," and encouracged to keep up a program of "intelligent housekeeping."

. . . But Apathy Can Kill It

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

As a load of fill rolled down the bank, the last remaining bit of one of Victoria's popular swimming areas was obliterated this week for all time.

"The end of White Beach in the Outer Harbor at the foot of St. Lawrence Street is a symbolic example of the gradual degradation of our natural environment," said Blayney Scott, a member of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

How long are we going to continue to place commercial use over people use," he added. "The destruction of the beach is an example of misplaced values."

White Beach, which is no more, formed part of a small cove situated between the Outer Wharf and the Victoria Machinery Depot property. The west point of the cove is occupied by the James Bay Anglers Association which operates a boat ramp.

No newcomer can visualize today how the beach once looked because Canadian National Railways, which obtained the foreshore rights, has filled in the areas to create more land for the storage of lumber.

But Scott recalls it was a clean, white sandy beach more than 100 yards long. In the 30's it was frequented by Victorians because the water was warm and sheltered from winds. There was a changing house and sufficient space for picnicking.

Erosion of the beach was gradual, he said. First the city selected the beach to run a sewage pipe out to sea. This resulted in a ban on swimming.

Alternate routes through commercial property were not considered.

"Then slowly, bit by bit through the 50's refuse and fill were dumped on the beach," he said. "Despite this children played on the beach."

The CNR completed the job with fill.

"White Beach may not have been any concern to people living in choice residential areas of Greater Victoria," said Scott. "But it was important to children of families in the lower income brackets.

"It is a symbolic example of disregard for land values, poor management and lack of planning," he said. "It's a dead loss now — too late to do anything."

Norman Taylor, president of the James Bay Anglers Association, said several years ago this association attempted to save the small bay.

"But the city was unwilling to spend the money," he said. "We had plans to build a breakwater out to sea which would have created a small basin."

Disputed Rate Blamed on Oak Bay

The municipality of Oak Bay itself requested a reassessment of a condominium building on Newport which resulted in other assessment increases which council had condemned as "discriminatory."

This fact came to light Friday at an Oak Bay court of revision when municipal assessor D. C. Wyatt was questioned by lawyer Douglas Gray.

Gray, representing his mother who owns one of the condominium suites at the Oak Bay Towers, 1400 Newport, asked Wyatt who had ordered the reassessment of the property.

Wyatt said he had written provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright requesting the reassessment. Wright had replied Dec. 20, ordering that it be done.

At a recent council meeting, several of the condominium suite owners appeared before council, stating that the increases on assessments, some as high as 50 per cent or more, would result in their total taxes being increased by, in some cases, close to 200 per cent. These figures are based on the 1971 mill rate and do not allow for an increase in the mill rate.

Led by John H. F. Turner, who Friday made representations on behalf of himself and 31 other occupants of Oak Bay Towers, they asked that council write Wright, suggesting that the large increase be phased over a period of years.

Council agreed to ask the provincial assessment commissioner to ease the blow by phasing the increases over a period of years, agreeing with the owners that the big jumps were discriminatory.

NOTHING TO HIDE

Wright's reply was received by municipal administrator E. H. Hart Friday, who said he could not reveal the contents until all council members had had an opportunity to see them.

Wright, too, felt that it was up to Oak Bay council to release the information first although he said that his department had nothing to hide.

He agreed that it was Wyatt who had asked him to order a reassessment and he cited section 9-2 as his authority for ordering it.

"If there is an extreme discrepancy in assessments, obvious inequity, a reassessment can be ordered," he said.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray contended that the reassessment was "null and void" because it was not based on any changes in the physical characteristics of the land or properties.

Therefore, he said, any increases should be limited to the 10 per cent ceiling set for any one year in another section of the assessment Equalization Act.

Wright said Friday the 10 per cent ceiling could also be wiaved if a reassessment had been ordered.

At Friday's court of revision, Gray and others argued that a 1971 amendment to the Strata Titles Act had resulted in discrimination against condominium owners.

The amendment states that condominium suites be assessed as separate parcels of land and improvements. This ruling does not apply to other types of apartment buildings.

Wyatt told the court Friday that the reassessment was designed to bring the levies more in line with those on residences and the other two condominiums in Oak Bay, the Anchorage and the Uplands Gates.

The general assessment aimed for, he said, was 33.5 per cent of the market value, based on actual sales. He said that 1971 assessments for Oak Bay Towers' residents had averaged out at 22 per cent of actual sale prices.

The hearing was adjourned to 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23.

Difference Of a Word

In a Friday Times story headlined "Police Struggling In Attack On Crime" the word "not" was inadvertently dropped from one paragraph.

The paragraph read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

It should have read: The figures show that in 1971, more than 68 per cent of reported crime was not cleared by police action, compared to 67 per cent in 1970.

Funds Sought for Centre

A door-to-door blitz to raise $600,000 for a recreation complex near Sidney will be launched on the Saanich Peninsula next Thursday.

Al Storey, spokesman for the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association, says plans for an indoor pool have been added to the curling and skating rink complex proposed for three acres of department of transport land beside Victoria International Airport.

SPARA was formed about two years ago and has been trying to get the recreation project off the ground since then. About $10,000 has been raised and SPARA directors believe the time has come to go to the people.

The 50-metre pool proposed would make organized swim meets possible and the building would also house roller skating, lacrosse, boat shows and badminton in addition to ice skating and curling.

A mezzanine floor above the curling surface provides for lounge and catering facilities.

Storey says peninsula residents will save themselves tax dollars by supporting the project through buying debentures now rather than through a referendum later.

If the project was approved by referendum later it would cost homeowners $400 each, in comparison to $205 invested in debentures now, he said.

"The difference is that tax money is gone forever whereas debenture purchases yield six per cent per annum for 12 years."

Curtis 'Spread Too Thin'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis' political rival at the last municipal election said today recent developments prove again Curtis "is spreading himself too thin."

A. W. (Bud) Mesher, auto dealer and open-line broadcaster, said B.C Hydro made clear two years ago it planned running a high voltage power line on towers beside Colquitz Creek.

He was referring to a recent letter from Curtis to Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum in which Curtis said the line with its 90-foot towers would destroy a green-space rehabilitation program along the creek.

"This is something a mayor, if he's paying attention to his job, should have known all about," said Mesher.

He had criticized Curtis before for the variety of roles he fills, including chairman of the Capital Regional Board and the same post with the Municipal Finance Authority in addition to his job with a local radio station.

Mesher said another example of Curtis being out of touch in the municipality where he is mayor is the current spat between him and senior administrators over alleged planning oversights to the main firehall addition.

Why Not the Lottery With a Difference?

TODAY LET ME DROP some ifs on you.

If, for a few dollars, you could buy a government bond that paid four and a half per cent interest per annum . . .

And if you knew that a substantial portion of that interest would go into a government administered, conducted and policed lottery prize fund . . .

Further, if at any time you could cash in your bond at purchase price . . .

Finally, if the interest remaining after deduction of prize money and administrative costs went to B.C. hospitals as a contribution for specialized services and research . . .

Would you head for the nearest sales depot and buy such a bond?

I would, quick as a shot. So, I firmly believe, would enough Canadians and visitors to Canada to make the scheme a success on all counts.

In terms of our provincial reality as we find it, what I've laid out for you is mere wishful thinking. But in the United Kingdom, a lottery based on bond sales has been flourishing for years.

The U.K. purchaser who invests a pound sterling in one of these bonds looks on the plan as a useful means of saving to which is attached a chance at money prizes both great and small. (Winning number in the monthly draw fetches the lucky holder a tax-free £50,000. Top weekly draw ticket pays £25,000.)

I see no valid reason why we shouldn't put a variation of the U.K. premium savings bonds lottery to work in this province. It would not, of course, finance our hospitals, which would continue to depend for their bread-and-butter allotment on government grants from taxes.

But it would provide funds with which to enlarge their scope and effectiveness. In our own home town, the yield of a lottery based on bond interest might go a long way toward meeting the annual cost of maintaining the open-heart unit which we lack and so badly need.

In this matter of lotteries, Premier Bennett's government has so far displayed a thumbs-down attitude. When Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) urged a lottery in recent House debate, the reponse was lethargic.

I think it's high time that the legislators who failed to react to the LeCours suggestion roused to an awareness of certain facts.

One is that a strictly-controlled government lottery of the sort I propose could prove a useful supplement to taxes in meeting specific hospital needs.

Another is that Canadians who prove their willingness to flirt with fortune by purchasing all manner of lottery tickets each year, would welcome a B.C.-tailored version of Britain's savings-cum-gamble scheme.

Also, since we do spend on lotteries, why not have a try at keeping some of the money at work in our province?

At this point, we might dip into a letter from E. F. (Beau) Tracey, 2411 Epworth Street, who sends along impressive lists of premium savings plan prize-winners printed in recent issues of London's Daily Telegraph.

"I suspect that most if not all of those sitting in the Legislature have at some time purchased a ticket for a turkey, car, boat, etc.," former Royal Marine Tracey declares. "And, let's say it — a ticket on a lottery in other provinces, or even in the Irish.

"Well, nothing could be fairer than the bond interest lottery operated by government in the United Kingdom, where the 'tickets' are sold in post offices and banks, and the draws are operated electronically. The investor in this draw doesn't even lose his money. It's there as long as he desires, and can be withdrawn any time."

Naturally, a B.C.-based scheme would have its limitations. Draws might be made only once or perhaps twice a year, and of necessity, the prizes would be fewer and smaller.

Even so, I think the notion's worth looking into.

This year, I'll no doubt buy a ticket or two on the Irish and indulge in several other chance-takings from which sponsors far removed from the domestic scene reap rich harvests.

As one who wouldn't mind having his cake and nibbling it too, I'd much sooner invest those bucks in a bond-supported lottery here at home.

Heath Under Fire

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's grimmest industrial crisis in 25 years inspired a howl of opposition criticism of Prime Minister Edward Heath and his government today.

Power cuts resulting from a five-week coal miners' strike blacked out 15 to 20 per cent of the country. Homes, stores, theatres and other public places were without heat.

Firms throughout the country laid off thousands of workers in anticipation of tighter government curbs next week. The full effect of the curbs could be a shutdown of half the nation's industry, throwing millions out of work.

Heath interrupted a weekend at his official country residence to return to London for crisis conferences with Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, Trade and Industry Secretary John Davies and Employment Secretary Robert Carr.

CANADIAN BOOK INDUSTRY GETS $1.7M OTTAWA BOOST

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's struggling book industry will receive a $1.7 million boost from the federal government this year, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier announced Friday.

He outlined a six-point aid program to the annual meeting of federal cultural agencies, which include the CBC, Canada Council and Canadian Radio-Television Commission, and said the total money injection represents at least one-third of the Canadian book publishing total yearly turnover, excluding textbooks.

Mr. Pelletier said the program is "only a beginning" but necessary "because of the urgent nature of the difficulties being faced by the Canadian publishers."

WOULD DOUBLE OUTPUT

It would double production Canadian books, not counting school textbooks, in five years.

The program includes:

—$500,000 increase to $1 million a year in direct grants from the Canada Council to publishers to permit publication of more quality Canadian works;

—$500,000 for the purchase of Canadian books for free distribution in Canada and abroad;

—$500,000 to aid the export of Canadian books, with $400,000 earmarked for establishing distribution centres in the United States, Britain and Europe and $100,000 for Canadian participation at book fairs and exhibitions;

—$215,000 in Canada Council grants, up from $115,000 in 1971-72, for translation of Canadian works "to encourage exchanges between the two main linguistic communities of Canada";

—Publication by private companies of "unofficial works on the government's behalf" for sale on the regular book market;

—Creation of a standing committee on publishing to work out an over-all policy of co-ordination.

Reaction from book publishers was warm.

"The government has taken an important step in recognizing that book publishing plays a major role in our cultural survival," said Peter Martin, head of Peter Martin Associates of Toronto.

W. H. Clarke of Clarke-Irwin Ltd., Toronto, said he is very pleased with the aid.

"I don't see this as the start of a perpetual subsidy. These measures, with those of the province of Ontario, make it possible to stimulate and create a Canadian body of literature."

Jacques Hebert of Montreal, president of Les Editions du Jour, said the program outlined by Mr. Pelletier is a start in elaborating a policy about publishing.

"These measures are just the beginning of a deeper concern for publishing, a recognition that it is not just a business but an instrument of culture."

Mr. Pelletier said in an interview after his speech that his department had received requests from 400-500 libraries so small they cannot buy books. "Now we will be able to do something to help them."

In his address, he said the measures were necessary "because Canadian publishing houses are finding it difficult to survive."

only one-third as much as Ontario's.

Richter indicated the industry already pays enough taxes without having to be subjected to royalties proposed by the NDP.

In other remarks, he said the federal government has granted 221 petroleum and natural exploration gas permits off the B.C. caost, covering more than 14.96 million acres.

This, despite federal Environment Minister Jack Davis's announcement Ottawa will withdraw an exploration permit issued to Petrotar Development Ltd. in waters south of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

DOUBLE CLAIM

Richter said all B.C. permits were suspended July 28, 1970. At the time, the government said it suspended the permits because holders were not paying fees to B.C.

They were paying fees only to the federal government. Both jurisdictions claim rights to offshore minerals.

Richter suggested Ottawa allows oil exploration and drilling to continue to a great degree in eastern Canada but talks tough on pollution control on the west coast.

"One law for eastern Canada and another law for the west. Despite the facts I have just quoted, the federal government would have the people of British Columbia believe that they are opposed to offshore exploration and drilling."

He said federal drilling policy is creating "two distinct classes of Canadian provinces."

Musician Plays Sorrowful Tune

Lack of opportunity and high costs are making it difficult for Canadian musicians to produce recordings of their own work, a local musician said today.

Peter Marks, 33, of 2346 Sooke Road, said the music industry is too concerned with making money, instead of encouraging more production by Canadian artists. He said he and his group, the Marksmen, have not been able to produce locally a recording of their work because it would have cost them too much.

He said he was finally able to produce one record by doing most of the work himself. The cost came to between $800 and $900, he said, for 500 copies of the record. He has not made money on the record's sales.

Marks said if he were to follow the established practice of producing a record through the regular commercial channels, the cost would be likely run to about $700.

The first step, he said, is to either write or buy an original composition, since recording a song that has already been recorded is much more expensive than an original.

Musicians must be hired, and must be paid at the going rate for members of the Musicians Union, even if the group is made up of friends or relatives. For four or five musicians, the cost would be a minimum of about $540.

OTHER COSTS

Studio costs, including sound mixing and printing a mastertape, can run well over $200, Marks said, and a recording company hasn't even been approached yet.

The usual case, he said, is that the companies say the product is "not quite good enough" but that they will cut 1,000 copies at a cost of 50 cents each, totalling $500.

Provided sales are good, the 1,000 copies may go at $1 each, yielding a net loss of about $200.

Marks and his men play about four or five nights a week at club engagements in Victoria. He says "we do pretty well," but that the group has to work hard just to stay busy.

Another part of the problem, he said, is that some radio stations will play a recording by a Canadian group and will not announce the name of the group over the air.

The radio and television stations, he said, will not produce local shows for Canadian artists because they say they cannot afford it.

NOT SHORT

"I seriously think that Canada should take a look, a strong look, at what is really happening to Canadian talent. Canada is not short on songwriters and good professional entertainers," Marks said.

"I also think that Canadian talent would be on its way up if the record companies, recording studios, musicians union, etc. look more towards the talent end of rather than the money end."

He said more Canadian recording companies are starting up as a result of the Canadian content regulations for radio and television. These companies, he said, are taking advantage of the situation for higher profits.

Workers Willing; CBC Wary

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking CBC technicians in Vancouver said Friday night they are ready to restore normal broadcast operations but that management is unwilling to compromise and continues its "lockout policy."

Management, however, claimed the union, a local of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, will not give the necessary assurance that walkouts would not interrupt program production if the technicians returned to work.

The union and the CBC issued brief statements clarifying their points of view about the strike, now in its fourth day.

QUEEN PICNICS AT RIVER BANK

AYUDHYA (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth went on a two-hour picnic pleasure cruise along the Chao Phya River through this ancient Thailand capital today.

Although the sun shone for the first time since her state visit began Thursday, the Queen was obviously less relaxed than during a visit to Bangkok University Friday.

High-powered police boats escorting the Queen's steamboat zoomed along the waterway as crowds on the banks cheered and beat drums. Officials blew whistles and shouted orders as they tried to bring order to the motley pursuing flotilla.

The steamer stopped near the bank for lunch as singing boatmen, women in green silk dresses with orange sashes or yellow with green sashes and men in blue or red, serenaded the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne.

Afterwards, the British royal party drove back to Bangkok, 45 miles away.

has spread to junior high and elementary school students.

Even with the increased use, scientists have found "little evidence that light to moderate use of cannabis (marijuana) has deleterious physical effects," the report stated.

Among the harmful effects from the heavy use of marijuana are a high frequency of bronchitis and asthma. But studies failed to find changes in the lung tissue of marijuana smokers that have been found in tobacco users.

In addition, studies have failed to turn up a higher incidence of abnormal chromosomes among marijuana users than the general population. But the government report warned women in the childbearing years against using any drug that has the potential of affecting chromosomes.

The report also found that marijuana, especially when smoked by inexperienced users, can cause minor depressions and panic reactions. It does not, however, trigger serious psychotic episodes in normal adults, although it can throw a borderline case over the edge.

Furthermore, studies in animals showed that it takes a gigantic dose of marijuana — up to 25 times greater than humans take — to kill.

The report stated that marijuana decreases pressure on the eye, "which may have therapeutic implications" in the treatment of glaucoma.

Rape Charge Remanded

A Saanich man was charged with rape in Victoria provincial court today and was remanded for 30 days to Riverview mental hospital for psychiatric examination.

David K. Henderson, 25, of 2594 Penrhyn, was accused of having unlawful sexual intercourse with a woman Tuesday.

Medical testimony in court today indicated Henderson suffers from schizophrenic tendencies.

He was remanded until March 10.

the weather

The occasional spot of snow occurred with rain early this morning at Vancouver and with the strong upper flow to continue, the disturbance will carry inland. A weak ridge of high pressure will build into the province for Sunday giving some sunshine to most areas.

Are you beginning to think this way about funerals?

☐ I think many people buying a funeral end up paying far more than originally planned, possibly because they are emotionally bewildered at the time.

☐ Money spent on elaborate funerals would be better spent among the living.

☐ I want my funeral, including cremation or burial, to cost under $300.

☐ I think embalming, for purposes of displaying the body, is an unnecessary indignity.

☐ I am repelled by putting a body on display with the face made up to look "natural".

☐ I favour a closed coffin, a private cremation or burial, with perhaps a memorial service after, for friends and relatives.

☐ I feel strongly enough about these matters that I would like to support an organization dedicated to promoting simpler, less costly, more dignified funeral practices.

☐ I would like to receive a simple plan which lets me record my wishes in privacy, so that they may be filed with a non-profit organization I know will carry out my wishes after death. This also saves my next-of-kin from making these difficult decisions under emotional stress.

If you feel this way you are not alone. Over 60,000 people now belong to the Memorial Society of B.C. If you move, your membership can be easily transferred to other societies throughout North America at little or no cost.
